Judge Samuel F. Hobbs, age 65, former Congressman from the 4th District and one of the State's most widely known political figure for many years, died in a local hospital at 10:50 Saturday, May 31, 1952.

News of his death came with shocking suddenness to the State and his native city, although his condition for some weeks past had given rise to concern.

Judge Hobbs returned to Selma on May 23 after a period of some two weeks in a Birmingham hospital where he was admitted for examination. Little apprehension was felt over his condition until he was re-admitted to a local hospital late Saturday following a sudden turn for the worse.

His return to private life and Selma took place in 1951 when impaired health forced him to retire as congressman of the Fourth District after a period of 16 years. In recent months he had formed with his two sons, the law firm of Hobbs, Hobbs and Hobbs, being active in this capacity until recent weeks.

Prior to his election to Congress on November 6, 1934, he had served as presiding judge of the Circuit Court in the Fourth District

A man of many distinguished attainments and a leader on many civic religious and other causes, Judge Hobbs was known to thousands of people in Alabama and wielded wide influence.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sarah Ellen Greene Hobbs; two sons, Sam Earl Hobbs of Selma, Ala., and Truman Hobbs of Montgomery, Ala.; one daughter, Mrs. John Joyce of Birmingham, Ala

Funeral services were held at the First Presbyterian Church at 4:30 p.m Monday.

INFERTILE EGGS KEEP BETTER

Since it is much easier to keep infertile eggs than fertile ones, get rid of all roosters unless hatching eggs are being produced.

To keep eggs from popping and sputtering when frying them, always add a sprinkle of flour into the fat before you put the eggs in.

Relief and speed of recovery depends on specific cause as some disorders respond faster than others due to amount of permanant damage to tissue cells.

Recovery, however, is generally very fast under chiropractic, as the full spine is examined and all nerve interference removed so normal body functions take place.

June And The Dairyman

By JOHN R. PARRISH

(Editor's Note: Each year during the month of June dairymen throughout the nation celebrate June Dairy Month. Through newspapers, radio, and special meetings dairymen will be telling the good word about milk—nature's most nearly perfect food. In an effort to acquaint you with the dairy industry outlook and plans for the observance of June Dairy Month we have asked John R. Parrish, A.P.I. Extension dairyman, to prepare the following article.)

DAIRYMEN in Alabama and the United States find themselves in a very favorable economical position for the next several years. The fact that there are fewer milk cows in the United States than there were last year plus a decided increase in population makes the demand for dairy products strong. In fact, the number of dairy cows in the United States has increased only 500,000 in the past 30 years—during that same period the increase in Alabama has been 10,000 milk cows. Most of Alabama's increase came last year.

The farmer selling manufactured milk in Alabama can look to a favorable market in the future. The fact is that we are producing only one-fifth of the total butterfat needed in the state and about one-seventh of the needed supply of solids not fat. These products are used for making ice cream, butter, condensed sweet milk, and milk powder.

Producers of manufactured milk have a large number of available markets which can use all possible production increases.

The demand and outlook, however, does not mean that dairymen in Alabama have been making a lot of money—in fact the past year has been the most difficult faced by dairymen in a long time. A shortage of feed, particularly hay and grain, and increased labor costs have the dairyman in a squeeze.

As the American people celebrate June Dairy Month they should be grateful to a loyal group of farmers who have continued to produce milk for a low return from their investment and labor. The dairy farmer knows that the products he is producing are nature's best—they are essential to the welfare of the nation.

Alabama dairymen are making progress toward more profitable dairying by following basic improvement practices. These might be listed as follows:

(1) Developing a feed-production program based on forage, that will provide an adequate feed supply for their herds. (2) Developing feeding and management practices that will assure the greatest utilization of feed for high milk production. (3) Developing programs to use their entire farms in efficient production of dairy products. (4) Using a breeding program based on the use of good sires which will assure high production cows for future herd replacements.

Youngsters Make Their Mark In Dairying

ALABAMA'S top junior dairymen came in for plenty of back-slapping at their recent annual banquet in Opelika. The youngsters were credited with doing their part to make dairying a more sound and profitable business in Alabama. About 90 boys and girls were on hand for the event.

A Familiar Scene In The Summertime

Looking Things Over—Gene Langley, a Randolph County 4-H Club member, gets a bird's eye view of the proceedings at a dairy day celebration on the farm of C. G. Marshall, near Wadley. Every month in the year is a dairy month for Gene, and he's getting a good start in the dairy business with his junior dairyman project. He borrowed money from a local bank to buy his first cow and is building up a herd of high producing cows. Gene is one of an ever growing number of 4-H Club boys and girls who are making the "old folks" sit up and take notice of their modern dairy production systems.

Do You Have The Facts?

MODERN scientific agriculture frequently means the difference between going broke and making a good living on the farm. While it may be possible to "get by" with old-fashioned methods, the prospects for getting ahead are slim. Keeping up with the changing methods, crop varieties, and cultural practices that make for profitable farming would be a full time job if it was necessary to read every agricultural report in order to get the facts. Fortunately, this isn't necessary. The fifth edition of the Handbook of Alabama Agriculture contains all of the latest information on a large variety of subjects ranging from agricultural economics to yellows (a disease of truck crops). This wealth of information is available in a 398-page paper bound book. You can get a copy by dropping by your county agent's office. The price is 75 cents which is used to cover printing costs.

TODAY AND YESTERDAY—That's the story told in these pictures of the John Lee home at Dancy. Actually yesterday was 12 years ago, when the Lees first moved into the big rambling home at the edge of town; the picture at right shows what the place looked like from the front. The family lived there for over 10 years with their four boys before they decided their Shorthorn cattle had made them enough money to make remodeling possible.

At first they thought of tearing down the old house and building a new one, but they decided against it and started to give the old home a new face and personality instead. What you see at left above is only the new face. Other changes throughout the house are just as obvious. The Lee's have sheet-rocked all of the inside walls, built new floors, added a bath, torn out a partition to make a bigger living room, added a dinette and remodeled the kitchen, made a cozy den from an old bedroom, taken out a central hall, and built a new staircase.

Now they are mighty proud of their home. And they are glad they retained the sentimental value of the home where they raised their four boys.

Plant Supplementary Grazing Crops For Extra Summer Feed

By D. R. HARBOR
A.P.I. Extension Agronomist

MANY an Alabama farmer had trouble in supplying enough feed for his livestock during the drought last summer and fall. That experience is not easy to forget. And, as a result, many farmers are doing some planning ahead in order to have enough grazing crops for use this summer when the clover-grass permanent pasture may not supply enough grazing.

It is always a sound practice to have enough supplementary summer grazing for use if the clover-grass permanent pasture, or other grazing crops used, do not furnish enough grazing due to hot, dry weather. If the supplementary summer crops are not needed for grazing, most any of them can be harvested for hay to be used during the winter when ample grazing may not be available. Too, most supplementary summer grazing crops fit well into rotations. This makes it possible to keep more land in use to increase income and protect and improve the soil.

We are fortunate in Alabama in that there are a large number of crops which we can use for supplementary summer grazing for most all kinds of livestock. Among the most important crops for this use are lespedeza sericea, kudzu, alfalfa, Johnson grass, Sudan grass, annual lespedeza, Pearl millet, and soybeans. All of these crops are readily grazed by both beef and dairy cattle. The legumes are much preferred by hogs and poultry. Sericea is not a good grazing crop for hogs or poultry.

In planning the amount of supplementary summer grazing crops needed, a rule of thumb is to plant about one-half acre per animal unit. An animal unit is one mature cow, one mature head of workstock, five hogs, eight sheep, or 100 head of poultry.

Your local county agent can supply you with information on which crops to grow and how to grow them for supplementary summer grazing.

PROFESSIONAL JOB—Mrs. J. R. Estes, center, of Letohatchee, Rt. 1, in Lowndes County, can turn out a professional job of upholstering almost any time. And when her furniture needs a face lifting the Sandy Ridge Home Demonstration Club member just scrapes up the necessary materials and goes to work. Almost every room in the Estes home shows the marks of her handiwork. Above two neighbors are admiring dinette chairs re-upholstered in plastic by Mrs. Evans. Shown are, left to right, Mrs. A. P. Reese, Mrs. Estes, and Mrs. J. A. Pringle.

Cooling And Holding Eggs

THE temperature inside a freshly laid egg is over 100 degrees. If it remains this warm for many hours, moisture and freshness are lost. Therefore, just as soon as eggs are gathered, place them in a cool, moist place where the body heat can be removed quickly.

Hold eggs in the wire baskets for about 12 hours before packing them in cases that have also been in a moist, cool room for at least 12 hours. If eggs are packed in hot, dry cases, moisture is drawn from them and their quality is lowered.

Moisture in the air in cellars, basements, and cave storerooms can be raised by keeping walls and floors wet.

After the eggs are properly cooled, hold them at a low temperature until marketed. The best temperature is between 35 and 40 degrees F. However, they can be held for a few days at 50 to 65 degrees with very little loss of quality.

Keep a high degree of humidity in the storage room to prevent too much evaporation. A refrigerated storage room is a good investment on a commercial egg farm.

Plastic bags that contain vegetables from the grocery store have a very definite use. They can be kept to store oily, dusty cloths in the storage closet.

Along the Way

P. O. DAVIS
DIRECTOR, A.P.I. EXTENSION SERVICE

THE call for more farm products—especially corn—grows. The nation needs more meat, milk, and eggs; the basis for all of these is corn.

One good way for Alabama farmers to increase their corn production this year is by using nitrogen as a side dressing. It's wise because the extra nitrogen increases production at a low cost per bushel.

Boll Weevil Time

It's about time for boll weevils and other insects to put in their appearance. We're certain that enough of them lived through the winter to play havoc with cotton unless control measures are applied.

Cotton sets a crop of squares and bolls in about four weeks. This being true, poison should be applied when plants are at the right size to fruit, and long enough thereafter to protect the bolls until they are beyond weevil damage.

Our entomologist, W. A. Ruffin, has made information available on this important subject, and county agents are advocating its use.

Preparing For The Future

The Ernest Cagle family of Collinsville, Ala., is an interesting family. I visited them with DeKalb County Agent John Pate.

The Cagles have two boys and two girls—Pat, Barbara, Bobby, and Frank. All of them are in high school. Two of them are 4-H Club members and two are in vocational work after years of 4-H experience. Their parents give them what they earn from their projects, which are beef calves this year.

And their parents pay them $1 a day for their work on the farm. Dairying is their main farm project, and they do much of the work.

They are saving money for future use. All of them want to go to college after high school graduation. But if they don't go to college they'll have money to get started in farming or in some other business.

Mr. Pate—before and after visting the Cagles—reminded me of the high importance of work for boys and girls as well as for adults. In the Cagles we saw a very happy, healthy, and wholesome family because they work together in a mutually helpful way.

Bankers Study Farm Financing

Alabama bankers held seven meetings in April at Headland, Camp Hill, Camden, Marion Junction, Winfield, Belle Mina, and Crossville to study farm finances.

They were seeking valid information as to how to do their part in providing money to farmers on a mutually sound basis.

All of us were impressed when we summarized facts about financing cattle production. We assumed, for example, that raw land has a value of $35 per acre. Three acres are needed to feed one cow.

The cost of clearing, plowing, harrowing, fertilizing, and seeding an acre was placed at $55. By adding $35 to $55 we got $90 as the per-acre cost of prepared grazing land.

This is $270 for three acres, or enough for one cow. Then we valued a cow at $200, added this to $270 which gave us $470 as the value of the average cow-land unit in Alabama.

No one can say these figures are entirely correct. I'm presenting them here to reveal the big amount of money involved in cattle farming, including land and its improvements to make good grazing. My belief is that $470 for a one-cow unit is too low. Perhaps another $100 should be added.

A New System that Works

Landlord Tenant Dairying In Lamar County

HOW does a tenant farmer go about getting a start in the dairy business? How does he get cows, feed, and equipment? If he has limited finances and no land, how can he become a dairyman?

One Lamar County tenant, Floyd Stanford, of Sulligent, Rt. 1, found the answer in a dairying agreement with his landlord, Miss Lela Ogden. And after 18 months of operation under this agreement, both tenant and landowner insist they are getting more profit from the farm than ever before.

Until the fall of 1950, Mr. Stanford had been farming on thirds and fourths. But, after 22 years as a tenant, Mr. Stanford had been able to accumulate very little savings.

Then when a milk route was started in the county he and Miss Ogden worked out a profit-sharing agreement for going into the dairy business. The landowner, Miss Ogden, bought five cows and a tractor to start with. Fence posts were cut on the farm and Stanford put up fences.

The landlord bought fertilizer and seed for pasture—the tenant prepared land and seeded the pasture crops.

Under the agreement, any cost of feed bought, veterinary fees, and other expenses are shared equally. The milk check and the calf crop is divided on a 50-50 basis.

However, the landlord still retains ownership of the dairy cattle. She buys the tenant's share of the calf crop when he is ready to sell. Usually Stanford keeps the calves until they are "springers," then sells them to Miss Ogden.

The original herd of five cows has been built up to eight milkers.

"The dairy is the most profitable part of the farm," says Stanford. "I made $800 net profit for my labor the first year. I also made 19 bales of cotton that year, but after paying expenses I only made a little more than $300 on the cotton crop."

Miss Ogden had more expenses, but still she netted more than $500 from the dairy enterprise the first year.

After this start, the Lamar County landlord and tenant are planning big things for the future. Present plans include a grade A barn with a milking herd of 40 cows.

"Good records have probably helped more than any one thing to make dairying profitable on this farm," says County Agent Tom McCabe. Mr. Stanford keeps accurate production records on each cow in the herd. Milk from each cow is weighed daily and individual cow records are kept. If a cow is not making a profit she is culled from the herd.

Many farmers in Lamar County have visited the Stanford-Ogden farm to see how the dairy program is handled. Then many of these farmers follow Mr. Stanford's management pattern in setting up a dairy program on their own farms.

PLANNING FUTURE PROGRAM—Floyd Stanford, at top center, calls on County Agent Tom McCabe, left, and Vocational Teacher S. J. Gibbs, right, to help him in planning future dairy operations.

BOOKKEEPING TIME—Floyd Stanford, Sulligent, Rt. 1, and Mrs. Stanford, shown above, check the individual record of a cow in the Stanford herd. They keep daily milking weight records on every cow in the herd.

Limestone Farmer Says Green Feed Will Fill The Milk Pail

OLAN LOONEY started at the bottom in the dairy business—with just one cow. But he's climbing fast.

In 1947, Looney, a resident of the Reed community, started dairying with one cow and one heifer. By 1951, he had built his herd up to seven cows, each of which produced an average of $200 worth of milk.

The Limestone County dairyman predicts that he'll top that record this year with the cows he is now milking. And he hopes to be milking at least 14 more cows before too long. He uses an electric milker to cut down on labor costs.

Looney is one farmer who has plenty of good green grazing and that's the secret of his success. He says plenty of green feed will keep the milk pails running over. His pastures include crimson clover, wheat, fescue, white clover, button clover, alfalfa, and sericea.

The only feed the dairyman has bought was a little protein meal—used to give his herd's milk production an extra lift.

CALHOUN'S COOKING CHAMP—Cooking with dairy products offers no problems for 15-year-old Marie Johnson, of the Williams 4-H Club, because she's been practicing for five years. A club member for seven years, Marie has specialized in dairy production as well as the cooking end of the dairy business. She has also completed a number of projects in sewing, poultry, gardening, and personal grooming. Marie was recently named winner in the Annual Calhoun County Dairy Foods contest and will compete for more dairy foods honors at the State 4-H Club Camp in Auburn, July 7-12. Marie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Johnson, of Piedmont, Rt. 1.

Will Boll Weevils Steal Your Cotton Cash?

By W. A. RUFFIN

(Editor's Note: Around this time each year farmers begin thinking about boll weevils—the pests that so frequently rob cotton producers of profits they have worked for all year. In order to bring farmers up-to-date on this important problem we have asked W. A. Ruffin, A.P.I. Extension Service entomologist, to give us the outlook as it appears to him.)

THE boll weevil situation in Alabama, at the present time, would appear to be about the same as it is in any normal year.

Because of an extreme dry summer in 1951 following a very cold winter, the number of weevils was greatly reduced in this state. Trash examinations made by the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine in Louisiana and South Carolina showed that the lowest number of weevils went into winter quarters last year that has been found at any time during the past ten years. However, trash examinations made this spring show that from 25 per cent to better than 40 per cent of these weevils survived the winter and will appear in cotton fields this spring and summer.

Ideal weather conditions—cloudy, moist weather—during June and July will help this low number of weevils build up to damaging numbers early enough to cause serious damage in Central and South Alabama and probably economic damage in the northern part of the state during the growing season. Farmers should prepare to combat the weevils by securing a reasonable amount of poison and having dusting or spraying equipment available for applying poison if and when weevils appear in damaging numbers in their cotton fields.

The supply of cotton insecticides at the present time is abundant. The cost is the lowest it has been since the discovery and common use of the organic insecticides. The materials that we would recommend to most farmers are the 3-5 mixture of BHC-DDT, 20 per cent toxaphene, or calcium arsenate alternated with BHC-DDT. Other materials that will give good control of the boll weevil and the bollworm, if used properly, are the 2.5-5 per cent mixture of aldrin and DDT, 1.5-5 per cent dieldrin-DDT, or 2.5-5 per cent heptachlor-DDT. These latter mixtures will not prevent a build-up of lice or aphids; therefore, we do not recommend them as highly as we do BHC-DDT or the toxaphene.

After many years of research work by workers at the A.P.I. Experiment Station, there is no experimental evidence available which shows that early treatment of cotton before insects appear in damaging numbers is a profitable practice.

For the control of boll weevils, farmers should wait until cotton is fruiting freely and about 25 per cent of the squares are being punctured. Every field should be examined weekly to determine the weevil infestation. When 25 per cent infestation occurs, treatments should be started, and poison should be applied every five days until three or more applications have been put on. Continue poisoning through July and early August and, if possible, keep the infestation below 50 per cent. When migration starts, poison cotton every three or four days until the top crop of bolls are at least three weeks old. Under Alabama conditions this is the procedure that has given best control for the least amount of money.

Side-dress cotton at first plowing after chopping. If 500 to 600 pounds of 4-10-7 were put under cotton, side-dress with 150 to 200 pounds of nitrate of soda or 75 to 100 pounds of ammonium nitrate or equal nitrogent from other sources.

IMPROVED TIMBER STAND—L. L. Blair, left, of Talladega, Rt. 3, and Clay County Agent Houston Cowan look over a stand of young pine trees on Blair's farm. "This land, once tilled by slave labor, will be used for timber production from now on," says Mr. Blair. He's removed the hardwood trees and poor quality pine trees that would never make good saw logs. Keeping fire out of the woods and maintaining a good timber management system will be used to make this hilly land a profitable portion of the farming unit.

A Blind Man's Future - - Making Nylon Corsages

THE man's fingers expertly shaped each small piece of wire and fitted the sheer fabric into place as he talked. "I'm not so good at this," he said. "I only learned how today, but maybe I'll get the hang of it pretty soon."

However, when he finished the article no one but an expert could tell that it was the work of an amateur. Each petal of the flower looked as if Mother Nature had placed it there.

Alcus Kilpatrick had just made a corsage from nylon hosiery. He did a beautiful job of it, too. Yet, although his fingers may fondle the petals of the flower, he will never see the results of his handiwork.

You see, Alcus Kilpatrick has been blind for a quarter of a century.

At 19 years of age Mr. Kilpatrick was blinded by a shotgun blast. "I got 250 shot from the waist up," he says. "At first, I thought I might regain my sight, but this idea was finally given up. I had to make up my mind that I would be totally blind for the rest of my life."

Now, at 44 years of age, Mr. Kilpatrick is mainly interested in one thing—supporting his wife and three children. "I have tried selling brooms, candy, chewing gum, and a host of other things," he says, "but none of these jobs worked out too well."

Now he is training under the vocational rehabilitation program, and through this he is learning to be self-sufficient. With the help of his adviser, Mrs. Florence H. Brooks, of Mobile, home teacher in South Alabama for vocational rehabilitation, Mr. Kilpatrick and dozens of other handicapped persons in the area are learning useful trades to help them become self-supporting.

Many of the handicapped persons are making hand-painted neckties, others make purses from plastic, and still others are making various and sundry handicraft items.

Through orders from friends and satisfied customers Alcus Kilpatrick is building up a business of making and selling nylon flowers. At his home in Andalusia he is making the corsages and selling them at $1 each.

In his new-found talent, Alcus Kilpatrick is building his future—and the future of his family.

Fertilizing the farm pond during June is important because of two reasons: (1) fish production is increased by the fertilizer materials and (2) the growth of underwater weeds is prevented. Ponds that are infested heavily with underwater weeds should not be fertilized because the weeds take up the fertilizer materials. Control measures will be necessary to remove the weeds.

Prevent Off-Flavors In Milk

FOR the farmer with a family milk cow or the dairyman with a herd of cows, one problem that keeps popping up is the presence of off-flavors in milk. Listed below are four ways of preventing off-flavors.

1. Take cows off pastures several hours before milking.
2. Keep barns clean and well ventilated.
3. Cool milk promptly over an aerator, or stir milk in cans.
4. Pasteurize milk before selling it.

Worn Hill Land Makes Come Back As Timber-Pasture Farm

LAND worn thin by continuous cotton farming during the days of slave labor is coming back into production on the farm of L. L. Blair, of Talladega, Rt. 3.

The soil on this Clay County farm was fairly mined of its fertility by the time the slaves were freed. And after the war, the land was abandoned and allowed to grow up in trees.

Around the turn of the century the timber was clean cut and in 1925 and again in 1945 all of the marketable timber was removed. But that's all past history on the Blair farm. The land once tilled by slave labor is coming back into production as pasture and selectively cut woodland.

Behind this scheme of better management lies some careful planning. Although there was very little saw timber left after the last big cutting in 1945, Mr. Blair had hopes of getting the land most suitable for pasture cleared up by selling the hardwood trees for fuel wood. Neighbors in the community obliged by coming in with their saws and axes and the future pasture was soon cleaned up. Then the beef cattleman went to work with a tractor and breaking equipment and prepared and planted 15 acres of pasture for his livestock.

County Agent Houston Cowan says the most important by-product of the clearing operation was a pile of 650 pine fence posts saved from thinning operations on part of the land which had a heavy stand of young pines. These posts, when sufficiently cured, will be treated and used to build new and repair existing fences.

Besides his new pasture land Blair now has a good sized area with a good stand of thrifty, growing pines. He plans to selectively cut this area as the trees mature—and his cattle are doing a good job of cutting down the clover and grass on his new pasture.

Farmer Blair believes that beef cattle and well managed timberland make the right combination for the rolling hills of his typical Clay County farm. The green pastured valleys and pine covered hillsides of his farm seem to prove his point.

(5) Following the best known sanitation practices in producing the highest quality of milk which is properly processed by our modern milk plants and delivered to your store or door.

We are grateful to the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce and to our own State Junior Chamber of Commerce for their interest in the behalf of the dairy farmer in sponsoring June Dairy Month. In cooperation with this fine organization, civic, business, professional and other groups will learn the importance of milk in the diet during the June campaign.

The program for June Dairy Month is headed this year by Robert Brown, of Opelika, and working with him is Assistant County Agent Robert Horn, of LaFayette, who is the agricultural chairman of the State Junior Chamber of Commerce. With these men and under the leadership of area chairmen, we look forward to an active program on dairying in every county in Alabama during the month of June.

Area chairmen for June Dairy Month are as follows:

Farm Living Daviston Community Style

Center—The long row of picnic tables shown here were heaped high with almost every kind of food for the visitors to Daviston Community. And the crowd of 500 had all the food they could eat with plenty to spare.

Right—Joe B. Thompson, left, tells a group of visitors how Daviston farmers are combining good grazing with good dairy and beef cattle to make farming in the community most profitable. Looking over Thompson's clover pasture are, left to right, F. N. Farrington, Tallapoosa County agent; Mrs. Byrant Sturdivant, Big Springs, Ga.; Director P. O. Davis, of the A.P.I. Extension Service, Auburn; Mrs. Tommy East, Big Springs; Frank Kirven, Columbus, Ga., and A. T. East, Big Springs, Ga.

IN PORK CONTEST—Bill Raines, 16, of Evergreen, Rt. 1, has a good start on his sow and litter project. He is one of several 4-H boys in South Alabama who are growing out an entire litter of pigs on a well-planned feeding and management program. Bill's feeding program for the litter of 10 pigs includes ryegrass, white Dutch clover, crimson clover, and two acres of hybrid corn. He will keep accurate records on the cost of growing out his shotes, and this fall they will be shown in Monroeville against litters grown by other 4-H'ers in South Alabama. Bill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe P. Raines, of Lyeffion.

Changing Livestock Numbers

WHILE most everyone in Alabama has heard much about the apparent increase in the number of livestock on farms in the state, few people actually realize the great strides that have been made.

According to the latest figures released by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Alabama ranked third among states with increased numbers of cattle and calves on farms during the period of 1949 to 1952. The national increase during this period was 14.6 per cent and Alabama's increase was 30.6 per cent. Florida ranked first with a 33.0 per cent increase and Arkansas was second with 30.7 per cent increase.

For the same period there was a reduction of milk cows on farms in the U. S. But in Alabama the number of dairy cows increased 8.3 per cent, second only to Louisiana with a 9.0 per cent increase.

The number of beef cows on farms in the U. S. was up 29.5 per cent during the 1949 to '52 period. Here again Alabama was near the top with an increase of 53.6 per cent.

The presence of growing herds of cattle on farms in every part of the state points up the rapid pace of livestock production in the state. The steadily improving quality of cattle passing through the markets shows a good sign that quality is improving as well.

Chattahoochee Valley's Top Community

Daviston Community Club Holds "Open House"

DINNER on the grounds and a tour of the Chattahoochee Valley's most up and coming community was the bill of fare for some 500 Alabama and Georgia farmers who attended the recent Daviston Community Club's "Open House."

The people of this Tallapoosa Community entertained farm folks from some 20 counties at their special celebration.

The visitors came to see the community that had won first place in the 1951 Chattahoochee Valley Community Improvement Contest. And they saw a closely knit group of 34 farm families that are literally moving mountains to make their area the most prosperous in the country.

The visitors got an eyeful. They saw rolling hills of the Piedmont blazing with a fiery carpet of crimson clover, cool green valleys dotted with sleek beef cattle and production bred dairy cattle, and waving fields of winter grown grain sparkling with the promise of a big harvest.

But this was only part of the picture. Visiting the homes of the Daviston Club members, the group saw well kept lawns, freshly painted, remodeled, and completely convenient homes with pantries chock-full of home grown foods of every description.

How did all of this happen? Well, the folks of Daviston are quick to tell you that it came through careful planning, hard work, and close cooperation.

The two remodeled churches and the refurnished community center are examples of this community's spirit. Working together, Daviston farmers are making scientific farming a habit, not just a practice. Dairying supplies the main source of income with assists from beef and hog production. And all of these are backed by a sound and practical system of growing the right kinds of grazing, grain, and row crops.

The Chattahoochee Valley Community Improvement Contest embraces some 22 Alabama and Georgia counties. It is sponsored by the Farmer's Club of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and the Extension Services of Alabama and Georgia.

The Daviston Club received a $600 first prize in the contest which saw 88 communities working for top money. They are using their prize money to further improve their churches and community clubhouse.

Alfalfa is a good hay and grazing crop that is being seriously overlooked in Alabama. The hog grower, the dairyman, and the cattleman need this crop. There are some farms and certain soils not suited for the crop; but thousands of farmers could make money by growing some alfalfa. We can afford to grow alfalfa if we hold our stand only two or three years. June is the month to break the land where alfalfa is to be seeded. It should be fallowed until planting time in August or early September.

Because of the rush to get row crops planted on time, many farmers neglected to repair broken and weak terraces and put outlets in good condition. These jobs should be done before the July rains set in.

EGG prices for the next few months will be at their peak for the year. For this reason it is important to get the greatest possible number of eggs from the flock during this period. The program outlined below may help you get more eggs and more nickles from your flock.

Early hatched pullets. They will soon be ready for the laying house, which means that the old hens must be moved out. Instead of selling these yearling hens, move them to a temporary shelter to finish their laying year. Use a summer laying shelter, range shelter, or merely some natural shade trees or artificial shade fenced in and provided with roosts, feeders, waterers, nests, and lights. By managing these hens carefully it will be possible to keep the old hens in production until cold weather, which will give you production from two flocks of hens during the latter part of July, August, September, October, and part of November.

Use lights. To get more production from the old hens and delay their annual molt, start morning lights on the hens in late June or early July when they show signs of a slump in production. Use one 40-watt bulb for each 40 to 50 hens. Turn the lights on in the morning about one hour before daylight. Increase the lighting period 30 minutes every two or three weeks until the hens are moved from the laying house to the temporary shelters. Then start all-night lights. Use one 15-watt bulb for each 40 to 50 hens and suspend the light so that it will shine on the roosting and feeding areas. Three to four weeks later, replace the 15-watt bulbs with 25's, then later with 40-watt, and then 60-watt bulbs as fall progresses and more stimulation is needed.

Careful culling. Cull the flock rigidly and sell all birds as they molt and go out of production. Handling the old hens in this manner will increase the number of eggs produced during the last six months of the year. Don't make the mistake of leaving the hens in the house when it is needed by the pullets and don't keep the hens after they start molting and stop laying.

For information on managing the pullet flock ask your county agent for Extension Circular No. 424, "More Profit from Your Pullet Laying Flock."

Dates For District Dairy Shows

LISTED below are dates for 1952 dairy shows. Added to the list this year is a new show to be held at Bessemer. Under the leadership of the Bessemer Chamber of Commerce, this event shows promise of becoming one of the best dairy shows in the state.

Dairy dates are as follows:

Gadsden, Sept. 3-4; Decatur, Sept. 5; Fayette, Sept. 10-11; Dadeville, Sept. 11-12; Bessemer, Sept. 12-13; Montgomery, Sept. 16-17; Mobile, Sept. 18-19, and Demopolis, Sept. 22-26 (tentative).

This Month on the Farm

by API EXTENSION SPECIALISTS

THIS month timber owners should be on the lookout for bugs working in ice-damaged or burned trees. Bugs like weakened trees and will often complete the job of killing them before they have a chance to recover. Infested trees should be removed and sold or worked up for wood.

NOW is the time to practically eliminate mosquitoes, horn flies, lice, and ticks in Alabama. Plan to spray beef cattle and outbuildings. Spraying is now more important than ever before because there are Texas fever ticks in Florida, and we are trucking many cattle from Florida in to Alabama.

BEEF calves born in early September should be sold this month before they lose their milk bloom and in order that their dams may have a ninety-day rest period.

MILLIONS of dollars are spent every year for vitamin pills for people. Pigs need, and must have, vitamins the same as people, if fast economical gains and growth are to be made. Fortunately, we don't have to feed vitamin pills to pigs. They can get many needed vitamins from grazing tender, juicy, legume grazing. One experiment station test showed that one acre of good alfalfa provided vitamins for pigs that would cost $800 purchased in pill form at the drug store. This month—and every month—it's timely to make full use of good grazing for pigs.

SPRING litters of pigs, started properly, will be well on the way to making bigger profits when they go to expected stronger markets in late summer or early fall. It will pay to use care and judgment in carrying them from the pig to the shote stage. A good calendar to follow is to castrate boar pigs at six weeks, wean the litter at eight weeks, vaccinate at ten, and treat for internal and external parasites at twelve weeks of age. Don't "throw the book" at them and shock them out of several weeks' growth by doing all these things at one time.

CULTIVATING machinery that has been in storage should be checked before time to go into the field. Replace any parts taken off in storage or in need of repair. Tighten all bolts and nuts, and be sure all safety guards are in place. Grease all moving parts thoroughly, and be sure they work freely.

CONSIDERABLE interest has been shown recently in silo construction. The latest information available is Farmers Bulletin No. 1820, "Silos, Types, and Construction," revised 1948. This bulletin discusses different types silos in detail from the foundation up.

EARLY blight, late blight, and other diseases of tomatoes often reduce yields, lower the quality or even cause a complete failure of the tomato crop. Late blight is probably the most serious when it is present. This disease is worse in damp, cool weather and once it has started in a field is hard to control. The best plan is to start dusting or spraying before the disease appears and repeat the application every week or ten days as the weather and other conditions require.

Knock-Out Drops

Control Broadleaf Weeds In Corn

By V. S. SEARCY, Assistant Agronomist
A.P.I. Agricultural Experiment Station

MOST broadleaf weeds can be controlled in corn after lay-by time by spraying with one to two pounds of 2,4-D per acre.

Weeds that come up in corn after the last cultivation are important because they compete with the corn for fertilizer and moisture, and make harvesting more difficult. Large weeds are particularly important where a mechanical picker is used.

For the past three years, cocklebur, coffee weeds, pig weeds, pusley, and morning glory have been satisfactorily controlled with 2,4-D on approximately 200 acres at the Plant Breeding Unit at Tallassee. The cost of the 2,4-D for controlling these weeds was $1.50 to $2.00 per acre.

One to one and one-half pounds of the amine form of 2,4-D (acid equivalent, shown on the label) has given adequate weed control in most instances. Where coffee weeds are allowed to get 12 or more inches high, two pounds of 2,4-D per acre may be required for control. The amine form of 2,4-D is preferred because it is non-volatile. The total amount of carrier (water) needed to cover an acre is not important as long as enough is used to give uniform coverage.

Where corn is too tall for a conventional tractor to get over, a high-clearance sprayer is very desirable for applying the 2,4-D. This is particularly true where a large acreage is to be treated. However, equal results may be obtained with a hand sprayer. It is recommended that the nozzles be adjusted so that the 2,4-D will not be sprayed on the silks or tassels of the corn.

Extreme care should be exercised in the use of 2,4-D because of its toxicity to many plants such as cotton, vegetables, and ornamental crops. Don't spray 2,4-D on windy days if the area to be sprayed is near a susceptible crop and the wind is blowing toward that crop. Any spray equipment used for applying 2,4-D should not be used to apply insecticides or fungicides to plants. 2,4-D is considered as a non-poisonous chemical to warm blooded animals. However, large quantities of the concentrate should not be swallowed.

MIRACLE-MAKER—Mrs. W. P. Lamar, of Springville, Rt. 1, doesn't claim to be a magician, but the way she turns old furniture into sparkling pieces that look like new almost comes under the heading of magic. The Pleasant Hill Home Demonstration Club member explains away her magical performances with just one word—work. She says it took all of her spare time for three weeks to turn an old four-poster bed into a modern piece of furniture. The St. Clair County magic maker also made matching bed tables out of the pieces of an old vanity, reworked an old chest of drawers, and made a modern-type vanity out of the discarded remnants of the other furniture.

FUTURE POULTRYMEN—Erskine and Charles Norton are looking forward to the time when they can take a big hand in Cleburne County's broiler business. They already know their way around the poultry houses and they like the chickens. Above, the boys are showing off two fine birds to their dad, Lewis Norton, left, and County Agent T. A. Ventress.

NEW PRODUCER—Woodson Lee, of Heflin, is shown at right above feeding his first flock of broilers. Mr. Lee built and equipped his house for $3,100. He and his 11-year-old son, Ray, are growing out the birds.

MARKET FOR HOME GRAIN—The broiler business in Cleburne County is also furnishing a market for surplus home-grown grain. Compost from broiler houses has skyrocketed corn yields, but the local grain supply is not adequate. Bob Butler, left, and Alvin Butler are shown at right looking over some Cleburne County corn at the feed mill.

Rapid Progress In Three Years

Poultry Production Is Big Business In Cleburne

THE poultry business is growing up in Cleburne County.

Three years ago broiler growing was almost an unknown industry—today it ranks second among farm industries in the county.

Production was almost nothing in 1949; in 1950 the total number of broilers produced jumped to one million birds; and in 1951 total production more than doubled. The gross income from the 1951 broiler crop was almost equal to that of the cotton crop.

Last year broilers accounted for approximately $1,750,000 in farm income. County Agent Tom Ventress says that the 1952 figure is expected to reach $2,500,000. Production this year is expected to pass three and one-half million birds.

"More than 200 farmers are producing broilers on a commercial scale now," says Ventress, "and more houses are being built almost every day."

Growers like Woodson Lee of Heflin are helping to build up the total production in a hurry. Mr. Lee is growing his first brood—7,500 broilers—in a new house. He and his 11-year-old son, Ray, get up at five o'clock every morning and feed the birds before breakfast. During his noon hour Mr. Lee feeds again, then after school Ray does the final feeding.

The 7,500-bird capacity house was built, equipped, and ready for the chicks for a total of $3,100, says Lee.

Lewis Norton, a producer of Heflin, Rt. 4, has been in the business for 18 months. He began on the guarantee plan—the buyer furnishes chicks, feed, medicine, and other necessities and guarantees the producer a profit of five cents per broiler for his labor and equipment. However, Mr. Norton is now growing broilers on his own.

He is also producing hatching eggs from a flock of 2,500 layers. His annual production of broilers is about 40,000 birds. "Growing broilers and keeping laying hens too is contrary to all good poultry growing rules," says Ventress, "but Mr. Norton watches his management details carefully and he is proving successful with both broilers and layers."

In the Ranburne area broilers are fast becoming the No. 1 industry. And helping to push the expansion along are Bob and Alvin Butler. They own and operate the Butler Feed Mill, give limited help in financing new producers, and assist farmers in marketing their broilers.

"We are furnishing 31 growers now with feed and other necessities," says Alvin Butler. The Butler Feed Mill mixes all kinds of livestock feeds, but broiler rations make up about 95 per cent of their output. The poultry feed is made up of home-grown grain, when available, and a high protein supplement.

Alvin and Bob Butler help farmers in marketing their broilers as a community service—no charge is made to the farmer.

As to the future of broilers in Cleburne County, the picture looks very good. "Broiler growing has proved to be the answer to bigger returns for land and labor," points out Mr. Ventress. "Row-crop farmers, small farmers, landowners, and tenants are finding profits in poultry production."

To many of them, broilers are providing the answer to their problems—and they're going to stick with the broiler business.

Dairy products are among the very few things that farmers sell that have been higher this spring than last. Demand for dairy products continues strong. With the decreasing number of dairy cattle on farms during the last 10 years dairying will probably be a profitable and attractive business for years to come. If you have a good dairy business now, stay with it. If you have a farm and market situation adapted to it, you might consider getting into dairying.

Food Dealers Go To School

Produce handlers who attend Retail Food Merchants' Schools conducted by county agents are finding that there is an art to the job of preparing and displaying their products. And at the same time they are learning a number of ways to cut the usual losses from spoilage. Austin Ezzell, A.P.I. Extension distributor marketing specialist, says the main idea behind the retail food merchants' schools is to assist the produce handlers in the merchandising of their fresh vegetables and other produce. "By cutting down on the waste and usual losses from other causes, the storekeeper and farmer who grows the crops will both benefit," he adds. Shown above in a school conducted by Lee County Agent Jack Taylor are, left to right, Bill Wallace, Columbus, Ga.; M. E. Parker, W. J. Plott, and Lonnie Harper, retail food merchants, Opelika; Elmer Lazenby, president Opelika Chamber of Commerce; G. B. Ballard, J. P. Ennis, and J. W. Brooks, Opelika; County Agent Taylor, Opelika; Lucille Sauls, Auburn, and Jerry Hilliard, kneeling center, Opelika.

High Quality Produce Required For Canned And Frozen Vegetables

By HUBERT HARRIS, Associate Horticulturist
A.P.I. Agricultural Experiment Station

GOOD quality fresh produce is highly essential in producing a high quality frozen or canned vegetable product.

It is doubtful that the essential qualities present in fresh vegetables can be improved during processing. Usually, the best that can be done is to retain the qualities already present.

Variety is one of the first and most important factors affecting quality of fresh vegetables. Although varieties differ considerably in their suitability for canning or freezing, those recommended for fresh use are usually satisfactory for freezing and canning. Local county agents or other specialists should be consulted for specific recommendations as to varieties to be grown.

Maturity Important In Yields And Quality

The degree of maturity at which vegetables are harvested is very important. Both quality and yields are lowered by harvesting when undermature, and quality is greatly lowered by overmaturity. Usually, the period of optimum maturity is quite short.

In canning tests by the Experiment Station, at Auburn, snap beans, which tend to develop strings as the pods get older, were found to be free of strings and high in quality if picked before the seed exceeded three-eighths inch in length. Picking every two or three days was necessary in order to obtain the beans in this stage. Lima beans were at best maturity when in the green-mature stage. At this stage the beans are almost full size and a few of the older ones are beginning to turn white.

Sweet corn should be harvested when the kernels are in the late milk stage. Tomatoes should be fully ripe but not overripe. Ripe tomatoes will have better color and quality and the skin will slip more readily when scalded than partially ripe tomatoes. Tomatoes that ripen during very hot weather usually do not have as good color as those that ripen during cooler weather.

Prompt Handling Essential With Some Vegetables

Many vegetables, such as sweet corn, asparagus, snap beans, lima beans, peas, okra, and others, deteriorate in quality at a rapid rate after harvesting. This deterioration is caused by the action of enzymes. It is more pronounced during very warm weather, especially if the product is held in storage without chilling to remove the field heat. In some cases, night harvesting is practiced as a means of reducing the amount of deterioration from field heat. In any case, it is better that the vegetables be processed promptly after harvesting. If delay is unavoidable, the rate of deterioration of quality can be slowed down considerably by holding the vegetables in cold storage.

These suggestions pertaining to variety, maturity, and rate of handling do not, by any means, cover all factors affecting quality of fresh vegetables. Good soil, correct cultural practices, and adequate pest control are additional factors that should receive careful attention if top-quality vegetables are to be available for processing.

Coastal Bermuda is one of our most promising new pasture and hay crops, especially for the Coastal Plain area. Thousands of stolons have been set this year in Alabama. If you have set this grass, it is important to cultivate some to control weeds and grass, but without disturbing the runners. By all means, use lots of nitrogen for top dressing. Coastal Bermuda is a great grass, but it requires good management for good results.

Research Results

in brief from A.P.I. AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION

EXCELLENT JELLIES AND JAMS have been made from Boysen and Young blackberries in tests at Auburn. The berries were sorted, washed, and boiled very slowly for about five minutes without adding water. They were then pressed through a cloth for making jelly or run through a sieve for making jam. One and one-half cups of sugar were used for each cup of juice or pulp. Addition of a small amount of pectin increased firmness. The product was finished to the jelling point by boiling rapidly in a shallow pan.

PROFITABLE CONTROL OF LEAF-HOPPER and leaf-feeding worms on peanuts has resulted from applications of 2.5 per cent DDT or 10 per cent toxaphene in experiments by the Experiment Station. For best results, the insecticide should be a mixture containing 3.4 per cent copper and at least 65 per cent sulphur for control of both insects and diseases. Four applications should be made at 10-day intervals, timed so that the last application is made about 30 days before harvest.

BUTT TREATMENT OF FENCE POSTS is hardly worth the trouble in Alabama, but is all right in dry climates. Pine posts given adequate treatment to a point well above the ground line failed because of rot in the top untreated portion. Their life in service was only two or three years longer than that of untreated posts.

A BERMUDA GRASS-RESEEDING CRIMSON CLOVER PASTURE was subsoiled in late July, 1951. The subsoiler penetrated about 18 inches into the ground and was used in rows about 18 inches apart. Under irrigation at the rate of one-half acre-inch per hour there was less run-off water on the subsoiled area than on the area (slope, 8 to 10 per cent) that was not subsoiled. However, the subsoiling operation left the ground surface rough, which interfered with mowing. In the winter of 1951-52, the reseeding crimson clover stand was more uniform on the area that was not subsoiled.

CORN EAR WORM IN SWEET CORN was effectively controlled with sprays in experiments conducted at the Gulf Coast Substation in 1951. Over 90 per cent worm-free ears were consistently obtained from four applications of spray made at 3-day intervals beginning when 10 per cent of the stalks were showing silk. Each application of spray contained two pounds DDT and one and one-half gallons of mineral oil per acre. Twenty-five gallons of spray were applied per acre at 125 pounds pressure with four nozzles per row.

IRRIGATION HAS INCREASED VEGETABLE YIELDS an average of 28 per cent in tests with 16 different crops extending over an 11-year period. Each crop was grown an average of three and one-half years. The average increase in gross value was $79 for a single crop or twice this amount when two crops were grown on the same land in one year. Yield increases ranged from 100 to 500 per cent 10 times, and from 10 to 100 per cent 23 times. Yields were not affected 13 times and were reduced nine times. Highest increases were obtained in the fall, spring next, and summer last.

FOLKS and THINGS ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Congratulations to Dave Tingle—Democratic nominee for the Office of Probate Judge of Chilton County. We're going to be honest and say we didn't think he could do it. But the fact remains he did. And we wish further to say that we will do our utmost to see that Mr. Tingle makes a repeat performance in November—only by a much larger margin.

These lovely smooth streets they are laying through Clanton this week are quite an improvement. The work is being done by the State Highway Department through cooperation of the City Council.

Mr. J. C. Pattillo was the first candidate, defeated or otherwise, who visited the News Office Wednesday morning after the election. He was in very good spirits and gave us to understand right off that he was no poor loser. Mr. Pattillo has been in the Circuit Clerk's office for the past 18 years and has made thousands of friends throughout the county and central Alabama. Having become a fixture at the courthouse he will be missed by the regular callers at the courthouse.

Had an exciting drama enacted in Clanton last week. Two ex-convicts and bank robbers were our guests and gave the local authorities and others quite a day. James Counts, who is 31 years old and comes from Henrietta, Oklahoma, and Melvin Westfall, age 22, who hails from Terrill, Oklahoma, stopped in Clanton with the FBI, the Sheriff, the Highway Patrol and the local Police all hot on their trail. Erle Ellis recognized them at his Tourist Court and notified the officers that he would detain them, which he did. However, the law men went to the tourist court with the wrong discription of the automobile they were driving and didn't recognize them even though they saw them there and talked to them. Of course just as soon as the officers turned away the desperadoes were gone and were next located at Birmingham where the officers lost their trail. Late that night the ex-convicts were picked up at Corinth, Mississippi, and were promptly put under such heavy bond that they will be out of circulation until their trial comes up. They are wanted in a number of cities over the U.S.A. and for a number of crimes it is reported. Ordinarily Clanton is a most hospitable little city, but for our part, gentlemen of the above variety can seek shelter elsewhere and it will not hurt our feelings in the least.

Local businessmen are cooperating with Marvin Marcus on the decorating of Clanton for the peach Festival. He tells us that practically all the business houses are buying the flags and banners and having their store fronts decorated for the gala occasion. The trouble is that Marvin is having to make these flags on order and if you want to get your store decorated you had better act now and not wait until he has started making the floats as it will be too late. He says he will not have any in stock as he invested heavily to make the flags and will just be able to make the number that is ordered.

There's an article and a quarter page advertisement in this issue of the News regarding the financial condition of the City of Clanton. It's a stomp-down good financial report for any city or town and does credit to the City Fathers who have been administering our city business. We congratulate them heartily on this fine report.

There's a mighty lot of talk about U. S. 31 being changed. That is, to run it around the business section of Clanton instead of down the main street. Most of what you've heard is gossip, that's for sure. It will be a good long time before anything is changed, but we can all put this down in our little books: As we have stated before, eventually it will be changed. When a four-lane highway is constructed from Birmingham to Montgomery it can't possibly run through Clanton. We do hope the powers that be at Montgomery, will keep it within a few short blocks of our business district though.

Haven't passed on a word from J. E. Easterling, our jovial cafe owner, in a long time, but he told us one this morning that we must repeat. He had had some teeth pulled in the front of his mouth which makes him snaggled tooth and his little granddaughter the other day said: "Granddad, aren't you cutting some teeth?"

The soldier was crabbing at the mess sergeant about the stale bread he was eating and the sergeant was telling him that soldiers just like to bellyache. "Napoleon would have been glad to get the bread for his men when he was crossing the Alps," stated the Sergeant. "Yep," replied the soldier, "but then it was fresh."

When the fellow told the farmer he got up at day break to see the sunrise, the farmer answered: "Son, you couldn't have picked a better time."

Notes From County Health Officer

Before your child can enter school this year it is required by law that they have a certificate showing that they have been protected against diphtheria, tetanus (lock jaw), whooping cough and smallpox, also have with them a birth certificate. Eight weeks time is required for the completion of these shots. The complete course can be completed by making three visits either to your private physician, or your County Health Office.

For your convenience there will be a nurse at your County Health Office from 8 to 12 and 1 to 4 every Thursday and from 8 a.m. till 12 noon on Saturday. Now do not delay checking to see if your children have been fully protected. When the shots have been completed a certificate will be given showing that the child is ready to enter school. Should your private physician give the shots have him give you a certificate.

Your County Health Officer is happy to announce that your Probate Judge and Board of Commissioners have made it possible for him to employ two nurses for Chilton County. We now have Miss Carolyn Montgomery, whom you all know and love, and Mrs. Carrie Mae Woods, whom you only need to know to love, to serve the people of Chilton County.

A Letter From Mayor C. Fenn Jones

To the Editor of the Chilton County News.

Dear Sir:

An audit of the books and records of the City covering the six months period from October 1, 1951, which was the beginning date of a new fiscal year, to March 31, 1952, has just been completed and we are pleased to submit to the public a condensed statement of this audit which reveals the fact that the affairs of the City are in a very healthy and prosperous condition.

You will notice, in the statement printed elsewhere, the bonds outstanding on March 31 this year, including water works bonds, were $127,500.00, the total debt of the City. I wish to explain that of this amount twenty-five thousand five hundred dollars is general obligations bonds. That means the property owners or real estate of the City are liable only for this small amount. This amount taken from the total debt of the City leaves $102,000.00 for which our water system is liable. Had the swimming pool not been made a debt of the water system, which was about $65,000.00, our water system would only lack $37,000.00 being free of debt. During the six months period this audit covers, we have reduced the debt $5,000.00—and since October 1, 1948, the date I took office this time, we have reduced the debt from $161,500.00 to $127,500.00, a reductio nof $34,000.00.

Considering the extension of our water mains and sanitary sewer lines, the addition of more than 400 water meters to our list, the great improvement to our streets and sidewalks and still— the debt is reduced $34,000.00. I think we have done very good.

We are operating at a profit now even in the summer time when the gas is not being used to heat the homes, and I predict that in 15 years the entire debt against the system will be paid, if the system is properly managed and the revenue is applied to the payment of the gas debt where it is justly and legally due. To divert the money to any other use will be a violation of the trust agreement and a violation of the law. I hope no future mayor or administration will attempt to do that.

Respectfully,
C. FENN JONES, Mayor.

Republican County Executive Committee

Gentlemen:

Since Mr. Omar Reynolds' withdrawal from the Judge of Probate race, why don't you gentlemen emulate the action of the Republican and Democratic parties of California, and nominate Mr. Dave Tingle as your candidate for Probate Judge?

Like Senator William F. Knowland, he represents all anyone could wish in a candidate. He is well qualified, sober, honest, and his greatest desire is to give our County one of the best administrations it has ever known.

I hope you will endeavor to see this in the same light as one who has great admiration and respect for your aims and endeavors to create a real two-party system in the South.

Respectfully,
P. J. NORWOOD.

Peach Festival Plans Progressing

Jackson Predicts Big Peach Crop And Big Festival

With over one million bushels of peaches to go to market this summer, Joe Jackson, chairman of the Chilton County Peach Festival, has asked that all stops be pulled out and every effort made by his committees to get these peaches sold as soon as possible in an effort to get the farmers the best possible price for one of the biggest peach crops in the history of this Central Alabama County.

Mr. M. R. Glasscock, county agt., has told Jackson that there are now over 375,000 bearing peach trees in the county and that the first peaches of the year will be ready for shipment by the end of this week.

With this in mind Jackson has asked the personnel of the Festival office in Clanton to bear down in an effort to get the big peach buyers in the east into the county as soon as possible, in an effort to get the bumper crop on the move and on out of Chilton County.

Red Haven and Early Rose varieties are ripening this week and next and these varieties will be followed closely by the Golden Jubilees and Early Red Frees. Immediately after the Jubilees, peach farmers will start harvesting some of the firmer varieties of peaches that are considered better shippers. These are the Hiley varieties, the Hale Havens, the early Elbertas and the old faithful shipping peach, the regular Elberta.

This, however, does not end the harvest of Chilton County's peaches. The season will be extended well on into August with shipping of late Reds, Augberts, Lizzies and other vraieties of quality late peaches.

As time draws near for the annual Chilton County Peach Festival, excitement is running high throughout the county. Officials of the Festival are working overtime in their efforts to make sure that everyone knows that: "Chilton County Peaches Are Tops." The float committee, headed by J. P. Lawrence and assisted by Marvin Marcus, is bending every effort to make sure that everyone has the nicest looking floats and the best decorated store fronts that's possible. Banners advertising the Peach Festival have already been strung across the main highway in Clanton.

J. Archie Ogburn has announced that there will be more bands in this year's parade than in any other parade in the history of the annual affair. Thomas Childers of Thorsby and his committee are laying plans for the better-than-a-mile long event.

It has also just been announced that through the cooperation of Mr. Henry P. Johnston, Manager Director of Radio Station WSGN-WSGN-FM, and Bob Taber, General Manager of Clanton's own radio station WKLF, a state-wide radio network will originate here in Clanton on the day of the Peach Festival. And too, Radio Station WAFM-TV, their cameras and staff will be on hand to pick up the Peach Festival as will several movie cameras to pick up shots of this annual event to showings in theatres throughout the country.

In a last minute statement, Mr. Jackson reported that he was well satisfied with the progress of Festival plans and he further stated that he felt that all his committees were doing a fine job.

BAG A QUAGGA

Strange Zebra-Horse Seen Roaming African Hills Again

SOMEWHERE back in the grassy veld of southern Africa is the ghost of a half-striped horse, luring scientists and animal hunters with the call to bag a quagga.

Zoo directors all over the world would be as surprised by discovery of a true quagga as if a live dodo suddenly were found. For three quarters of a century, this wild African cousin of the horse and zebra has been thought extinct.

On south-west Africa's "skeleton coast" this summer, however, a Hottentot tribesman told a British scientific expedition that he had seen a quagga in the hills. Six American explorers are now somewhere north of Capetown on the track of other reports. From the Cape Colony to London, the mere possibility that the quagga still exists is big news.

A century ago, quaggas were to South Africa's early settlers what the buffalo once was in America. Known scientifically as Equus quagga, the bountiful plains creatures were often given another Greek name—Hippotigris, or "tiger horses."

At casual glance they seemed half zebra and half horse. Head, neck and shoulders bore the zebra's stripes, but the hind quarters were a uniform dun or gray. Standing little more than four feet high, their legs, tail and underside were white.

Quaggas roamed the bushy badlands and grass-covered plains of the Cape Colony by the thousands, sometimes mingling with gnus and ostriches. When startled, their alarm would be sounded in shrill, barking neighs. They would run in thundering herds led, like American mustangs, by the fiercest and strongest of their stallions.

Boer frontier farmers shot them first as food for Hottentot fieldhands, then for their sleek hides, finally for the mere sport of riding them down. By 1872, with the death of the last captive quagga in the London Zoo, the entire species was considered extinct.

If a bonafide quagga should be found alive today (there are several types of zebras, or "bontequaggas," closely resembling the true quagga), it will not be the first time that an "extinct" animal has reappeared to confound zoologists.

In 1938, a strange five-foot-long fish was netted by a trawler working a shallow bank off the tip of South Africa. Taken to a museum, the oddly-boned sea creature was found to be a throwback to dim ages in geologic time long before man lived on earth. It was a living specimen of a fish believed by ichthyologists to have become extinct 60,000,000 years ago.

Jemison Public Library; First In Chilton County

Miss Shirley Brothers of the State Public Library Service was in Jemison Wednesday and Thursday, June 4th and 5th to assist Mrs Elvin Dawson, the Jemison Librarian in catalogueing and indexing the books in the library. Miss Brothers brought with her 88 volumes to be placed in the library.

The Jemison Public Library has many books for children and adults and is filling a great need of the community and outlying district. The librarian says there is a great response every Saturday from the children in the outlying sections, bringing in books and checking out more.

The library board appointed by the Jemison City Council met with Miss Brothers to discuss problems facing the library. On this board are Mesdames C. L. Walton, V. O. Lenoir, W. J. Freston, Leo Langston and Msis Melba Patton.

Books are now free to the public, for a period indicated in each book.

The Quest Club and Home Demonstration Club of Jemison cooperated in founding the library.

The Census Bureau reports that 37,791 Alabama farms have tractors, 47,088 have motor trucks and 64,436 have automobiles.

"Oh, Girls!"

Hey, Girls! Let's get that registration started for the entrants in the Beauty Queen contest for the annual Chilton County Peach Festival. The Committee needs to know right now how many entrants they are going to have in the Festival so that they in turn can make their plans.

It's very simple. All you have to do is go by the Peach Festival office in the Mullins Building over Western Auto Store in Clanton. Tell them you are between 16 and 21 years of age and that you are unmarried. And if you have a photo of yourself bring that in too, but it's not necessary.

Anyhow, let's get 'em in, girls, so that the Peach Queen Committee doesn't have to work overtime at the last minute.

SPEED LAW NEEDS ENFORCING

We see no sense in the Governor reducing Alabama's speed law again. Those who refuse to observe the 60 mile per hour speed law will refuse to observe the lower rate of speed allowed by law.

Seems to us what the law needs is enforcing—not reducing again. Sixty miles an hour on open highways is a good safe speed, but check the records and see if the majority of the accident cases aren't caused by drivers exceeding the present speed limit.

There is no reason to believe that a lower speed rate would be observed any more than the present one.

GRITS FOR SPUDS

There is a shortage of white potatoes, but no shortage of grits.

Grits is strictly a Southern dish, and considered as a breakfast dish. But a big helping of grits, properly embellished with butter or gravy, is just as good at lunch, dinner, or supper, or what have you, as at breakfast. Grits is an ideal side dish for fried chicken or fried fish; delicious with brissilled chicken, served with the brissil sauce.

With steak, grits takes the place of French fries, especially when the steak is taken off the griddle, and a big pat of butter melted in the broiler in which the steak has left its own gravy. Spoon that gravy over the grits and forget that there ever were French fried potatoes.—Greenville Advocate.

DEATH ON THE HIGHWAYS

They say an editoralist leaps to an essay on highway safety with the greatest of ease because it is something to write about that stirs nó controversy.

It is like a politician damning sin. No support can be lost in such a move.

In Andalusia on Wednesday was a young man who lived at the scene of the disastrous log truck-auto accident near Wetumpka when a young father and four little boys, out on a fishing venture, were killed.

It required more than an hour to remove the victims from the managled wreckage, according to this visitor to Andalusia who participated in the first aid effort.

Near Pleasant Home on Saturday night, a speeding Buick plunged from the highway traveling at what patrol reports showed was 100 miles per hour. The driver was hurled from the car with such force that he was literally wrapped in a wire fence at the edge of the highway. Another occupant of the car was found in a tree where he had been tossed, men, who went to render assistance, said.

This wreck brought death to a father of three children.

Yes, it is easy to editoralize on highway safety. But it is a practice that should be followed regularly. Road deaths need the full glare of an indignant publicity. This can make speed and carelessness an unpopular practice.—Andalusia Star-News.

AT LAST—REALIZATION

The United States Government, it seems at last has come to the realization that expenses must be cut if we are to continue to exist as a nation.

We are extremely proud to see this week where a step has been taken in this direction. A step that will go down in history as the beginning of the end to high cost government—tax and spend politics. At Oak Ridge the scientists have cut the rate of pay on lightening bugs from 25c per hundred to 15c per hundred.

It's great statesman-like moves, by top officials like this, that keeps our faith in our government alive. It must have taken real courage for this man to tell those boys that the price paid for lightening bugs would be reduced, when the price on everything else the government buys or hires has blown out the top.

A medal for courage, above and beyond the call of duty, should be issued to this noble watchdog of our hard-earned tax dollars.

LAY DAM SPEEDWAY OPEN AGAIN

In the Spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love, while a durn fool's thoughts turn to speed.

It seems that Saturday, June 7, was the unofficial opening of the popular Lay Dam speedway for the summer. Quite a few test runs were made by the local helldrivers and a few races were put on by the "it can't happen to me" class.

Last year this was one of the favorite race-tracks of the county and of course took its toll of lives.

Naturally Highway 31 is patrolled more because of the heavier flow of traffic. Some time should be spent on the other roads in the county, though. You can be killed speeding in an alley.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

The five-year-old has been attending church services for quite some time now, and, as a general rule, behaving as nicely as the grown-ups in the congregation. Of course, as a kind of "behavior insurance," I always take along a tiny doll, some crayons and a scratch pad in my purse for use if the minister's sermon is too long.

One Sunday night recently the three-year-old decided he'd like to go along to church too. Now I knew he'd get restless before the service was over, but we agreed that he could stay through the singing of the hymns. One of the hymns that night was the old favorite, "Bringing in the Sheaves."

Well, the next night at supper time, the three-year old came into the dining room to see what the food prospects were and spied some cheese on the table. He helped himself to two slices and then marched through the kitchen singing lustily,

"Bringing in the cheese, bringing in the cheese—"

I was reading the other day about a woman who runs her vacuum cleaner over her cat every day to pick up the loose hairs and thus keeps them out of her rugs and upholstery.

The paragraphs set me thinking how wonderful it would be if some inventor would turn out an attachment for the vacuum cleaner to give the children a "dry cleaning" when they come in from play. After the three-year-old and the five-year-old have had their baths, there's enough silt left on the bottom of the tub to plant seed corn.

A good many recipes call for a little onion juice to add to the flavor, and getting juice from an onion can be a rather difficult task. Our next door neighbor has simplified the job by extracting the juice with a lemon squeezer.

She cuts a piece from the bottom of the onion, leaving the rest of the skin intact. Then she presses the cut side on the squeezer and gently twists the onion until the required amount of juice has been squeezed.

Our neighbors around the corner have been busy this week getting their back yard barbecue area ready for use. Some thoughtful friends sent them a rolling pin with small cup hooks screwed into it on which to hang the long-handled forks, spoons and knives they'll use in cooking.

Do you bump your car door against the wall of the garage every time you open it to get in or out?

Our next door neighbor protects the finish on his car door by nailing strips of old garden hose along the wall of his garage to absorb the bumps.

The hotter the weather gets, the more most housewives depend on salads to tempt wilted appetites. Now some men claim they don't like salad, but here's one salad nearly all men like:

Dissolve a package of lime gelatine in 1¾ cups hot water. While this cools, mash a package of cream cheese until smooth and blend in a small can of crushed pineapple (drained), ½ cup chopped pecans, 1 cup diced celery and a pinch of salt.

When gelatine has cooled, fold in cheese mixture, pour into mold and place in refrigerator until cooled.

DIGESTION

Digestion is necessary in the body to break down foods to small particles which can be transported by the blood stream throughout the body. The digestive tract, or alimentary canal, consists of the mouth, the pharynx, esophagus, stomach, and small and large intestines. In the normal function of the body, various digestive glands pour their secretions into this tract or canal. When food is placed in the mouth, it comes in contact with saliva which is the first of the many digestive juices that are produced as the food travels down the alimentary canal.

In the saliva are substances called ferments which break down starch into sugar. The juice of the stomach contains pepsin and hydrochloric acid which act on proteins, such as lean meat and similar chemical substances. The acid of the stomach juice also aids in the absorption of iron and calcium from the upper intestine. The digestive juices contain mucus, which is very important for lubrication and protection of the walls of the digestive canal against irritation from rough foods or other substances.

Below the stomach the alimentary canal is called the small intestine. Here the food comes in contact with bile, pancreatic juice, and the intestinal juice. The bile, which helps to digest fats, is formed in the liver and stored and concentrated in the gallbladder. By the contraction and relaxation of the small intestine, the digested material is moved along. During this process the walls of the intestine absorb the digested food substances. Then they are carried by the blood and lymph vessels to the general circulation and to all organs and tissues of the body where they are either used or stored for future use.

The last five feet of the bowel, called the colon or large intestine, is the drying portion of the bowel, absorbing the remaining nutritious material and water. The indigestible residue remains in the large intestine about twenty-four to thirty hours before it is evacuated from the body, while the water is absorbed and returned to the blood stream.

SHOWERS UPON THE EARTH

"He sendeth the rain on the just and on the unjust.,—Matthew 5:45.

If you will read the paragraph from which this sentence is taken (Matthew 5:43-48) you will see that Jesus was pronouncing a broad principle for his disciples to comply with in their contacts with others.

It is simply the principle of generous dealing with all humanity; the practice of patience and goodwill; the unprejudiced interpretation of the motives and actions of one's fellowmen, and yet of course without that compromise of one's character that would result from a caleless indorsement of another's misconduct.

God is kind toward people, the bad as well as the good. Therefore His kindness provides the pattern for Christians to adopt for their deportment toward all the human kind, thereby evidencing the fact that they are Christians indeed.

There is a question that arises in many minds, which is that if God is equally good to the unbelieving and the believing, what advantage is it to be a believer? All alike are the beneficiaries of His providences, are they not? That is most assuredly true.

Let it be clearly understood, however, that the eventual good is determined by the attitude of the recipient. The believing person interprets the everyday blessings that come to him as the evidences of his Father's care. He thanks God for them, and by the promptings of gratitude undertakes to live in accord with the will of the Almighty, the giver of every good and perfect gift.

The unbeliever does not, and thereby misses the real meaning of life. To him the coming of rain upon his crops is simply a matter of good luck. He is unwilling to look beyond a mere incident in the course of nature. Therefore nature is his only god. Not much can be done with that man, or for him.

Returning to the lesson that Jesus was driving home to his hearers, we learn that as God is good to all people, so should all His followers be. What if one's kindly service fails to obtain a gracious response from some people?

Be it remembered that not every seed dropped into the ground produces according to the gardener's liking. The planter still has the comfort of knowing that he has done his best. More than that, in some corner of his garden patch he may get surprising results. "Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters." (Isiah 32:20).

End of Hostilities

R. H. Wilkinson

SINCE CHILDHOOD they had been hostile toward each other.

When Jake graduated from Harvard, Maxine said: "Now that you have a degree and a Cambridge accent, I suppose the world had just better look out."

"I've got a job," he told her coldly. "I'm going into business for myself. I'm going to open an architect's office in Leland." Leland was the home town where they both had been raised.

"Oh, my!" Her eyes grew round. Her voice dripped sarcasm. "What a noble idea! There must have been five new houses built in Leland during as many years past."

"There's going to be a development at Lake Hayden. The new pike road's coming through. Folks will be building camps."

Much to Maxine's outward annoyance, and secret joy, Jake was right. The pike road did come through. A land development company began selling lots. By the time Maxine graduated from Smith, Jake was not only doing splendidly in his profession as an architect, but owned a half interest in a development company of his own.

"Fool's luck!" Maxine declared. "You fell into something."

Jake grinned cheerfully. "And landed right side up. By the way are you going to the country club dance tonight?"

"I am," said Maxine distantly, "with Carl Ledbetter."

"And who might Carl Ledbetter be?"

"Oh, a boy I met my senior year." She was quite vague.

"The sucker!" said Jake, and walked away.

Carl Ledbetter was staying at the inn. He stayed there two weeks, and gave no indication of leaving. He spent money like water, and it was quite evident that his reason for staying was Maxine.

"When," asked Jake, "are you going to wake up. That guy's a punk. Hay fields will grow under his feet while he waits for the big opportunity. Besides, he's younger than you are."

The summer passed. A family named Mason moved into one of the newly constructed camps on Lake Hayden. There was a daughter named Bette. She had blond hair and blue eyes and a bewitching smile. Jake asked her to go to a dance with him. After that he asked her to go a lot of places.

Fall came. The Masons moved back to Philadelphia. Carl Ledbetter stayed on at the inn. He said vaguely he was interested in making some investments nearby.

One crisp October night Jake was returning to town from the lake. There was an automobile parked beside the road, a long, racy coupe that looked familiar. Unconsciously Jake slowed down. As he passed the coupe he heard a scream, a feminine scream. He pulled up short, got out and ran back. The door of the coupe opened and Carl Ledbetter stepped out.

"Everything's all right, Farnsworth. Run along."

"Jake!" screamed Maxine from inside the coupe. She got out the other door and ran around to him. "Please take me home with you."

Jake looked at her and looked at Ledbetter. "All right," he said. "Run up and get into my car. I'll be right along."

When he turned to his own car a few minutes later Maxine stared at him with frightened eyes. "Did you hit him?"

"Of course not. We merely talked the thing over. He didn't seem to mind. He's leaving tomorrow anyway." Jake started the car.

"He tried to kiss me," Maxine said, after a moment.

Jake sneered. "My, my! And what did you expect, parking out in the woods with a man you've been kidding along all summer?"

"I haven't been kidding him."

Jake stopped his car. "Listen," he said harshly, "we've been fighting since we were kids. It hasn't gotten us anywhere. You've been playing around with Ledbetter to make me sore. You even arranged this little episode tonight."

Maxine's mouth fell open. "Jake Farnsworth!"

"Oh, don't pretend. I questioned Ledbetter and figured out the answers from what he told me." He paused. "I suppose I'm partly to blame. I played around with Bette for the same reason." Again he paused. When he spoke there was a final note in his voice. "Well, it's got to stop. One way to stop it is for us to get married. The other is for one of us to pull up stakes and get out. That'll have to be me. I'll be glad to go. What's your answer?"

Maxine stared. "Jake Farnsworth, if you—I never—of all the conceit—" Jake snapped on the ignition switch with a gesture of acceptance. Maxine gestured helplessly, resignedly. "Well, all right then. You win. Let's get married."

Jake's hand left the ignition switch. He grinned. "Phew! That was sure a close call. Why didn't I think of it before? Darling, come here!"

Price Controls Lifted On Irish Potatoes

SOUTH ALABAMA SPUD PRICES SKYROCKET UP

All price control regulations governing the sale of Irish potatoes have been revoked, Charles G. Dobbins, district director of the South Alabama Office of Price Stabilization, said today.

"Within tweny-four hours after ceiling prices on potatoes were lifted, the wholesale and retail prices in South Alabama jumped about 100 per cent or double the former OPS ceiling price," Dobbins said. "This is evidence that the OPS enforcement program generally has been effective."

The OPS director added that ceiling prices on potatoes were supended by the national OPS director, Ellis Arnall, following a vote in the United States Senate to discontinue controls over all fresh fruits and vegetables.

Arnall said: "The announcement of the Senate vote has rendered effective enforcement of the present regulation virtually impossible."

COTTON INSECTICIDES

Recommended insecticides for a cotton pest control in Alabama include BHC-DDT mixture, toxaphene, calcium arsenate alternated with DDT, and mixtures of aldrin-DDT, dieldrin-DDT, and heptachlor-DDT. As a rule red spider mites are not serious pests, but where they become a problem they may be controlled with applications of either aramite, EPN, or parathion.

SHE'S IN HEAVEN

In memory of one so sweet,
Who's gone to Heaven, her Savior to meet,
No more pain will she ever bear,
In the Glory Land just over there.

The loved ones that she left behind,
When she crossed over the Great Divide,
No more her smiling face we'll see,
Till we meet her there in eternity.

She left a message, I still know
About our Lord Who is up above
Who offers us His greatest love.

The words she said came from her heart,
"Trust in God, and we'll never part"
Only a short time it will soon be o'er,
Then we'll meet on the Golden Shore.

Be good, loved ones, don't live in sin,
Trust in God, let Him come in,
His love I found, a comfort to me,
As I lay in pain and misery.

Her life on earth, is done and o'er,
She's up in heaven, on the Golden Shore,
Waiting up there for you and me,
Let's live like here, so she again we'll see.

CHIROPRACTIC

The Modern Approach to Natural Health by Dr. Marshall L. Ware

BOILS AND CARBUNCLES

These are suppurative inflammations involving glands of the skin. The glands become swollen and hardened and pus accumulates within. The eruption increases in size, becomes very tender and causes throbbing pain. A carbuncle is larger than a boil and therefore gives rise to constitutional disturbances consisting of fatigue, loss of appetite, headache and a general rise in temperature. If carbuncles are numerous, they may cause fever, chills, sweats and enlarged lymphatic glands.

The presence of these eruptions indicates poor elimination of waste materials of the body or unbalanced or excessive feeding. If the diet does not contain the right amount of eliminative foods or has an excessive quantity of acid forming foods, such as meats or white bread, then the kidneys may be unable to throw off the excessive poison materials resulting from the unbalanced diet. On the other hand the kidneys may be working poorly due to imperfect supply of nerve force.

In either case there is an excessive amount of toxic material in the blood stream, which Nature tries to eliminate. If this cannot be done by the kidneys, either because they are overworked or because they are not working properly, then Nature creates unusual means of elimination. Boils and carbuncles are means of ridding the body of poisons which should be eliminated through the usual channels.

If you are subject to these eruptions consult your Chiropractor. He can tell you what is wrong with your diet, if it is faulty. If your kidneys are not doing all that they should do, he is the one who can find the cause in a misaligned vertebra of the spinal column which is impinging nerves supplying the kidneys. He is trained to discover the misalignment and by adjustments restore it, thus releasing the pressure on nerves and assuring proper working of the kidneys. This procedure will quickly make an end of boils and carbuncles.

CONSTABLE Starr Badgett answered a riot call Friday at the Cracker Barrel General Store. Seems a city slicker stumbled into the darkened store, and, blinded by the bright sun outside, upset the checkerboard between Clem Poore and Milo Mopish, just when Clem had Milo in a trap. Knute Bellows and Odd Bodkin roughed up the stranger some, and then there was a big hubbub and a general fight between those who allowed Clem would have won and those favoring Milo. The stranger was dragged off to the county jail. "Dang fool!" complained Bill Steepbelly, store proprietor. "Didn't wanna buy even a plug of tobaccky. Jes wanted to ask the way to Bumble Bee Bend."

Belle Bellows (Knute Bellows' oldest daughter who married Odd Bodkin) told us the other day that, when her husband goes out under the tree with a stack of western magazines, she always makes him check his six-shooter with her lest, in his excitement over the stories, he take a pot shot at Laze Dozier, who, Odd says, rustled some chickens off the Bodkin hen ranch one night last summer.

Speaking of thieves, Squire Gladmoney Debitside had Constable Starr Badgett out on his farm all night Wednesday watching for the fellow who stole a shoat there last week to return for another pig. Starr didn't see a soul, but while he was watching the pig pens, somebody made away with Squire's silo.

In church the other Sunday, Aunt Tizzie Toadhopper, who was 100 years old her last birthday, swore off smoking, but told the preacher that, with the Lord's permission, she would like to begin taking a spot of hard cider occasionally.

THIS WEEK IN Washington

IF THERE WAS confusion and uncertainty on the Washington scene before the historic and dramatic decision of the Supreme Court, the word was "babel" after the court ruled that the President's operation of the steel plants was unconstitutional.

Following on the heels of the general strike called by Phillip Murray, boss of the CIO Steel Workers union, within a few minutes after the court ruled, was the order of the President returning the steel plants to their private owners in compliance with the court order.

The Supreme Court decision holding the President does NOT have inherent authority under the constitution to seize control of industry in a national emergency lays in the lap of congress the problem of whether or not to give the chief executive some kind of a law under which he can assume broad emergency powers for the purpose of controlling a situation of this kind.

Chief Justice Fred Vinson, in his dissenting opinion, declared the majority view of the court placed the President in the category of a "messenger boy."

Hardly had the court decision, the order to strike, and return of the plants to their owners been chronicled when the National Production Authority slapped a ban against shipment of steel from warehouses to manufacturers of civilian goods. It also meant that the increased allotment which had been permitted for civilian manufacturers for the third and fourth quarters of [illegible] will be quickly withdrawn.

The new billion-dollar-a-year veterans bill came a step nearer to enactment in the house. The new measure would give to Korean war GIs and those who entered the army after June 27, 1950, many of the provisions of the old GI bill. The measure has not had active support of the American Legion for the reason that, some observers say, a change in disbursing money will short-change the veterans of some tuition money although it might save Uncle Sam some money from alleged fly-by-night schools. The bill for instance gives $110 a month to single veterans allowing a division of $75 per month for subsistence and $35 a month for tuition and books—a little more than $300 a year. In the old GI bill the veterans were allowed $500 for tuition and books and the schools were paid direct. In the new bill the veteran gets his money direct and in turn pays the school. Virtually same provisions are made for home, business, and farm purchases and up to $300 severance [illegible] is allowed. —

Office of Price Administration [illegible] way stores [illegible] Court upheld [illegible] action in removing dry groceries from general price selings and placing them on a mark-up basis by specific groups.

The American Farm Bureau Federation has reinterated its charge that the Department of Agriculture's "Farm Policy Review", a series of some 3,000 farm meetings held several months ago was conducted for "purely political purposes." Digest of the results of these needs is scheduled to be released early this month by the Department.

With farm prices generally headed downward, there is every indication that congress may take up the question of price supports, looking toward a 100 per cent of parity support schedule instead of the flexible system as now in effect.

There is every indication that this congress will be unable to complete its duties before the national convention, which start at Chicago July 7. Therefore there is plenty of talk that since congress must come back to finish its job anyway, it might as well tackle the tough farm price problem and not wait for the next session in January.

HOMETOWN HERO

A SHORT STORY

By Loretta Stewart

THE DUST in the street, moved only slightly by the wind all day, was now being stirred by feet—many feet. From his position inside the station Jim Hawkins watched the people gathering near the tracks where the Special from Geyser City came in.

Watching their faces, he saw awe and pride and a little bit of embarrassment, as if there were many people who didn't know exactly how to act. Jim opened the station door and went out in the bright sunlight. He paused for just a second as all the faces turned toward him.

"Sorry, folks," he said, squinting into the sun. "Sure sorry. The Special's been held up by a rise on the river. Won't be here for a couple of hours."

A disappointed sigh came from the crowd, and Jim moved back into the station. As he sat down in his chair, he noticed that no one had left, despite his announcement. They had moved a little from out of the sun into the shade of the station. A few of the boys had walked down the tracks to lie in the coolness under the water tank. Mayor Clagnor and his party had moved inside the cool interior of the mayor's shiny, decorated car. But no one had left.

Dillard came in smiling with the mail. "Hi, Jim." He sat on the corner of the desk. "Gosh, I rushed all the way over here, thinking I'd miss the train. Ain't it here yet?"

"Been held up at the junction, Dill. Big flood."

Dillard whistled softly to himself as he brushed at his clothes. "Sure be fine to see Bob again."

Jim lifted his feet on the desk. "Don't you want to hear about the flood?"

Dill stopped his whistling abruptly. "A flood. Why, a flood ain't much compared to what's coming. A man would think you had no pride at all, Jim, the way you act. Bob Carter's coming home."

Jim brushed at his brow. "And there's no call to get upset about it. Won't be here for a couple of hours."

The door opened and Old Sam came in, his face flushed. "Hello, Jim," he whispered. "He here yet?"

"Train's been delayed." Jim peered at him intently. "Why are you sneaking around, Sam? You got a right to be here. You're his dad, ain't you?"

"It's different now." Sam answered slowly. He turned back and stared at the water tank. "I'm his paw okay but well—He's a big success now, Jim. Me, I'm still just the handy man around town. I don't reqkon I'm much good to a boy like Bob now."

"But you got him started, Sam," Jim argued. "If he's as smart as you say, he won't never forget that. You're back of his success."

The flush went out of Old Sam's face. "Why, I never thought of that, Jim. Sure, that's right. I remember the first time—" He stopped with a grin. "Guess I'll go join the crowd waiting for him. I got a right to be here, ain't I?" He banged the door as he went out. The crowd greeted him with shouts.

The town didn't know exactly how to greet Bob Carter coming home such a big success. Jim could tell that. They didn't know if he hadn't changed some while he was gone. Maybe he'd grown out and away from them. Maybe he even looked down on them.

Jim puffed on his pipe. The town was like Old Sam, a little afraid of what was to come. And it was like Dillard too. Proud and happy that Bob had brought distinction on himself. No, they did not know the way to meet him. But everybody was out there, ready to have a try at it.

Jim shook his head slightly. Plenty of times he had pulled Bob off that same water tank there. It could get awful hot in the summer and a boy liked to climb. Lots of times, too, Bob had come down to the station and helped him sweep the station platform for a soda over at Dugan's Drug. Always was a good worker, Jim knew, and he wasn't surprised when the news about Bob came. He stood up. He guessed he would join the crowd ready to meet Bob too.

The time dragged by, and finally the whistle blew as the Special rounded the curve. The crowd gathered quickly around the train. Then down the steps of the car came grinning, carrot-topped Bob Carter, age thirteen, who had just been crowned marble shooting champion of the United States.

Time To Get Land Ready For Sericea

Farmers who were unable to get lespedeza sericea planted in the spring should get land ready for late June or early July planting.

Many farmers prefer planting sericea at this time in preference to spring planting because they avoid the hard spring rains that frequently wash the seed away. Also, they report less competition from weeds and grass when sericea is planted in June or July.

Sericea will provide excellent grazing and hay while protecting and improving the soil.

The Census Bureau reports that the average size of Alabama farms increased from 85.4 acres in 1945 to 98.8 acres in 1950.

Past Presidents To Be Honored At Press Summer Convention

CONVENTION TO BE AT PANAMA CITY, FLORIDA

Past-presidents of the Alabama Press Association will be honored at the association's summer convention July 10. 11 and 12 at Panama City, Fla., Cecil Hornady, APA president and publisher of The Talladega News, announced this week.

Included on the program will be a special banquet July 11 at which the APA's past-presidents will be presented with awards of appreciation from the association. Since the founding of the Alabama Press Association in 1871, 57 Alabama newspaper publishers have served as president.

The 22 living past-presidents are being invited to atend this special program. Cash M. Stanley, The Alabama Journal, Montgomery, is chairman of the program committee. Jep V. Greer, The Sylacauga News, will be master of ceremonies.

The remainder of the convention program will be designed to appeal to Alabama's publishers and their families. Headquarters will be at the Cove Hotel, Panama City.

The Census Bureau reports that the average value of land and buildings of Alabama farms increased from $2,506 per farm in 1945 to $4,624 in 1950.

In 1820, the first year in which Alabama was enumerated as a state, its population was 127,901. By 1950, 130 years later, Alabama's population had increased to 3,061,743.

County Agent Has Tips On Pond Construction

Farmers or sportsmen planning to construct new fishponds this year should contact their local county agent.

He is well qualified to locate a good pond site, survey the site of the dam, and make the necessary recommendations for future management.

In the past, too many farmers have made mistakes in building and managing ponds, resulting in complete failure. On the other hand more than 8,000 properly constructed ponds in Alabama are largely the result of cooperation of pond builders with the county agent and his assistants.

The ratio of watershed to each surface acre of pond, weed control, and fertilization are all important considerations if the pond owner wants the most for his money. The local county agent can supply this information.

Don't Skip Breakfast Advise Nutritionists

Energy is needed to start the day regardless of the temperature; therefore, a tendency to skip breakfast on hot summer days is a hazard to good nutrition.

Nutritionists recommend a large glass of citrus juice, whole grain or enrished cereal, toast, and an egg, if desired, to supply the energy you need for morning activities.

A breakfast consisting of a sweet roll and coffee can be termed as a "loser", because it does not contain the necessary food materials which will furnish the amount of energy needed to carry a person through the morning.

Often the teen-age group, because of the fad for slim figures, has a tendency to skip breakfast. It should be pointed out to them that a good breakfast usually contains less calories than sundaes, soft drinks, or other snacks often eaten later in the day by those who skip breakfast.

Other income of the family of 76,104 of Alabama's 211,512 farmers was larger in 1949 than the value of farm products sold off their farms during that year.

Higher Yields Pay For Truck Crop Irrigation

Experimental work with 16 different vegetable crops over an 11-year period has shown that irrigation increased yields an average of 28 per cent.

The average increase in gross value per acre was $79 for a single crop, and it was twice that amount when two crops were grown on the same land in one year.

Water is often the limiting factor in truck crop production. Dry periods lasting from two to four weeks often seriously reduce yields cause complete crop failure.

Growing crops need about 1 of water each week for satisfac results. This amount of water acre costs about $7. Therefore, creased yields will soon pay for cost of an irrigation system.

Resigns Pastorate At Temple Church After Eight Years Of Service

REV. and MRS. A. T. HICKMAN

After eight years of service to Temple Church and the county of Chilton, Rev. A. T. Hickman resigned his pastorate at the dedication ceremonies of the new church recently.

Rev. Hickman has taken an active part in the civic life of Clanton and the county as well as to act as pastor of the Temple Church. He has served on various committees as a member of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, and has acted as Chairman and co-chairman of the annual Christmas Chest. He is at present Chairman of the Chilton County Chest an organization created to perform daily what the Christmas Chest was organized to do annually.

Mrs. Hickman has also aided in Christmas Chest work as well as scores of other worthwhile civic projects. She is also President of the Womens Missionary Council for Alabama, an office she has held for the past six years.

Rev. Hickman is a great believer in Christian Brotherhood and it was through his efforts that many rural churches in the county started working together instead of pulling against each other. He has preached in both the local Baptist Church and the Methodist Church. He has encouraged joint church meetings amongst the rural churches to promote friendship and harmony.

Future plans of the Hickman's have not been announced but it is certain to say he and Mrs. Hickman will be deeply missed in this community.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANY

After a month of bargaining, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company and Communications Workers of America—C.I.O.—today, June 4, reached agreement on a new contract providing wage increases ranging from $2.50 to $6.00 a week, depending on location and job classification. The agreement, which is subject to wage stabilization Board. approval covers 50,000 non-supervisory telephone employees in the nine Southern Bell States.

The new contract, when ratified by the Union membership will run for one year from June 5. It includes a few changes in working practices in addition to the New wage schedules.

F. J. Turner, President of Southern Bell, said the settlement adjusts the wages of Southern Bell employees in keeping with prevailing levels in the cities and towns served by the Company "Our policy of long standing has been to pay wages in each community that are in line with wages paid by other employers for jobs simlilar to telephone jobs."

Commenting further Mr. Turner said—"It is gratifying that a settlement has been reached between Southern Bell and the Union through the orderly processes of collective bargaining, with no interruption of the public's service. We believe the agreement is fair to all concerned. The interests of both telephone customers and telephone employees have been taken into account. Good telephone wages are necessary to attract and retain competent employees. Competent employees are essential to good service for our customers. Good service was never more important than today.

"The settlement adds $12,380,000 a year to the Company's cost of rendering service throughout its nine state areas.

"As a regulated public utility, there is no margin in our income to absorb increased costs. Therefore, the rates charged for our services must reflect these increased wages and other higher costs."

The new contact will add about $1,299,000 annually to Southern Bell's costs in Alabama, according to S. H. Youngblood, Alabama Manager. The contract covers more than 5,000 employees in the State, including a majority of those who live and work here.

'This added cost of doing business will force our Alabama earnings to an inadequate level," Mr. Youngblood said.

DON'T BE A GOOSE. Honking won't make a stalled car start any faster. Use your horn only in emergencies.

CHARACTERS YOU'VE MET

Who's Zoo. . . .on the highway?

The Butting Billy Goat, the Honking Goose, the Jumping Jack Rabbit. Sure, you've met them all—and probably a few more besides—at one time or another on the highway.

Maybe, on occasion, anger or impatience, or even just in-attention has gotten the better of you, too, and you have showed one or two of the bad driving habits these creatures symbolize.

Now you're going to meet them again in this and future editions of this newspaper so you can see how those who indulge in these less-than-human characteristics when they're behind the wheel appear to others.

Funny though they may seem, however, the sobering fact is that many of the 8,500,000 motor vehicle accidents that occur each year are caused by characteristics such as are illustrated in these cartoons, which are being presented by this newspaper in cooperation with the Etna Casualty and Surety Company in an effort to point up these bad driving habits which contribute so greatly to this accident toll.

When you're driving, therefore, don't be a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Drive like a human being and continue to look like yourself when behind the wheel, not like the crazy creatures these cartoons depict.

(Ed. Noe: The character, or characters, depicted are purely non-fictional and any resamblance to any driver, living or dead, is strictly intentional.)

ANTI SOCIALIST

The Chilton County Chamber of Commerce went on record recently as being opposed to the socialist Federal Housing Program and let it be known that as a body they favored no such project for Chilton County.

It is our opinion the Mayor and City Councilmen are wise in passing up such an opportunity (if such could be called an opportunity). The Chamber of Commerce is to be congratulated on their stand in the matter.

GETTING READY?

Only a few short weeks until Clanton's Fifth Peach Festival and you better be getting things dressed up for the occasion.

On June 30th the street decorators will begin work on beautifying the streets with bunting, flags, banners, etc., and our little city will take on an air of carnival spirits. As will Thorsby, Jemison and Maplesville.

The Chamber of Commerce, as sponsors of the Peach Festival, has worked out a plan this year whereby each merchant purchased his own decorations and after the Festival is over the decorations will come down and be ready for use whenever needed during the year for other gala occasions.

Make plans now to join in the fun. Get ready for the biggest, and best Peach Festival in the county's history.

AIR TRAVEL

Aviation medicine is that phase of medicine which deals with the medical problems of pilots, stewardesses, and the care and comfort of the passengers while traveling by airplane. This includes the selection and periodic examination of flight crew members and a knowledge and appreciation of medical conditions that may be affected by flying insofar as passengers are concerned.

Many people think that, as they go into higher altitudes, there is less oxygen for their system, accounting for some minor discomforts such as ringing in the ears or, perhaps, a mild dizziness. Actually this is not true, since air is composed of 20 per cent oxygen at all altitudes. The discomfort is caused by a lack of pressure. In an area, for example, which is at about *00 feet above sea level the pressure is about 15 pounds per square inch of surface. Since the pressure is reduced at a relatively constant rate, the ascent by plane to 10,000 feet would result in the reduction of pressure to ten pounds per square inch of surface. Thus with the introduction of the cabin pressure type plane the airlines were able to make tremendous advances for passenger comfort.

In considering transportation of patients by air, it must first be determined whether a physician would permit the individual to travel at all. As a rule of thumb, insofar as heart cases go, if the patient is permitted by his physician to walk up a flight of stairs or walk a block or two, he is able to fly. The same rule of thumb can be applied to patients with lung disorders. Many people will select this means of travel even when more severely ill.

There is one lung condition, however, that would prevent a patient from flying without a skilled attendant; and that is when a lung has been collapsed, called pneumothorax, for therapeutic reasons. Should a person with this condition be exposed to a reduced pressure, the air in the collapsed lung would expand, causing pressure on the heart and on the side of the chest in which the collapsed lung is located.

If a patient, no matter what condition he has, is permitted unrestricted activity by his physician, he can be considered as an air passenger.

CONSUMERS DEMAND FRESH VEGETABLES

Fruits and vegetables bought by consumers contain around 65 to 95 per cent water.

"Under ordinary room conditions during most summer days," points out Austin Ezzell, API Extension consumer marketing specialist, "these foods lose moisture rapidly. Therefore, food retailers and others who handle perishables can reduce moisture losses by dunking or sprinkling most vegetables with cold water. Of course, lima beans and field peas should not have much water applied to them."

To control horn flies on cattle, one of the new sprays containing lindane and toxaphene might prove the cheapest to use.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

This has been a mighty important week for the five-year-old. To begin with, she got her first hair cut on her first visit to the beauty parlor. Her thick hair (it was almost long enough for her sit on) was hot even when piled on top of her head or when caught up in a horsetail, and keeping it well-groomed was becoming more and more of a problem. So she decided, without any adult pressure being brought to bear, that she'd like to have short hair.

The three-year-old demanded to be taken along to watch the cutting being done (he probably thought his big sister would scream and yell the way he did on his first visit to the barber), but once inside the beauty shop he was much more interested in the battery of driers lined up against the wall with red-faced women sitting under them than he was in the shearing of his sister.

The five-year-old was completely pleased with her short tresses and went all over the neighborhood showing off her new hair-do.

When she came home for supper, she discovered her first loose tooth—it wiggled as she bit into a peanut butter sandwich.

Now between brushing her short hair and wiggling her loose tooth we have a very busy five-year-old around our house.

The neighbor around the corner likes the new glasses cottage cheese is packed in and has been feeding her family a rather steady diet of cottage cheese so that she can complete her set. Finally her husband rebelled.

"Look," he said, "if you need some glasses, just go down town and buy some. But please don't feed me any more of this stuff!"

As any woman will agree, the common bobby pin has many uses. Our next door neighbor uses a bobby pin to hold small tacks and nails while she hammers them into place. She hasn't suffered a single smashed finger since she began using her bobby pin method of hammering.

This same neighbor has found a good use for the paper garment bags that come from the dry cleaners. After she removes the clean clothes from the bag, she pins the top of the bag securely and turns it upside down, making a giant paper sack. Then she takes her big container from room to room with her, and she empties waste paper baskets into it.

When it is full of trash, she takes it outside to be burned. All her waste basket emptying is accomplished in this one simple operation.

Another ideda: Strips of felt or felt weather stripping glued to the bottom of rockers will keep chairs from moving along the floor and marring the surface.

In hot weather like this, nothing tastes better than a frozen dessert. Here's one that our neighbor down the street serves often and recommends:

Cook ½ sup sugar and 1 cup water together for five minutes. Add two ripe bananas which have been mashed, juice of two lemons and 1 cup bottled grape juice. When cool, pour into freezing tray and freeze at coldest point until partly frozen. Then place in cold bowl and beat until light. Return to refrigerator tray and freeze until firm.

Importance of Relaxing

Carnegie

WHILE SERVING in the army, Raymond P. Wilson, Muncie, Indiana, was transferred from Seattle, Washington, to Phoenix, Arizona. All his friends had shipped out to other sections, so he found himself all alone. Now for the first time in his life, he was going to have the opportunity to do the things that required solitude. But he found it terribly hard to avoid people, and he continued to have too many friends.

Up to the time of his discharge he still hadn't arrived at what he was seeking. He was wasting a lot of time. A year later he arrived at his goal. But, it was like a raging fire he couldn't put out. He went into business for himself and began working day and night.

He got to the point where he was always in a hurry, and when he would meet friends, they could feel his great rush and went on. He would deliberately avoid people and their glances on the street. He even became bored with people and would pick out their faults and dwell on them.

At night he could worry about the problems of the morrow. Eventually he found himself unable to concentrate, or to think clearly. His mind seemed to be behind him in everything he did.

Finally, he took a firm hold on himself, gave himself a good talking to and began reading everything he could get his hands on that would help his situation. One day he read an article about relaxing; he began practicing. While lying in bed at night he would start at the top of his head and relax every single part of his body, down to and including his toes. Also, closing his eyes tightly he imagined he could see nothing but black, to help erase the visions of the day and yesterdays.

Next he took a course in public speaking and found to his surprise that it emphasized the importance of making friends, and that he had an asset he hadn't valued.

GIVE REFRIGERATOR DOOR THE NEW LOOK

A decorative band can be worked out that will match kitchen decorations and at the same time cover a worn spot on the refrigerator door.

"First," states Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist, "mark a band, from three to four inches wide, across the top and down the 'handle' side of the door. Sandpaper this area with No. 00 sandpaper. Then, with a brush about two inches in width, apply enamel which has been tinted with oil colors to the shade desired. Only one coat is needed."

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

Mr. Ira Barkley has done an excellent job of combining Rescue grass and Kudzu. From the three acres combined, Mr. Barkley harvested 600 pounds of clean seed. Most of these seed will be interplanted with his sericea this fall.

The eight acres of Fescue harvested on this farm average around 150 pounds of seed per acre.

Mr. Ralph Mims, who is doing commercial combining this season says "poorly prepared seed beds and stumps are two of his most serious problems."

How many dollars is it worth to sow an old eroded field to sod crops? Charlie Patterson, Charlie Childress, Leon Mims, Lloyd Mims, Dewey Collins, C. C. Gay, Sr., Joe Smith, Bill Kelley and O. H. Arledge, are a few of the farmers who are harvesting one-half ton or more sericea or kudzu hay per acre. The same amount of hay can be harvested again in three or more weeks. All of the land on the above farms is un-profitable to cultivate, but grow good sericea or kudzu.

Judge W. L. Parrish has some early maturing corn planted on a steep once-eroded kudzu field. The corn and kudzu will be hogged off as soon as the corn matures.

Mr. M. Manning and Mr. S. D. Posey are doing a nice job with coastal Bermuda. Both men plan to expand their acreage this coming spring.

For a delicious date biscuit, stuff dates with nuts or marshmallows. Roll in rich pastry. Bake, and brush with melted butter while hot.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

We're Proud of Our Alleys!

For years the bowling alley was under Allen's Store. Smiley Roberts, the manager, did what he could to keep the place spruced up, but it was too dark and dingy.

But you'll remember that old building burned down last year. Smiley set up new alleys alongside the supermarket on the edge of town—all slick and modern looking. Other day I asked him how business was in his new layout.

"Joe," he said, "we're really bowling 'em over—doing about 100% better than in the old place. For one thing, we're out in front of the public eye now—so folks have a chance to see what's going on, and get interested."

From where I sit, that "show place" technique has always been good for business. Ask beer retailers. Those fellows co-operate voluntarily in the Self-Regulation Program sponsored by the Brewing Industry—make sure their places stay bright and clean—with everything attractive to the public. They "spare" no effort to keep their taverns "on the ball."

Thorsby Institute News—

The Philomathics won the honors this year with a total of 70 points. The Pushmatahas had a total of 62 points.

Thorsby Institute has a large library, about 9000 volumes. It has been cramped for lack of room which is now being enlarged. Ever since the library was started it has been open to the public. It is kept twice a week in the summer. It has books and magazines for both old and young people and is not limited to the members of Thorsby Institute.

Mrs. Emily W. Harding an Oberlin College graduate, has been librarian several years, having been assistant to the librarian in Oberlin college, before coming to Thorsby Institute as a semi-volunteer worker. When she is away during part of the summer arrangements are made to have some one in charge.

Sara Manning represented Thorsby Institute at the recent Girls State held at Montgomery. She is a senior now at Thorsby Institute.

As most of the Thorsby people probably know we have a Helen Keller Literary Society to which all the pupils belong. The teachers are honorary members. Miss Keller's birthday is June 27, 1880.

Thorsby Institute would appreciate very much any donation of canned fruit and vegetables to be used at the Dining Hall when school re-opens.

COW TOWN . . . Abilene, widely known in western history as a wide-open cow town, looked like this as it welcomed home a native son, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

AUBURN DAIRY BULLS MUCH ABOVE AVERAGE

Auburn, Ala. — Official Dairy Herd Improvement Association records show that daughters of bulls at the Auburn Artificial Breeding Unit for dairy cows are far above the average.

"For example," says Pete Turnham, API Extension dairy specialist, "they ranked fourth in butterfat production when compared with daughters of bulls from nine other southern states. This is proof of the value of good bulls, and it further bears out the value of artificial breeding."

The specialist points out that artificial breeding of dairy cows helps Alabama farmers breed their cows to good bulls that may be miles away. And others who believe they might be interested in having their cows bred artificially can obtain full details from their local county agents.

FUSE TROUBLE

CULTIVATING YOUNG KUDZU

Cultivation of young stands of kudzu established by planting crowns, seedlings, or seed this spring is necessary for its survival and grwoth.

AVOIDING FREEZER BURN SAVES MEAT

Auburn, Ala. — Freezer burn can be prevented, but it can't be cured.

"Freezer burn is nothing more than drying and surface spoilage resulting from heat coming in contact with air," explains Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservation specialist. "Once freezer burn has occurred, nothing will bring back the original appearance, texture and flavor of the meat."

To avoid freezer burn the specialist advises that meats be wrapped properly. An airtight vapor-proof package depends on the wrapping method as well as on the paper. If a cellophane bag is used, carefully mold or press out the air and then heat-seal with an electric iron. Other wrappings should be fastened with a lock or drug store seal on the ends as well as on the top of the package.

"Finally," says Miss Curtis, "protect the vapor-proof package from punctures by using locker paper, stockinette, or a cardboard container. Freeze meats quickly and store at 0 degrees F. or colder."

Dog Vaccination Dates

Dr. T. A. Hayes announces that all dogs three months of age and older are required by law to be vaccinated against rabies. We have had several cases of rabies in the last 12 months, in all parts of the county. We think this is due largely to lack of dog vaccination.

Due to the fact that we have had several cases of rabies in the county, we will have to enforce the law to the fullest extent. Your cooperation to meet these clinics and get your dog vaccinated will be greatly appreciated. It should be of personal interest to each individual to aid in elimination of rabies by having their dog vaccinated.

—By Ben

We figure its about a fifty-fifty proposition." We got balled out by half the druggists in town and the other half wouldn't speak to us. All because we wrote about a little bottle of medicine—or maybe it was what we didn't write about the bottle of medicine that caused the trouble. What we found out—but quick, was that all the druggists in town have the medicine we spoke of and have had it all along, and they felt that we were casting a reflection on them when we mentioned that no other druggist had it in stock. Of course we meant no such thing as we had been buying the prescription from Upchurch for several weeks. Anyway, boy we have no backward druggists in this man's town and woe be unto the absent-minded guy who infers that we have.

Next came along the Mayor who informs us that the water main now supplying Glendale is a 2-inch main and not a four-inch main. Had it been a four inch main there would be little use in replacing it with a six-inch main. So there you are. We're off the beam by a mile.

Oh, yeah! They're starting work right away on that new six-inch water main we speak of in the paragraph above. A little water from the skies wouldn't do any harm right now either.

Now let's see. The next call we got was the one where the lady said we owed her about six months on her subscription. Seems we had cut her off the list and she wasn't due to be cut off for several more months. Now if you think "Hell Hath No Fury Like A Women Scorned," you just cut her subscription off. Naw, she wasn't to bad. She's a mighty good friend and was just having fun.

Yep. You're right. These hot sidewalks will cook an egg. But you would have to be willing to eat a mighty messy egg if you could go it. The white is cooked—after a fashion. The yolk is not even warmed good and the whole thing is just a mess of milky white albumin, yolk and some sand and gravel instead of salt and pepper. Don't try it. It might spoil your love for the fruit of the hen.

A fellow liked to have fainted the other day when a lady met him on the street and said: "Aren't you the father of two of my children?" Just before he took off for places unknown the lady finished: "I teach the Fourth Grade at (guess what) school, and just wondered how they're enjoying their summer vacation." That poor fellow won't ever be the same again.

Joe Jackson says there will be a meeting of the Directors and Committee Chairmen at the Dixie Cafe today at noon. We're speaking of the Peach Festival officials, you know. That's all anyone is talking about—the Peach Festival. Looks like the Queen contestants are registering a bit slow and had better get on the ball. Things have got to move fast from here on in if we have the kind of a Peach Festival we have all planned for. The success depends on you, and you, and you.

Got our report of the Alabama Fieldman's Association Fire Inspection that was held in Clanton in April. It's a very lengthy report and we couldn't begin to give you a detailed report on every business and public place inspected. In all they inspected 148 mercantile and public buildings and three schools, 11 churches, 3 hotels and one hospital. Looks like most of the places inspected needed some small repairs or attention but as a whole it looks like a mighty good report to us for a small city like ours with no regular fire inspection. The officials of the Association complimented the Kiwanis Club, the Lions Club, the public officials and the newspapers and the radio station on their cooperation.

J. C. Parr, Commander of Post No. 6, American Legion, is in receipt of a request from Mrs. Maye P. Esco, secretary to the American Red Cross here for blood donors when the Bloodmobile comes on July 8th.

Parr requests all members to please cooperate in this worthy endeavor.

Sheriff Forces Arrest Three In Burglaries

Sheriff Luther Kendrick's force arrested three men the past week and charged them with burglary. Thomas Scarborough, Joe Pilgrim and Billy Castleberry. The three men arrested are all residents of Mt. Creek Route 1.

They are charged with burglarizing the home of D. N. Cordas last May 8th, and stealing among other things, an electric stove and an electric refrigerator. According to Sheriff Kendrick the missing household items have been recovered. They were found at Montgomery where the youths had taken and sold them.

The youths were first questioned when some batteries were stolen from a sawmill near Poole's Cross Roads last week. Further questioning by the officers disclosed the fact that the men were implicated in the previous burglary it is reported.

The Midnight Ride Of Two Officials

"Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere. . . ."

Mayor C. Fenn Jones turned Paul Revere last Sunday night and, believe it or not, for the same purpose—to try to save lives. With him on his mid-night ride was E. F. Sloan, County Sanitation Officer.

It came about like this. At a few minutes before 11 o'clock last Sunday night a party from Lomax called the Mayor and told him that the creek at the Double Bridges from which Clanton gets it's water supply had been poisoned.

The Mayor immediately called Sloan who in turn called the State Health Department at Montgomery for instructions. Both then went to talk to the party who had called about the creek poisoning and then out to Double Bridges where the vandalism occurred. Of course the poisoning was for the purpose of killing fish. The poison used was decided to be peach spray or bean spray.

Montgomery authorities advised the drawing off of water from the raw water reservoir which the Mayor ordered at once. The reservoir holds some two hundred thousand gallons of water.

Finally, after spending the night talking with those living near the scene, and a State Health Department representative from Montgomery had come and made an inspection and test, it was decided that no poison had reached the water mains of Clanton residents and all were safe in using the water.

Officers from the State Conservation Department are investigating now and arrests from the incident may occur.

A heavy fine and jail sentence can be imposed for poisoning streams and killing fish—not to even think of what it could do to people who must drink water from that stream.

Dr. Cook was introduced by Mrs. Maye P. Esco, Ex-Secretary Chilton County Chapter American Red Cross.

Mrs. J. D. Griffin Killed In Accident

Mrs. J. D. Griffin, mother of Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin, teacher of English at Chilton County High School for many years, was killed instantly Sunday afternoon late near Isabella.

The car in which Mrs. Griffin was riding was in collision with one driven by County Agent M. R. (Red) Glasscock. The Glasscocks' small daughter was slightly hurt but after a few hours at Central Alabama Hospital was taken home.

It was stated by Bob White at Spigener Funeral Home that the impact of the two cars threw Mrs. Griffin against the gear-shift knob crushing a rib which penetrated the heart, causing almost instant death.

Funeral announcement will be found elsewhere in this issue.

1952 Festival Seeking New Sales Outlets

Preparation for Chilton County's fifth and biggest Peach Festival is well under way, according to Chairman Joe Jackson. Floats are being built, decorations have been planned, Peach Queen Contestants are filling out applications, guests are being invited and peaches are being advertised far and wide. These are only a few of the many phases of developing a Peach Festival and proclaiming that "Chilton County Peaches Are Tops."

This year, with a record-breaking peach crop, it is essential that every effort be made to give the peach industry national recognition. For the first time the Festival will be televized in part, so that more people can view the colorful occasion. As in the past, the Festival itself is built around the quality of Chilton County peaches. Since the economic welfare of the county is so closely tied to the success or failure of the peach crop, it is vital that Chilton County be recognized as the [illegible] "top quality peaches."

Only through the concentrated efforts of growers, merchants, civic groups, and Peach Festival committee members can the tremendous task of advertising and selling the County's peach crop be accomplished. While the Peach Festival is a colorful, entertaining occasion intent is dead serious. The single and only objective is that of opening new market outlets for Chilton County peaches.

Milk Sales Show Profit After Thirty Days

MRS. HOUSTON JONES of Clanton Route 5, looks over the equipment she uses in handling the milk before sending it to the plant in Dadeville. Mrs. Jones has tated that the time spent with her cowssold milk less than two months, but she s paid more in dollars and cents than any other project on the farm.

Mrs. Houston Jones of Clanton Route 5, started selling milk the tenth of last month. Before starting, she checked with some of the other producers to find out just what was included in the sale of milk. Mrs. Jones then bought the equipment she needed to properly handle the milk and started in earnest to develop a sound dairy program. Mrs. Jones is now milking four cows. After keeping out milk for home use she is producing a can a day for sale. During the first thirty-day period, milk sales amounted to $84.80 after deductions were made for hauling.

Mrs. Jones stated that it takes one hour night and morning to complete the job of milking, straining the milk, and getting it ready for the truck to pick up. According to Mrs. Jones the dairy unit pays more money for the time spent than any other project on the farm.

As soon as peach season is over Mr. and Mrs. Jones plan to increase their milk sales to two cans a day, so that their monthly income from milk will amount to $150.00 to $160.00 per month.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have found that an economical dairy program is built around home grown feed and plans are being made to increase pasture and feed crops before the number of cows are increased.

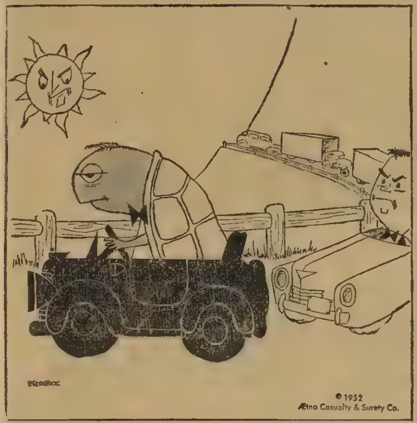
WHITE SUPREMACY — FOR THE RIGHT

WHO'S ZOO—ON THE HIGHWAY



DON'T BE A TURTLE on the open road. But if you must crawl, allow others room to pass.

NO FATAL FOURTH

What with the number of our drivers and passengers being killed on the highways these days the Fourth could be fatal to you as well as to anyone else.

No one is immune to death, so make this Fourth a happy holiday week end instead of bringing death and sorrow to your loved ones. One of our local citizens summed it up this week when he suggested the slogan at the top of our mast head on page one: "Sane Driving Will Save Lives."

STOO HOT!

Being the laziest person here about we really sympathize with these fellows who have to travel these hot days. Among the world's hottest places is an automobile and the only reason the expression, "hot as h—" came into being is that the automobile hadn't been invented.

According to the travelling men if you can get out onto the open road everything is pretty good, but you get caught in the slow traffic of a city or small town and the sun is beaming down at the rate of 100 degrees, things get tough. Most of them come into our office looking pretty well beat and if we have our drathers we'd drather sit in the shade this time of the year and let the salesmen come to us.

THE LOWER LIGHTS AREN'T BURNING. . . .

Folks are always talking about highway courtesy.

One courtesy, or you might say necessity, and one that you very seldom hear about is "dimming your lights."

While the absent minded fellow behind you drives along on your bumper with lights like air raid spotlights and you and the car coming towards you are trying to see who can last the longest without giving in it's pretty hard to find the highway at times.

Then too, it always seems to be a guy with lights that would shame that of an airplane beacon that rides along behind with his lights glaring.

Seriously, if you checked statistics on highway accidents probably a great number of fatal automobile wrecks and killings is due to blinding lights.

It is my guess that the dimmer switch on the floor of your car was put in for just such occasions as when you are meeting another auto or driving behind one. This is a mere guess of course but there doesn't seem to be any other reason for it cluttering up the floor of your car.

Since the topic of conversation is about auto accidents maybe you could save a life with just a little effort and a little courtesy. The other fellow would appreciate it.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

You never can tell what tantalizing information you'll pickup just by looking casually through a magazine. A few days ago, I made the welcome discovery that I'm not really to blame for my shortcomings, a point I've been secretly convinced of for years.

My mistake, according to the article, has been in trying to blame my defenseless ancestors for my faults when the whole trouble is that my house number is all wrong. The digits don't give the proper vibration, whatever that means. This theory is amazing, but I'm quite willing to accept it since it relieves me of a lot of responsibility.

The author of the article says tactfully that inhabitants of House Number Three (that's the number our address adds up to, according to her system) may "tend to scatter talents and energies." Now what she actually means is that dwellers in such houses are disorderly, unsystematic and slap-sided. But the wonderful thing is that I no longer must struggle to reform; all I have to do is move into a house whose address adds up to four for, she says, "House Number Four is run by order and routine. Discipline reigns!"

Reading the article further, however, I find I might prefer House Number Eight which "radiates wealth and power." The writer predicts that this house will have several cars in the garage, probably all high-powered. I can't think of an easier way of acquiring power, wealth and a garage full of high-powered cars than by merely moving into a house whose address adds up to eight.

That's why, when real estate agents start talking to us about buying another house, I've quit asking about the number of bedrooms or the condition of the roof or the heating system or the size of the lot. My only question these days is, "Does the address add up to eight?"

Of course the agents think I'm a bit eccentric, to put it mildly, but then they don't understand that my main hope for latching on to power, wealth and a garage full of high-powered cars depends on my moving into House Number Eight.

This June has been so hot that I really haven't been able to concentrate properly on vibrations of house numbers or on anything else except trying to keep cool.

The mother down the street, the one with the big family, uses a good trick to help her children forget the heat and go to sleep these sultry nights. After her youngsters are in bed, she sponges off their arms and legs with a little cool water to which several drops of fragrant cologne or toilet water have been added.

Then she gives each child a handkerchief with some of the same cologne or toilet water sprinkled on it and tells them to sniff it until they fall asleep. She declares this treatment helps the children forget the heat, relax and fall asleep quickly. It's certainly worth trying.

Like many other housewives, our neighbor around the corner serves cold cuts often during the summer months. As an addition to her cold meat platter at supper time, she likes to mix tuna fish with grated onion and mayonnaise, spread the mixture between big slices of ripe tomatoes, dab a bit of mayonnaise on top and broil until light brown. It tastes even better than it looks.

METHODS OF FLY CONTROL

Observation indicates that during the next few months flies will present a very great problem. Many more flies are in evidence now than is usual this early in the summer, and many requests have been received by the Health Department for information on various sprays for fly control. The procedures and chemicals recommended herein have proved successful.

Since the various decaying organic materials in which fly breeding takes place are objectionable from other standpoints than breeding flies, it is strongly believed that the best fly control measure is the elimination of the sources of breeding.

It has been observed that houseflies come mainly from three sources. These are garbage, manure in and around livestock shelters, and unsanitary privies. Best results can be obtained against flies by killing them in both the larval and adult stages, and it is desirbale to use one chemical which is effective against both stages. Our recommendation at this time is that chlordane is the insecticide of choice for this purpose. An emulsion spray containing 2½% chlordane should be applied at weekly intervals to garbage cans, areas of soil around garbage cans, to accumulation of manure and all other decaying organic matter in which fly breeding is found. To further increase effectiveness it is recommended that the protected surfaces of out buildings be sprayed with the same emulsion. A 5% DDT and rosin emulsion spray will also be effective against flies when sprayed on out buildings where flies accumulate. Care should be exercised in handling these sprays to avoid excessive inhalation and skin contact.

To obtain a 2½% chlordane emulsion, use one (1) part of 40% chlordane to 15 parts of water. If DDT is the chemical used, add 1 part of 25% DDT to 4 parts of water to obtain a 5% solution. Stronger or weaker chemical concentrates will of course require more or less water additive as the case may be. If small quantities only of spray is required, then the chemicals may be purchased already in solution and ready for use.

It is recmomended that every person make an inspection of his surroundings for possible sources where fly breeding might take place, and if possible eliminate the source, or if removal is impractical to control breeding and adult flies by chemicals. — G. M. Taylor, M.D., County Health Office.

NEW BUTTERFAT TEST MAY REPLACE THE OLD

A new test for determining the fat content of milk and cream has been announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Pete Turnham, API Extension dairy specialist, explains that instead of using sulfuric acid to act upon the milk proteins and break down the oil-water emulsion, a detergent compound and other chemicals are used. And no centrifuge machine is needed.

"The new milk test might easily revolutionize the entire milk testing program," states Turnham. "But many details will have to be worked out before it is practical for general use."

Dog Vaccination Dates

Dr. T. A. Hayes announces that all dogs three months of age and older are required by law to be vaccinated against rabies. We have had several cases of rabies in the last 12 months, in all parts of the county. We think this is due largely to lack of dog vaccination.

Due to the fact that we have had several cases of rabies in the county, we will have to enforce the law to the fullest extent. Your cooperation to meet these clinics and get your dog vaccinated will be greatly appreciated. It should be of personal interest to each individual to aid in elimination of rabies by having their dog vaccinated.

Below is a list of places where the clinics will be held. The price will be $1.00 per dog until September 1st, then it will be $2.00. Please meet at your most convenient place.

GET COTTON CLASSING REQUEST IN ON TIME

Auburn, Ala. — Applications for free cotton classing service under the Smith-Doxey Act must be submitted on or before July 31.

"Only farmers who are members of organized cotton improvement associations are eligible for free classing service," says O. N. Andrews, API Extension cotton improvement specialist. "Association officers make application for Smith-Doxey classing and arrange with ginners or warehousemen to act as sampling agents. In turn they cut a sample from each bale which is sent to the Birmingham or Montgomery classing office."

After a short time the farmers receive a card through the mail. It lists grade, staple, and gin preparation of the sample classed. This information enables the farmer to market his cotton wisely. And government lending agencies will accept the classing card as a basis for a government loan.

FROM THE LOCAL RED CROSS OFFICE TO ALL CHILTON COUNTIANS

Your American Red Cross is again recruiting blood donors, for it is time for another Birmingham Bloodmobile Unit to come our way for the purpose of collecting blood. The date is July 8th; place, basement of the Methodist Church in Clanton.

Won't you pledge a pint of your blood to save a life of a fighting man in Korea, or some civilian at home? The Armed Forces are urgently in need of blood, as well as the hospitals here in our own country. We feel sure you are willing to help us save a life, and also you could help us fill our quota by giving a pint of blood. We have failed each time we have had a visit from the Bloodmobile unit to make our quota, as it takes 300 donors in order for us to obtain our 165 pint quota each visit.

We are told that there is an average need by each of the wounded in Korea of nine pints and many require to 16 pints or more even months after they have left the battlefield, and are in hospitals. Some of the blood donated in this County has gone to Korea already.

Achievement of our goal is up to the hundreds of Chilton Countians, who are able and willing to answer the call. By our County participating in the Blood Program of the Red Cross we are able to keep in stock sufficient blood plasma to take care of emergencies at our local hospital here in Clanton; also we are eligible to have blood ordered from our Birmingham Regional Blood Center through our local hospital wherever needed.

The records show that 40 pints of blood have been shipped to the Central Alabama Hospital from the Birmingham Blood Center since your local Red Cross chapter in Chilton County has been a participant in this wonderful program.

Please contact your local American Red Cross Chapter office on Mondays, Thursdays or Saturdays for an appointment to donate a pint of blood when the next bloodmobile unit arrives.

LOCAL KIWANIANS ATTEND CONVENTION

WALTER J. L. RAY

Delegates attending the 37th annual convention of Kiwanis International at Seattle, Wash., elected a prominent Detr boitanker to head the organization in the year ahead

Officers of the Kiwanis Club of Clanton were informed today that Walter J. L. Ray, president of the Standard Federal Savings and Loan Association of Detroit, Mich., would succeed Claude B. Hellmann, Baltimore, Md., as president of Kiwanis International which is now comprised of 3,500 clubs throughout the United States, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, and the Yukon Territory.

President-elect Ray is the immediate past president of the United States Savings and Loan League, an organization of leading bankers from all sections of the United States. He is also a director and past president of the Detroit Mortgage Bankers' Association.

A Kiwanian for 24 years, the new president will assume office August 1. During the past year he served as treasurer of Kiwanis International. He had previously been an International trustee and governor of the Michigan Kiwanis District.

SUMMER CARE FOR STRAWBERRY PATCH

Summer care of the strawberry patch may have an important effect upon next year's crop, according to John Bagby, API Extension horticulturist.

After harvest, he says to bar off the rows with a turn plow, leaving about six inches of the original matted row. Some growers prefer to have this strip along one side of the row which shifts location of the bed each year. Next, thin out the plants with a hoe to about 18 inches apart. Then apply 400 to 500 pounds of 6-8-4 fertilizer per acre and work the soil back to the row.

"Some hand weeding and hoeing will be necessary if the rows are kept free of grass and weeds," adds Bagby.

LIVESTOCK FARMING CONSERVES THE SOIL

Livestock offers farmers an opportunity to increase their incomes and conserve and increase the productivity of their soils at the same time.

S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist, points out that on most Alabama farms, a program that will conserve, improve, and wisely use all of the land requires that much of it be devoted to thick-growing legumes and grasses. And livestock is the most efficient way of marketing such sod crops

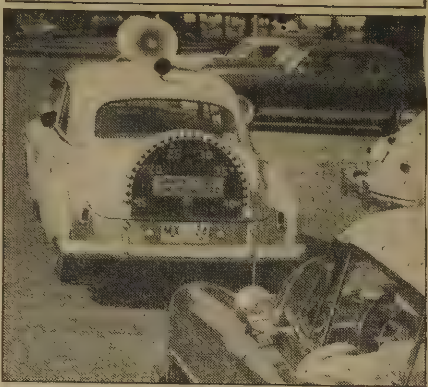
One hopper contains a high protein supplement, the second one has whole yellow corn in it, and the thir done is filled with whole oats.

Giant Speedometer Cuts Accidents



To make motorists conscious of speed limits, the Seattle, Wash. police department has put into operation a Powerglide Chevrolet with a precise speed clock mounted at the rear. Flashing red and amber lights on the giant exterior dial reflect the speed recorded by the car's speedometer. Police drive the car around the city an average of 90 miles a day and report it has reduced accidents appreciably. Two-way radio and a loudspeaker system to caution drivers are included.

A COW MUST HAVE GENTLE TREATMENT

Auburn, Ala. — Old bossy may be a good milk producer, but whether she decides to let you have it or not often means the difference between profit and loss.

Pete Turnham, API Extension dairy specialist, says getting all of the milk from her requires kind treatment on the part of the milker. In fact, milking cows completely dry by machines or hands depends upon just a few simple rules.

Tests show that proper massaging of the cow's udder for a minute prior to attaching the machine is important. It should be done with a cloth or paper towel that has been dipped in chlorine water as hot as the hands can bear. After the machine is attached leave it on the cow for three to five minutes. During this time the next cow can be prepared for milking.

Turnham adds that when the machine is removed, teat cups should be dipped in cold water and then chlorine water before attaching them to the next cow's udder.

BIRTHMARKS

The birth of a child into a family should mean great happiness, and usually it does. Frequently, however, the child will bear some blemish that brings heartache and grief to the family. Patients blame themselves, and this is wrong. Just why these blemishes or birthmarks occur is not known; but, as the late Dr. William Allen Pusey observed, this is just a part of the skin that was not built according to specifications.

Frights or other fears belong in the old "wives tales" handed down through the years. That they are responsible for any marking of the baby before birth cannot be proved in any medical experience.

Since the blemishes appear in different forms, such as growths with dark and roughened surfaces and excessive hair patches, the treatment is an individual problem. The location of the mark is also a consideration. For example, if it is near the eye, care must be taken not to impair the sight.

Parents should be alert to the care of birthmarks. Frequently, some are of the type that disappear in time without treatment; but it is not wise for a parent to make this decision himself.

Parents of children born with so-called birthmarks should remember that they are not at fault. This is a theory based on superstition and conjecture and has no scientific basis.

They should, however, make every attempt to seek competent medical service so that the treatment for the removal of the blemish can be started early. Marked improvement can be affected by the proper choice of treatment. This is true particularly today, regardless of the extent or location of the birthmark, whether it be an unusual distribution of skin pigment or whether it be an abnormal growth of blood vessels which cause the disfigurement.

For a quick salad, place one-half large peach on a crisp lettuce leaf. Fill with balls of pimiento and cheese filling, topped with mayonnaise.

PROVIDENCE BEAT 13

We had a nice group out for church Sunday. Bro. Fitts brought two wonderful messages Sunday and Sunday night. I am sure all the church will join me in saying, I don't think we could have found a man who would have made us a better pastor than Bro. Fitts. I wish to invite everyone out to hear him. He preaches every second and fourth Sundays.

We were glad to have Bro. Fitts' family out with us Sunday night. One of his daughters, Beth, sang a beautiful solo for us.

The community is very glad to have Sidney Sample from the Air Force home for a few days. He is going to help in our Vacation Bible School. He is being transferred to Puerto Rico. We all wish him good luck.

We were glad to see Wanda and Patsy Shaw back at church. They were missed while visiting in Florida.

FOLKS and THINGS ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Got the nicest and most appre- ated letter this week from Lewis ubanks. Lewis now resides at n Antonio, Texas. He says he esn't get his Chilton County News til Saturday morning, but he's ways looking forward to the postan's visit on that day. He says a of nice things about the News d we're proud.

Check your brakes — check acdents on the Fourth.

Another postcard came from Char- Wade and Minnie while they ere in Hollywood visiting the Stu- os. But Charles and Minnie get ound so fast in that flying maine of theirs that before you can y you heard from them—they're ck.

Speed may be a thriller—but it's o a killer. Drive carefully.

Frank Champion of Redonda, fornia, also wrote us a very omplimentary letter this week. rank sent his usual renewal sub- ption and added his appreciation Chilton County, the Chilton ounty News, and the State of Alaama in general. Frank says Caliornia is a mighty fine State, but it st don't stack up against "good le Alabama."

Always drive as though the other llow had the right-of-way. That's e best prescription for safe driv- g.

Mrs. Robinson is serving barbe- e plate at the Theatre Cafe as a pecial for the Fourth of July. She as going to sell all you could eat r a dollar, but we told her that ome pig might try to make a hog t of himself in a single sitting nd with pork jumping over the oon the same as the cow, that ould be no sport, much less a ugh. Now you are a much better eader than we are writer if you are ollowing us but let's get back to he Theatre Cafe. Shall we? The arbecue plate will be one dollar er plate t.o.d., or if you want to ake it with you, it will be one ollar per plate f.o.b. Course hether you take it one way or the ther it will always be f.o.b. after ou eat it.

C. Delle Cobb has lost her Maor again. Maj. W. R. Cobb left his week for the Aberdeen Provng Grounds, at Aberdeen, Maryand, where he will command the econd Battalion. He has been ome on leave since May 3rd, when e returned after more than 18 onths in the Far East.

Ed Yeargan is back from Wisconsin where he and his family spent their vacation with a daughter. Ed says from Illinois to Wisconsin they had too much rain, but back this way they had too little. Ed reports a good time despite the good and bad weather.

Here's a Swedish proverb you should read: "Fear less, hope more; whine less, breathe more; talk less, say more; hate less, love more; and all good things are yours."

Happy Fourth of July—but please drive careful.

Jack Hayes really gets around. See where he dined with, and spoke to, the Birmingham Diamond Club at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel Monday night. He and one of his old playing mates, Luke Appling, manager of the Memphis Baseball Club, were honor guests. Writing about Jack reminds us that the other week in conversation some one told us that he thought he'd run for Jack's job as Tax Collector. We told the fellow we wouldn't envy him his job. Jack is extremely popular and has conducted himself wisely as far as politics go. It will be practically impossible to beat him if he seeks re-election year after next.

Olive Fiquette from Restful Acres passes this to us and it is worth passing along to you: "Let your prayers for a good crop be short, and your hoeing long." That is another proverb. An Albanian Proverb. Boy keep 'em coming. It makes writing the column so much easier.

TAFT REGULARS BUILD FIRE TO DESTROY HIM

If Republicans expect to get a foothold in the Southern states, and to establish a vigorous, two-party system in each of them, they are losing a golden opportunity this year.

Some comment was made here the other day about how the Republican regulars had operated in Louisiana. Although in the minority in almost every parish, they ran roughshod over Eisenhower supporters and virtually stole all the delegates for Senator Taft.

In Texas this week, the Taft organization, which controlled the Republican state committee, went Louisiana one better.

Of 606 contested delegates from 31 of Texas' 254 counties, including all the large cities, only 10 pro-Eisenhower delegates were finally seated.

Seats were denied to the Eisenhower candidates on the ground that they had not been elected by "known Republicans."

The Taft minority at the convention charged that "Communists" were trying to infiltrate and take over the Republican party in Texas.

There was no definition of a "known Republican," but many of the Taft organization, when taunted by the Eisenhower advocates, were compelled to admit they had voted in a Democratic primary two years ago.

Banners proclaiming "Rob With Bob" and "Graft With Taft" were all over the convention floor and in the halls of the convention building.

Neither they, nor the public statement of Herbert Brownell of New York, former Republican national chairman, and the leader of the Eisenhower forces, had any effect on the hard-shelled Taft crowd. Brownell charged:

"What has happened in Texas demonstrates that the Taft forces now are convinced that they cannot win the nomination—so now they are out to steal it."

The regular Republicans in the South dominated by Senator Taft, have been consistently slamming the door in the face of discontented Democrats, as well as independents, in the delegate races. These converts have been given to understand their votes will be accepted in November, but that they can't and won't be taken into the Republican regulars' ranks in May and June.

If Senator Taft should be nominated by hook, crook or graft, it is apparent that he is building up so much resentment, in so many states, and among so many Democrats and independents who would like to vote the Republican ticket this fall, that he can't be elected, either by fair means or foul.

It is a pity that the Ohio senator, who is a man above personal reproach, will not repudiate the tactics of so many of his friends in the pre-convention campaigns.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Camp definitely does something for a boy, as the mother down the street can testify.

A few weeks ago she got her eight-year-old off to camp for the first time. He bid her a fond, almost tearful, goodbye, hugging her close and giving her a big kiss. After he had gone, she went into the house and had a good cry, just as many another mother has done on similar occasions.

The two scribbled post cards she had during his absence told her very little except that he liked swimming and was making some Indian moccasins.

Then came the big day when she went to camp to bring him home. As soon as she got out of the car, she saw him standing straight and tanned with a group of boys near the main building. She hurried toward him. When she got closer, she saw his lips moving and heard him muttering through clenched teeth, "Don't kiss me; don't you dare kiss me!"

Independence Day is the perfect time for a family picnic whether a backyard affair or a jaunt to a recreation spot. With heavy holiday traffic making the highways even more dangerous than usual, most of the families in our neighborhood will have stay-at-home celebrations.

The neighbor around the corner saves the giant size fruit juice cans to cook in when the family uses their backyard grill. No scrubbing of smoky or greasy pans and pots for her! When the food is done, she merely tosses the cans into the garbage.

This smart neighbor even uses a can for heating rolls. She puts the rolls into the can, lays it on its side near the edge of the grill and rolls it over frequently so that the bread will heat evenly.

Her other can cookery specialties iinclude potatoes and corn on the cob. To cook the potates, she chooses small spuds, scrubs them thoroughly and strings them on a long skewer or wire. Then she stands them up straight in a can of boiling water. When done, she removes them from the water, brushes them with melted margarine and browns them over the grill.

The next door neighbor has her frezeer (the hand-turned variety) ready to make a simple, but deliciously cooling lemon sherbet to help keep her family busy and happy during the afternoon.

Her recipe calls for two cups of sugar dissolved in two quarts of sweet milk. This is placed in the freezer and frozen until mushy. Then add the juice of seven lemons and continue turning the freezer until the sherbet is hard.

After we have heard the freezer turning for a considerable length of time, we plan to go over and offer our services so we can share in this refreshing reat!

And of course no picnic is complete without sandwiches. Here are some sandwich suggestions we collected in th pighborhood:

Spread peanut butter on one slice of bread, applesauce on the other.

Try a combination of Swiss cheese slices, pickle relish and cold sliced tongue.

Make a spread of cream cheese, minced onion, chili sauce and chipped dried beef.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

RELAXATION

The ability to relax at will is an innate quality in some persons; but in others it is a cultivated, self-taught process and one that everyone should learn.

Present-day living, with its increased tempo, working too hard and playing too hard account for tension and jittery nerves. This speeded effect of living would be all right, if the individual put just as much effort into seeking regular periods of rest and relaxation.

It is generally believed that people who live dynamically without being tense have four principal attributes which help them keep their balance: A certain natural rhythm to their daily activities which records them a peak of accomplishment to the valley of deliberate repose and rest, a sense of values which makes it possible to minimize effort and strain, an ability to reduce muscular tension in any part of the body at will, and an ability to cat-nap or actually fall asleep anywhere at any time when rest is needed by the mind and body.

Learning to relax can be achieved by deliberately concentrating on tensed muscles. One way is to sretch out flat on the bed, focusing the mind first on the feet, then on up the body to places that seem tight and taut. Do not clench the hands. Do not think about business or personal problems. Instead put your mind on pleasant thoughts, not on one particularly, but skip about mentally to entertaining experiences or episodes.

Some people leave too little time for sleep or complain they cannot sleep. An effort should be made to cut down on the intensity of thinking at least a half an hour before retiring. There are some individuals who can do with little sleep, but most of us require eight hours under favorable circumstances for mental poise.

To achieve a state of relaxation and release tension, an intelligent use of leisure time is essential. Some time should be devoted each day to carrying out a hobby, reading, seeing a movie or taking a long walk. Whatever the outlet, enjoy it; and keep the mind free of the problems of today and the perplexities of tomorrow.

If you find you cannot relax, are keyed up all the time, and are developing nervous habits and an irritable disposition, consult your physician. If you are organically sound, it may be just a matter of training to learn to relax.

If candy made with brown sugar curdles, don't be discouraged. This will disappear after cooling and beating.

MAULED SHERIFF TO GET HELP IN EVICTING WIDOW FROM HER FARM

Lapeer, Mich. — The Sheriff of Lapeer County, mauled nine days ago when he tried to evict a widow from her farm, won authority today to hire emergency deputies.

"I'm going to enforce the law," vowed Sheriff Clark Gregory after a circuit judge told him he could add as many deputies as he needs.

The husky sheriff, an ex-Marine, was tossed off the farm of Mrs. Elizabeth Sevens, 60, by a group of angry farmers June 2.

They were trying to prevent him from evicing the widow from the farm she lost at a sheriff's auction Mrs. Stevens had refused to pay a $172 assessment on a 17-year-old bankruptcy of a mutual insurance association.

In the meantime one of the farmers allegedly involved in the eviction fight, Harold Jarvis, 43, was held in Sheriff Gregory's jail. Four others have been freed on $2,000 bond. Jarvis was unable to raise the sum.

REGULAR MILKING AND FEEDING PAY

According to research by the Bureau of Dairy Industry regular milking and feeding increased milk production 3.9 per cent and fat production 5.2 per cent.

"Of course," says J. R. Parrish, API Extension dairyman, "these results mean that those who follow such practices will make more money."

Research also showed that heavy producing cows gave more milk when milked three times a day.

WHAT MOST DAIRY FARMS NEED

Perhaps the greatest single need on most dairy farms is more quality roughage.

Southern magnolia leaves and white gladioli decorated the spacious home on Selma Road.

The bride elect was lovely in a ballerina length dress of nile green organdy.

The buffet table, covered with green, was over laid with an exquisite imported lace cloth centered with a silver bowl of white gladioli and waxed magnolia leaves and flanked by silver candelabra holding white tapers.

Each card table where the guests were seated was lighted by a white taper garlanded with fern and byrsophlia.

A toast of happiness was given to the bride and groom to be.

Included in the courtesy were members of the family, members of the wedding party and out of town guests.

Wedding Breakfast—

On Wednesday morning, June 25, Mrs. Jimmie Taylor entertained at an informal breakfast, honoring Miss Peggy Ramsey and Mr. Ralph Weitenbeck, who were married on Wednesday afternoon.

Breakfast was served on the screneed porch of the lovely country home on Higgins Ferry Road.

Mrs. Taylor presented the honoree with an appropriate gift.

Guests included the honorees, their wedding attendants and out of town guests.

Miss Peggy Ramsey and Ralph Weitenbeck, her fiancee, were honored at 1 o'clock p.m. on Wednesday before their marriage at 4 o'clock, when Mrs. Julius C. Burnett, and her daughter, Mrs. Algert Agricola, entertained at a luncheon.

Lovely arrangements of gladioli and daisies were used in the reception rooms of the Burnett home.

In the dining room the luncheon table, covered with a linen cloth, was centered with a low silver bowl filled with pink carnations, stephanotis and valley lilies.

The guest list included the bridal party and out of town guests.

Marriage Vows Said At Afternoon Ceremony—

Miss Peggy Joyce Ramsey and Ralph Gerald Weitenbeck were united in marriage on Wednesday, June 25, 1952, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the Roman Catholic Chapel of the Resurrection in Clanton, with the Rev. Walter Mikosz, C.R., director of the Nazareth Catholic Missions of Montgomery, and pastor of the Chapel of the Resurrection officiating at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ramsey of Clanton. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Joseph Weitenbeck of Ashkosh, Wis.

The sanctuary and altar decorations were of magnolia foilage, palms, white gladioli and chiffon daisies. The Gothic Benediction candelabra holding white waxen Cathedral candles were the main altar adornment.

The candles were lighted by Joey Morris and Claud Craig, Jr., Acolyles.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Erle Ellis, who also sang Ave Maria during the wedding ceremony.

The bride given in marriage by her father was lovely in a chapel length bridal dress of white chantilly lace over satin with a fitted bodice. The neckline was finished with a small winged collar and the long pointed sleeves fastened at the wrist. Her shoulder length veil of illusion fell from a small coif cap of shirred illusion. She carried a cresent shaped bouquet of white maline with valley lilies and stephanotis and centered with a white orchid.

At the altar rail she was met by the groom and together they entered the sanctuary where both knelt upon the white covered pridieu until they received the nuptial blessings.

Miss Ramsey's only attendant was Mrs. Algert Agricola. She wore a short ice blue embroidered organdy. The puffed sleeves formed an offshoulder neckline. She wore a large hat of blue hairbraid. Her bouquet was of pink maline, similar to the bride's.

Cecila Craig, flower girl, wore a dress of frothy white organdy and she carried a nose gay of pink maline with stephanotis and baby breath.

Mr. Roy C. Rogers of Arkansas City, Kansas, served Mr. Weitenbeck as best man. Ushers were Mr George Stephenson of Alton, Ill., and Mr. Robert Shymkus of Harvey, Ill.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Ramsey wore a dress of ashes of roses lace chiffon. Her corsage was Fleur de Mour with stephanotis.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in their home, which was beautifully decorated with Southern magnolia leaves, white gladioli and daisies.

The receiving line consisted of Mrs. Ramsey, Mrs. Weitenbeck, Mr. Weitenbeck and Mrs. Agricola.

With a sterling silver sabra, the bride and groom cut the beautifully embossed three-tired wedding cake which was mounted on a mirrored plaque encircled in stephanotis, astors and fern. The cake centered the reception table, covered with an imported banquet cloth of fine linen cut work.

Guests were served neapoiltan ice cream and individual cakes, hand embossed in valley lilies.

Mrs. J. W. Hayes was in charge of the gift room. Presiding at the bride's book was Mrs. Crit Jones. Assisting in the hostess courtesies in the dining room were Mrs. Omar L. Reynolds, Mrs. C. C. GREAT AUNT MATILDA...

...by Eva Whetstone

I HAD ON OLD MAID great-aunt in the attic.

My husband and I inherited her with the rambling Victorian house built by my great-grandfather, in whose will "provision for board and shelter the rest of her natural life" was amply provided. Her name was Matilda. After living in the house 10 years, we had seen her no more than a half-dozen times—then only through a cracked door. An old servant, Lucy, who took her meals and cleaned the top floor room, was the only person with whom she communicated.

Aunt Matilda had shut herself away 40 years because she was awaiting a certain man's request to marry her. He was a man who existed only for her. No one else ever saw or heard of him.

When her last sister married long ago, Matilda announced she was receiving mail from an admirer. She explained to her surprised parents he was an out-of-town divinity student, who sat in the back pew at church one Sunday and spoke to her after service.

She said she was carrying on correspondence with him, who, she said, was in England waiting to go to Africa. She never spoke of receiving a letter, however, except when she was the one who picked up the mail. Neither her mother nor father could remember the young man, and no one with whom they talked remembered him, either.

Nevertheless, Matilda, helping her mother in household chores, was very preoccupied. One day stew, obviously from left-overs, was set before my great-grand father; and the gentleman, whose favorite recreation was eating, demanded why.

So my great-grandmother had to explain Matilda had done the shopping that day and lost the grocery list. Then while the man grumbled into his beard, my great-aunt rose with shaky dignity and declared that her mind had been on the young man, who that morning had written permission to ask for her hand.

"But since in my present state of mind I seen to upset you," she told her father, "I shall confine myself to my quarters until you hear from him. Please have Lucy bring my meals. No one else is welcome!"

With that, she left the table. The young man's petition never came, and Lucy was the only person who ever talked to her again.

When my husband and I moved into the house, we worried about Aunt Matilda's health. But Lucy assured us that, despite 80-odd years, my aunt was in the pink of condition.

One morning, we were reading our separate sections of the paper, when suddenly there was a soft cough and a bright-eyed little old lady in old-fashioned clothes stood in the door.

"Niece," she said, "for you must be the one Lucy tells me about—I've just discovered a very serious mistake!"

She thrust before me a yellowed envelope, across which the name "Mr. John R. Davis" was barely legible. "No wonder they never heard from him," she continued as my husband and I sat speechless. "This morning I was straightening about, when this letter droped from a coat lining—there was a hole in the pocket. You know, I can't blame Father for being upset. I mailed the grocery list!

"However, there'll be time for cahtting later," she declared. "Right now I must mail this letter. He's probably thinking it's not coming!"

"Go after her!" I demanded of my husband as Aunt Matilda hurried out the front door. "Do something to keep her from mailing that letter! In the meantime, I'll burn this newspaper."

I realized that on the envelope was the second place I had seen the name "John R. Davis." The first had been a moment before, in a news item.

It told how the body of a bachelor missionary, serving nearly 40 years in the African jungles without leave, was being returned here because of a deathbed wish to be buried near the only woman he ever loved.

The Vacation Bible School at Mulberry ended last Friday evening with a commencement at the church. There were enrolled for the week 74 students and 19 teachers and workers. From what was shown at the commencement in their program and the hand work on display we know the school was a great success.

The revival will begin at Mulberry the fourth Sunday in this month. Rev. Lucas will be the evangelist.

The monthly meeting of the W. M. S. will meet at the church on Monday, July 7th, at 7:30 p.m.

The library is open now on Sunday morning and Sunday night. There is lots of good reading material for everyone, especially the adults. We are ever anxious for you to take advantage of this great opportunity to get better acquainted with different subjects and things that are worthwhile to read. We need more children's books. If anyone has any to donate to the library they will be appreciated.

In the slander suit of Miss Lutey Puffyback vs. Miss Lavinia Loveless, Judge Crooker ruled that Miss Lutey was not slandered when called a "fat pig" by Miss Lavinia. Miss Lutey said, right out in court, that she was kind of glad she lost the decision, because she had been wanting to call Judge Crooker a "fat pig" for a long time and was glad to have the court approve of name calling.

Parson Peters attended a church conference in the city last week. He says the waiters up there are as independent as a Baptist at a Methodist prayer meeting. In one eating establishment, Parson prayed for 30 minutes for the waiter's eye. Parson says: "Maybe Gabriel came down with his horn, because the waiter finally looked faintly interested and set a glass of water across the table from me as if someone was sitting there."

Collard Green, "champeen greenhorn," was charged today with assault with a deadly weapon. He took a shotgun to Dasher Asher, telegraph boy, who came to his house with one of those singing birthday telegrams. When the court inquired why the warbled wire made him so all-fired hot, he explained it wasn't his birthday.

This Week In Washington

THIS COLUMN has information that Governor Stevenson will accept the Democratic nomination . . . that the only thing which has been holding back an unqualified answer is his health . . . that he has undergone an operation for kidney stones and is now promised good health . . . that he is the choice of a large majority of Democratic leaders. Upcoming as a strong choice is Averell Harriman, the New Deal-Fair Dealer, who polled a 4 to 1 vote against Senator Kefauver in the Democratic primary in Washington.

As a result Senator Kefauver, who has been [illegible] down straw men in a score of primaries is caught up short, and the record is that where he has run up against real flesh [illegible] presidential candidates he has [illegible] three out of four Russell [illegible] in Florida; Harriman beat him in the District of Columbia, and he won over Senator Kerr in Nebraska, but came up short on delegates from that state.

The likeable and sincere Tennesseean thus is relegated to at least third place in the Democratic free-for-all at Chicago starting July 21, and it is likely that by the end of the second ballot most of his delegate strength will have melted away.

What will happen to civil rights in the platforms of the two conventions? In 1948 the Republicans advocated abolition of poll tax, declared for right of equal opportunity to work favored enactment and enforcement of federal legislation necessary to maintain that right.

The Democrats in 1948 called upon congress for support of full and equal political participation in elections and, on FEPC, endorsed right to equal opportunity of employment. But since that time, neither party took any definite action. A majority of both parties in the house voted 273 to 116 to abolish the poll tax as a requisite of voting in 1949, but the senate took no action. In 1950, a poll tax rider on the oleo bill was tabled 59 to 17, the vote being 44 Democrats and 15 Republicans for tabling and 17 Republicans against. In 1951 and 1952 no action of any kind was taken despite repeated messages by the President asking for action.

On FEPC both Republicans and Democrats overwhelmingly approved an FEPC with investigating and recommending powers only in the house, and the senate took no action after two failures to invoke cloture on a motion to take up the FEPC bill. In 1951 and 1952 there was no action at all. So both parties failed to uphold their platform planks on the poll tax as a voting necessity and FEPC to guarantee civil rights to minorities.

This year millions of citizens will watch both national conventions on television. As a matter of fact, the conventions and political parties are not provided for by the Constitution and federal elections laws supervise them only to extent of checking money spent. Each party makes its own convention rules. In electing delegates, for instance, the Democratic party gives each state two votes for each of its senators and representatives and a bonus of four votes if the state went Democratic in 1948. At the Democratic convention there will be more delegates than votes, because some delegates will have only one-half vote.

The Republicans give four votes to each state, plus six if the state went Republican in 1948, plus one vote for each congressional district casting 1,000 GOP votes in 1948, and a bonus of one more for 10,000 Republican votes. There are no half-vote delegates. So Republicans get 1,206 votes with 604 necessary for nomination.

Good Market For Cattle And Hogs

Auburn, Ala. — Heavy summer marketing of cattle and hogs is almost here, according to A. W. Jones, API Extension marketing specialist.

And he says farmers have three good reasons to sell many animals during July, August, and early September.

For example, the supply of good market hogs and beef cattle is low at this time of year. The large runs of animals to market that were fed out from the previous year's crop are over.

Also, the short market supply of meat animals increases demand, resulting in higher prices. During the last four years a 200-pound hog sold in Alabama in July brought an average of $46.25, while the same size and weight hog sold in December brought only $34.10.

And last but not least, with abundant grazing and early corn, Alabama farmers can finish out beef cattle and hogs more economically at this time of year.

STATE JERSEY OWNERS SERVE NATIONAL CLUB

A recent report by the American Jersey Cattle Club shows that Alabama breeders rank high in programs sponsored by the club.

J. R. Parrish, API Extension dairyman, points out that Alabama breeders rank seventh in number of cattle on registry of merit test and seventh in classification. Alabama ranks sixth in number of new breeders and ninth in number of registrations. The State ranks fifth in Junior membership, and there are 77 members of the American Jersey Cattle Club in Alabama.

CARE OF FARM MACHINERY

Very few farm implements and machines are at work for more than a few days or weeks a season. But their chief enemies—rust, corrosion, and decay — are busy the year around. Therefore, give machinery proper care, especially at the end of the operating season.

PUREBRED CATTLE RECORDS

Breeders find that it pays to keep purebred cattle records in a safe place.

MRS. ALICE NIX

Mrs. Alice Nix, age 80, of Maplesville, Ala., died at her home suddenly at 6:30 a.m. Thursday, June 26th. Funeral services were held from Maplesville Baptist Church at 3:00 p.m. Friday, June 27th, conducted by Rev. Paul Oden and Rev. Hyman Atcheson. Interment in Macedonia Cemetery.

She is survived by the husband, W. D. Nix; one son, L. D. Nix of Maplesville; three daughters—Mrs. Olys Kincaid of Maplesville, Mrs. Bessie Hayes of Maplesville and Mrs. Alvys Aldridge of Maplesville; 10 grandchildren, and 13 great-grandchildren. Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

FREEZING A WHOLE, READY-TO-COOK BIRD

Auburn, Ala. — Properly packaged poultry can be frozen either whole or cut up, according to Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservation specialist.

She points out that roasting birds are usually frozen whole. Younger chickens or turkeys take up less space and are more convenient to use if split in half for broiling or disjointed for frying, and then compactly packaged.

"Most families prefer to freeze poultry in ready-to-cook form," finds the specialist. "In other words they want birds to be fully drawn, thoroughly cleaned inside and out, with pinfeathers and oil sac removed.

To package a whole ready-to-cook bird for freezing, Miss Curtis says to tie legs and wings close to the body, then place bird in a film bag or wrap in a sturdy sheet of moisture-vapor-resistant film or metal foil. Giblets should be packaged separately for freezing and held only a limited time—not longer than three months.

A teaspoonful of baking powder added to potatoes while they are being mashed will make them light and fluffy. Also, add the salt when the potatoes are nearly nearly done instead of at first.

A good way to use up cold bacon is to grate it over the top of a vegetable salad or an au gratin dish such as potatoes or rice and cheese. It imparts a delicious flavor and adds food value.

If sandwich bread is too tresh to slice easily, place in refrigerator to get thoroughly cold. This firms it.

MRS. MATTIE A. JOHNSON

Mrs. Mattie A. Johnson, age 78, of Bessemer, Ala., died at Bessemer General Hospital at 5:15 p.m. June 26th. Funeral services were held from Alpine Baptist Church at 11:00 a.m., Saturday, June 28th, conducted by Rev. R. E. Wilkins. Interment in Alpine Cemetery.

Pallbearers were: Hugh G. Sims, Henry Lee Sims, Eugene B. Sims, Hoyt Johnson, Wallace Johnson and Frank Baton.

She is survived by three sons—T. F. Johnson of Birmingham, J. B. Johnson of Bessemer and L. E. Johnson of Birmingham; four daughers—Mrs. Carl Allie of Plantersville, Mrs. H. L. Sims of Bessemer, Mrs. Cliff Sims of Bessemer, and Mr.s L. A. Wilker of Bessemer; two brothers, Thomas Ousley of Bay Minette, Ala., and R. L. Ousley of Plantersville; 19 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

A THOROUGH RINSE AVOIDS SOAP STAIN

Soap that is not rinsed out of clothes during the laundering may show up in a brownish stain resembling iron rust when the clothes are ironed, according to Levice Ellis, API Extension clothing specialist. Therefore, give clothing a thorough rinse.

Baseball—

Clanton baseball fans are in for a real treat Sunday afternoon

"Bull" Watkins, one of our Chilton County best known and most colorful ball players, will bring the hard-hitting Lomax team to the City Park to battle the Clanton team.

The Lomax team has the best record of any Chilton County team to date, and it is going to take some real pitching and fielding to hold their sluggers.

"Bull" Watkins has assembled a team from players all over the county. The Clanton team is composed of Clanton and Alabama Mills players and since these two teams have combined forces, they have won four games out of five

The largest crowd of the year should be on hand for the big game of the year.

Last Sunday Clanton played Selma and won by a score of 7-6.

This Friday, July 4th, at 2:30 p.m. the Clanton-Alabama Mills team will play the Selma Athletics at the City Park. Then a second game will be played at Selma at 8:00 p.m. Everyone who can, attend these games.

WASHING RICE IS NOT RECOMMENDED

Auburn, Ala. — One old, familiar kitchen practice, outdated by recent research, is washing or rinsing rice before and after cooking.

Years ago when rice was sold in bulk, washing before cooking was necessary to be sure the rice was clean. But packaged rice today is a clean product. After cooking, rice was rinsed to separate the grains, but newer cooking methods have made this unnecessary. Washing rice wastes not only time but also nutritive value.

Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, reveals that vitamin value may be washed off brown and partially polished rice. Tests show that brown rice loses about 10 per cent of its original vitamin B1 when washed through five changes of water, even though the washing is rapid. As for partially polished rice, tests show that it loses about 20 per cent of its thiamine through washing and cooking. Washing off the powdery rice polish which clings to the grains probably accounts for much of this loss.

"White rice, which has little or no Vitamin B1, is eaten by many people," adds Miss Hulsey: "It is much better to serve brown unpolished rice or, at least, the partially polished rice which contains about 70 per cent as much Vitamin B1 as the brown rice."

START CHANGING NOW TO CONSERVATION FARMING

Auburn, Ala. — A change to conservation farming will maintain and improve the soil while it is being used.

"Conservation farming fits into and becomes a part of the regular farm program," states S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist. "However, changing to conservation farming should be done gradually. The important thing is to get started now and work toward putting every acre of the farm to its best use while conserving and improving the soil.

Many farmers already practicing conservation farming say that since lay-by season is approaching, now is a good time to start planning for fall and winter farming. The plans might include a "cover of green" on every acre of row cropland; overseeding sericea with reseeding crimson clover or Caley peas, and preparing land, fertilizing and seeding lowland areas to fescue and white clover.

The specialist adds that saving soil and increasing its productivity to a high level is good business. And the time to start is right now.

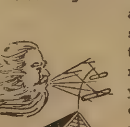
DANGER!

Relating to Television Antennae

The main purpose of this advertisement is to try to save a life—perhaps yours—by calling attention to possible hazards incidental to the erection of TV antennae.

If your antenna is to be mounted on a roof, have someone erect it who is accustomed to working on roofs or higher. Do not install the antenna too close to electric wires, even if they are only service wires to the house. You may come in contact with them during erection, or your antenna may be blown into them during a storm. This could be dangerous.

If your antenna is on a tall pipe or tube mounting, you should give careful attention to the guy wires, as well as the supporting fastenings. Be sure they are strong enough and securely fastened. There should be at least four of them. They should be of rust-resisting material, and you should check their condition every two or three years. It is especially necessary that you keep such antenna mountings well in the clear of electric wiring because they are limber, top-heavy, hard to handle, and because they fall easy prey to strong winds.



If you have to go "really up in the air" for your TV signals, then your antenna may be mounted on a pole or mast. If you use a pole, be sure it is a substantial, treated wood pole set sufficiently deep so that it will not fall. You may have to guy a pole, and you will always have to guy a metal mast. Be sure the guys and fastenings are adequate and that they are of rust-resisting metal. In some cases you will need more than one set of guys. Don't take chances with adjacent electric wires during erection.

People have been killed in Alabama due to antennae falling across live electric wires. Other persons have been killed trying to get the first victims away from the live wires.

If you are about to erect an antenna or have one erected—please require these three things:

Adequate initial strength
Safe clearance from electric wires
Amply strong, rust-resisting guys and fastenings

One more very important caution: If perchance an antenna gets into any live electric wires during erection or later—or if you have to deal with live electric wires which have fallen or burned down—do not attempt to touch or move such live wires or anything in contact with them. Keep people away from them and notify the nearest Power Company office, or the Police or the Fire Department.

Observing these simple precautions may save a life—perhaps your own.

Roswell E. Owens Evangelist At Concord Revival

The time of our revival is the first week in August. It will begin on August 3rd and continue through August 10th. Rev. Roswell E. Owens of Moulton, Alabama, will be our evangelist. Brother Owens is well knwon in our community and there is none better. The pastor sought God's Will in selecting the evangelist and we are sure that God's Will has been obeyed in the extending and the accepting of the invitation.

We are going to do everything in our power to make this the greatest revival in the history of our church. We know that we need reconsecration in our church, and we are now calling on you, each of you, to attend to your part of this now. We know that music has a great deal to do with the success of a revival and under the teaching of Miss Mary Clyde Mims we are building a great choir. We know that physical comfort will add lots to the revival and we are now spending several hundred dollars to make our church cool.

We recognize the power of prayer and we are not going to neglect that. We also know that faith without works is dead, so we are going to work and work hard. We know that we become a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal without love, so we are going to love each other and the lost. We know the power of the Holy Spirit and we are going to let Him take us by the hand and lead us.

Come to the revival at Concord and I believe you will feel a power that you have not felt for a long time.

No Off Season On Accidents

Safety's A 365 Day Job

MAKING a living on the farm is not getting any easier—but, unfortunately, making death on the farm is getting easier and quicker.

Scientific agriculture calls for more, better, and faster operating equipment. These modern tools are essential in the farmer's fight to keep up with the spiraling cost of living. But these same modern tools are frequently a battleground of many casualties.

Death springs to attack each time we rush a job. The farmer, who speeds up his tractor to get the breaking job done before it rains, forgets that he may never get the job done if he strikes a stump and falls under his roaring machine.

The housewife who, in a hurry to get dinner on the stove because the baby is crying, forgets that a boiling pot of food left with the handle sticking out may be the cause of a serious burn for herself or a child reaching for the handle.

Old dangers still reak havoc, too. Any farmer knows that a dairy bull can be as dangerous as a roaring locomotive—but dangerous bulls roam at will on many Alabama pastures. You don't need to have but one run-in with a bull to lose—your life.

Farm Safety Week shouldn't be like a holiday season which comes but once a year, and once observed, is soon forgotten for another year. Although July 20-26 is officially designated as National Farm Safety Week for 1952, this week should serve as just a beginning point for a safety program planned for all of the year.

TRANSACTION COMPLETED—Recently John Charles Richardson walked into the Cherokee County Bank, in Centre, and completed his first financial transaction. The 14-year-old 4-H Club member paid off a note he had made to get money to buy a beef calf. Early last year John Charles borrowed $225 from the bank to buy his calf. After feeding out the calf he sold it for $408. Counting feed costs, interest on money borrowed, and other expenses he made a net profit of $96 on the calf.

John Charles, who lives on Centre, Rt. 2, is shown above as he pays off the note to Bank Cashier Emmett James.

"SHE'S GOT THE RIGHT IDEA!"

SAFETY in the home and on the farm isn't a job that can be turned over to one member of the family. Safety requires a watchful attitude on the part of everyone. Loose planks, tattered wiring, a misplaced toy, or any one of a thousand other things can bring pain, grief, and expense into the home.

With improved roads now linking most farm communities with nearby towns, the amount of traffic, and especially the speed of cars and trucks, passing through the countryside has greatly increased. This means added danger for the youngsters who take a bicycle spin on the road during the twilight hours.

One way to offset this danger is by attaching inexpensive reflectors to the front and rear fenders of bicycles. And Katie Ann Gray, at right above, had the correct idea when she took on this job as part of her 4-H Club safety project. The 11-year-old St. Clair County 4-H'er is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Gray, of Pell City, Rt. 1.

"Spuds" Are Scarce

For Extra Cash Plant A Fall Crop Of Potatoes

By JOHN BAGBY
A.P.I. Extension Horticulturist

THE market for Irish potatoes this year has been unusually strong with most potatoes selling at ceiling prices or higher. For some time there have not been enough potatoes to supply the demand. Although supplies may increase when the late crop from other states goes to market, there is every indication that prices will continue to be high throughout the year.

Alabama farmers, especially those in the northern part of the state, might take advantage of this situation by planting a fall crop. The late crop is somewhat more difficult to grow and yields are generally lower than in the spring, but when proper methods are used in production, and where growing conditions are fairly good, there is an opportunity for profit.

A few essential points must be carefully followed if satisfactory results are to be obtained.

Thorough preparation of land is the most vital factor. Early and deep plowing followed by several diskings has been found to give best results. Rows should be laid off with a medium-sized shovel plow, and the fertilizer should be mixed into the row or placed in bands to each side. After planting, the seed should be covered as deeply as possible by throwing one furrow up from each side with a turn plow. When seed have sprouted and are almost to the surface, drag off the tops of the beds leaving three or four inches of soil covering the seed pieces.

The right kind of seed is also an important factor. Bliss Triumph and Sebago from the South Alabama spring crop have given good results, provided they come from disease free fields, and have had at least 50 to 60 days rest period. Seed from the previous late crop in the North are also satisfactory. Seed dug and replanted within two or three weeks often give poor stands and low yields. The seed pieces should weight at least one to one and one-quarter ounces.

Use 800 to 1,000 pounds of 4-10-7 fertilizer for the fall crop. Side dressing with 100 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent may help increase yields.

July 20 to 25 is about the right planting date in North Alabama. It is well to time the planting with the usual July rains so that there will be enough moisture in the soil to germinate seed and get them off to a good start.

For further details see your County Agent and ask for Extension Circular No. 20[illegible].

BUILT TO LAST—Terraces on this Choctaw County farm were built to endure many years of rain and wind. The terraces in the field above were constructed about 1870, yet they are still doing the job they were built for—stopping erosion. Paul D. Burns, left, of Riderwood, shows the height of the terrace to County Agent Matthew Sexton.

Wiring For Safety

By WILLIAM T. COX
A.P.I. Extension Specialist in Farm Buildings

ELECTRICITY on a farm should be a sign of progress for that particular farm. Electric service should mean more than mere comfort and convenience; it should mean the elimination of drudgery, the saving of time and labor, the conservation of food, a greater net income, and a higher standard of living.

The first problem confronting new electricity users is that of wiring the premises. One of the greatest problems facing those who already have electric service is the modernization of existing wiring systems. The service obtained from the different appliances and equipment in the home and on the farm, the economy of operation, the time and labor saved, and the safety of operation—all depend on the "wiring system."

Safety should be the first consideration in a wiring job. Most power companies or associations require that all wiring be done in accordance with the National Electric Code. This code is a set of rules and regulations set up for electrical wiring, chiefly from the standpoint of safety—safety from fire hazard and electrical shock. An understanding of the code requires certain technical knowledge and is the responsibility of the wiring contractor. But it is the responsibility of the home owner to hire a reliable contractor who understands the code and who also knows wiring materials.

As a final precaution, any completed electrical job should be inspected by a competent inspector before final payment is made. Satisfaction that your system is safe from the standpoint of fire hazards and electrical shock will far more than offset the few dollars necessary for the inspection. Consult your nearest power association or company for this service.

Minor Element Requirements

FOR maximum yields and quality, alfalfa, crimson and other clovers grown for seed, and a variety of horticultural crops, require boron, according to results of experiments conducted by the API Agricultural Experiment Station. The needed boron can be easily supplied in the form of borax.

Zinc, generally added as zinc sulfate, is recommended for corn and pecans on sandy soils in the southern part of Alabama for maximum yields and quality.

With the exception of the cases listed above, the great majority of crops grown in Alabama obtain enough of the minor elements, boron, zinc, copper, and manganese from the soil for maximum yield and quality. However, more of these minor element needs will probably show up in the future as the supplies are cropped out of the soil.

In Choctaw County

Terracing Land Is An Old Story

TERRACING isn't a fad of modern-day farming. In fact, terracing land to stop erosion has been going on in Alabama for more than a century.

Not long ago Choctaw County Agent Matthew Sexton got to wondering about the subject and began checking on old terraces in the area. He found that terracing was a well-known farm practice as far back as 1840.

Evidence that Samuel C. Ruffin, a large landowner before the Civil War, did extensive terracing on his 10,000-acre plantation is still evident. Some of these terraces, built by slaves, are still standing.

"They really built them to stand up back in those days," declares Paul D. Burns, of Riderwood. "On my farm there are terraces that were built more than 80 years ago by my father. Some of the 'Ruffin terraces' are still standing up too."

In one field on the Burns farm three crops of timber have grown up and been cut, but the terraces are still there.

"I moved here 42 years ago," says Burns, "and I haven't touched the terraces in that field over there." These terraces are still two feet high and the area shows very little erosion.

With the rapid expansion of cattle production and pasture development, terracing has declined in popularity during the past few years. However, terracing row-crop land today, as 100 years ago, is a mighty sound farm practice.

Tractors have established a great performance record except where the operator lets an accident mar the record. Tractors are reported to be involved in nearly 75 per cent of all accidents with farm machinery. All these accidents are needless. The cause is usually thoughtlessness, carelessness, or misuse.

Many farmers are waiting too long to cut sericea for hay or to graze it. Cut sericea when 10-12 inches high. If cutting is delayed beyond that stage, the stems become woody and the leaves shatter badly.

Along the Way

with P. O. DAVIS
DIRECTOR, API EXTENSION SERVICE

ELMER DAVIS who attained fame as a radio commentator during the last World War makes this significant statement:

"The most important thing in the world, I believe, is the freedom of the mind. All progress, and all other freedoms, spring from that. It is a dangerous freedom, but this is a dangerous world.

"You cannot think right without running the risk of thinking wrong, but for any evils that may come from thinking, the cure is more thinking.

"Over much of the world at present, the freedom of the mind is suppressed. We have got to preserve it here, despite the efforts of very earnest men to suppress it—men who say, and perhaps believe, that they are actuated by patriotism; but who are doing their best to destroy the liberties which above all are what the United States of America has meant, to its people and to humanity."

His emphasis upon freedom of the human mind is both timely and true.

It reminds me that God himself created the world with his mind, not with his hands, or with tools. In that creation was man whom God placed in charge of everything on the earth, including the air and the sea.

For man to succeed his mind must be free, as God's mind was free in creating the world and setting it in order through man. So each of us is challenged to keep our own minds free and help others do the same.

Congressman Clifford Hope of Kansas has written about a farm program for this year and the future. He said that it should have these aims:

(1) Stability in farm prices and a fair exchange value for farm products.

(2) Insure a continuing ample food supply.

(3) Enable farmers to assume all the responsibility possible in planning and operating farm programs.

Stability of prices of farm products at a fair level has been discussed by me for many years and on numerous occasions. It is vital to a sound farm program, to good farm living, and to a safe America.

Then, of course, we must have plenty of food, fibers, and fats. In other words, we must have enough farm products of all kinds at all times.

And there's no valid reason to argue that farmers shouldn't have full responsibility in administering their programs, keeping in mind always that they must be administered fairly, justly, and efficiently for the good of every farmer and his family.

Farm Safety

Last year accidents on U. S. farms killed 1,500 people monthly, or 50 daily. And for each person killed, eight suffered disabling injuries. There were also big losses in property.

These figures are alarming. The best way to reduce the number of accidental deaths and injuries on farms is by diligent caution each day in every way, or in everything done on the farm or in the farm home.

July 20-26 will be National Farm Safety Week. President Truman designated it by a proclamation in which he requested "every farm resident to cooperate in carrying out effective safety measures."

Let's remember that machines provide more opportunities for accident; and both farms and farm homes are becoming mechanized. Machines are wonderful servants but, on the other hand, they can be fatal.

Hazard Hunting

Safety On The Farm

HAZARD hunting on the farm requires no costly equipment or expensive ammunition. In fact, you don't even need a license. An alert mind, sharp eyes and ears, and a sense of caution are the only necessities. Another nice thing about hunting hazards—you don't have to use up your vacation time to enjoy this sport. And, what's more, everyone should include hazard hunting as part of their daily routine.

A hazard often hides like a "wolf in sheep's clothing," and unless we are on our toes we may mistake its identity or lose its tracks through lack of careful observation.

Take working with electricity, for instance. We all know that electrocution is the hazard to avoid; however, we often miss such telltale tracks as damp floors, frayed wires, and worn switches which may lead to an injury.

Scaffold work might also be cited. A fall is the hazard for which one must constantly be on the alert. Worn tackle, cracked stage planks, and faulty bracings are some of the tracks we must look for if we want to "tree" the hazard.

Once the hazard is treed, it's a simple matter to do away with it by repairing or replacing the defective equipment—in other words, "killing the hazard before it grows into a big vicious accident."

Start now and track 'em down! Remember, it's always open season in the hunt for hazards!

"In The Chips"

Marion 4-H'er Makes Profits With Junior Dairyman Project

IT doesn't take a daily, weekly, or monthly allowance to keep James Deline, of Hamilton, Rt. 2, "in the chips," because this Marion County 4-H Club member has a dairy project that brought in over a dollar a day throughout 1951.

James lives on one of the eight manufactured milk routes in the county and made a wise selection when he decided to carry on a junior dairyman project last year. Totaling up his records at the end of the year, James found that he had sold $490.15 worth of milk from his cow. After subtracting hauling charges of $43.86 and feed and other costs which amounted to $75, James ended up with a net profit of $371.28.

The 11-year-old 4-H'er says he didn't miss the few minutes it took him to milk and care for the cow each day, but he sure would miss the handy cash his spotted Jersey brought in every two weeks.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Deline, James is still carrying his milking project and has recently added another dairy enterprise. He is now raising a registered Jersey bull.

Best market for slaughter cattle usually comes about mid-summer. Last winter and spring there were large numbers of steers fattening in corn belt feed lots. Most of these will be marketed before July 1. Then next fall when large numbers of cattle come off grazing and go to market we will probably see lower cattle prices. It is good cattle marketing management to sell slaughter cattle in the summer.

LOYAL MEMBER OF THE HERD—At left above H. N. Phillips and A. G. Phillips, of West Point, Rt. 5, pose with a faithful member of their herd. The cow originally cost $36, and for the past two years her calves have sold for more than three times what the old cow cost. She has raised nine calves for the Phillips.

BIG IMPROVEMENT—Warner Phillips, extreme right, says there has been quite an improvement in pastures since he was a boy. He is shown at right above discussing fescue and white Dutch clover with, left to right, E. L. Stewart, Chambers County Agent; A. G. Phillips, and H. N. Phillips.

Old Timer Sees Chambers' Farming Change From Hit Or Miss Proposition To Sound, Row Crop--Livestock System

IN almost three-quarters of a century Warner Phillips has seen many changes in farming styles. He has watched Chambers County farming change from a hit or miss system of row-cropping to a balanced system with livestock and pastures a major item.

And he has had a front seat for his observations on the farm of his two sons—A. G. and H. N. Phillips.

"Folks talk about not having winter pastures 10 years ago," says Mr. Phillips. "We didn't have any pastures at all when I was growing up, didn't need them. We didn't have any cattle."

A fellow who had tried to grow cattle for a living during Mr. Phillips' day would have been laughed out of the county. "I remember a man who bought a milk cow and a young calf for only eight dollars," he says. "He raised his family on milk from the cow, then sold her for five dollars."

Mr. Phillips says that an occasional "cow tradin'" with a neighbor was the extent of cattle marketing.

However, the picture is far different today. Take the case of A. G. and H. N. Phillips. They began only 10 years ago, but they now have a herd of 200 brood cows—50 of them registered. Last year they sold about 100 steers for beef and 13 purebred Hereford bulls as breeding stock.

"In 1943 we bought an old black cow of 'mysterious' breeding for only $36," says Alvin Phillips. "We have already gotten nine calves from her. And for the past two years her calves have each sold for more than three times what we paid for the old cow."

Once the Phillips brothers got started as cattlemen, they began building a good pasture program. During the past two years they have reclaimed about 100 acres of hills and swamps for pastureland. On the hillsides they are growing Bermuda grass and subterranean clover.

"From Christmas to Christmas, Bermuda and subterranean clover gives us more grazing than any other crop we have ever tried," they say.

Other grazing crops being used include fescue and ladino or white Dutch clover on bottom lands, sericea on upland, and a combination of crimson clover, Caley peas, vetch, ryegrass, and fescue.

These Chambers County farmers, of West Point, Rt. 5, believe they have hit on the right system now, so they're sticking to it. They recently bought a bulldozer and plan to reclaim more land to put into pastures.

"That's so the pastures will stay ahead of the cows," they explain.

Bug Poison Can Be Human Poison

ALL of the insecticides used today, except pyrethrum, are poisons and should be handled and used as such. Rotenone (derris) and cryolite are not dangerous to use and can be handled without much danger to animals or people.

Calcium, lead arsenate, and nicotine are not dangerous unless taken internally. But they are deadly poisons if swallowed.

Most of the new cotton poisons are safe to use if reasonable precautions are taken. Phosphate compounds such as EPN, parathion, and TEPP are the most dangerous of all the chemicals recommended and used as insecticides today. These materials should be used only after every precaution suggested by the manufacturer has been taken.

Insecticides, when stored in the home or in buildings on the farm, should be put where they will not contaminate food or feed. Place them where children and livestock cannot get to them.

Insecticides should be clearly labeled at all times.

DON'T BECOME AN ACCIDENT STATISTIC

By S. R. DOUGHTY

EVERY year farm and home accidents in this country take a toll of 15,000 lives. And some 7,500 of these are home accidents. Motor vehicle deaths total 5,000, while occupational hazards take a toll of 4,500.

At present, records show several recent accidents in Alabama. They include the following: a mule kicks a farmer during an attempt to bridle him; a can of kerosene explodes as a person attempts to build a fire in the kitchen stove; a child playing with matches sets her clothes on fire and is burned to death; a woman trips on a broken step and breaks her leg; revolving parts of a tractor catch the clothes of the operator, severely injuring him; an overloaded electric circuit causes a "short" and burns a barn filled with feed and livestock, and a woman slips in the bath tub, resulting in serious back injuries.

NATIONAL FARM

ADOPT SAFE PRACTICES
Read and Heed, Sister!

More than half of the accidental deaths occurring in the home are the result of falls. These are caused by falling down steps, stumbling over toys or other objects carelessly left in paths of travel through the house, or slipping on small rugs. Another chief cause of fatal falls is the use of unsteady chairs or tottery tables for stepladders.

Farm machines top the tragedy list of farm accidents. They must be managed with caution and deliberation, kept in good repair, carefully stored, and used according to specific instructions.

Farm fires kill from 2,000 to 3,500 persons each year. The annual property loss is estimated at $100,000,000.

The National Safety Council has analyzed thousands of farm and home accidents and attributes the causes to carelessness, indifference to risk, and ignorance of danger.

Neither you nor your family can afford one of these accidents. With proper care and effort, they can be prevented.

Besides the more than 15,000 fatalities from farm and home accidents, 1,500,000 disabling injuries are caused, and 35,000 buildings are burned. The annual losses represented by these accidents and fires exceed $1,000,000,000. The cost is equal to an annual tax of $35 per year to every farm person throughout the nation.

Most of this could be prevented if farm people would learn and practice safety rules to eliminate hazards. National Safety Week, July 20-26, is a good time for every farm family to discuss and plan how to work, play, and live safely.

Requirements For Quality In Processed Fruit Products

By HUBERT HARRIS, Associate Horticulturist
A.P.I. Agricultural Experiment Station

QUALITY in processed fruit products is greatly affected by the condition of the fresh fruit. To have highest quality in fresh fruit, it is important to select suitable varieties, plant in a good location, follow correct cultural practices, and harvest when mature.

Varieties Important in Quality. Not all varieties of fruits that are of high quality for fresh use are equally suitable for processing. For example, some of the early varieties of peaches are fine for fresh use, but are too soft and watery for processing. The Delicious apple has good quality for eating fresh, but is too low in acid for processing. The Champanel grape is a splendid variety for processing, but is usually a little sour for fresh use. In general, the best varieties of fruits for processing are those that have high acidity and fairly firm texture when fully ripe.

Considerable work has been done at the Experiment Station on fruit variety testing. In a study on freezing qualities of strawberry varieties, the Klonmore, Tennessee Supreme, and Klondike were superior to a number of other varieties tested. The Klonmore rated excellent in color, texture, and flavor; the Tennessee Supreme rated excellent in color and texture and very good in flavor; and the Klondike rated excellent in color and flavor and very good in texture. Varieties that for one or more reasons failed to rate well in the tests included Suwanee, Marion Bell, Missionary, and Konvoy.

Labor Saving Equipment Will Increase Poultry Profits

ALABAMA commercial egg flocks are growing in size, and it is important that these flocks be put on a business-like basis so that labor can be used efficiently. By providing good equipment and management, the poultryman can care for a greater number of hens per hour of labor and make more profit.

In one state, up-to-date records on 20 poultry farms show that the five poultrymen making the least amount of money use 2.7 hours of labor per hen per year. All 20 of the units used an average of 1.9 hours per hen per year, while the five growers making the most money used an average of 1.4 hours per hen per year.

Since poultry profits have a definite relationship with the amount of labor required in production, it is well to use every possible means of reducing the amount of labor needed. The following list of equipment will save much labor when used in poultry operations:

1. Automatic water supply.
2. Large pens (more birds per room).
3. Feed bins in the laying house.
4. Feed carriers and automatic feeders.
5. Large feed troughs.
6. Roost pits with welded wire fabric in front and under roost poles.
7. Concrete drains under fountains.
8. Community nests grouped close to the entrance door.
9. Large doors that a wagon or manure spreader can enter.
10. Catching hook and coop.
11. Electric lights.
12. A broody coop.
13. A mechanical egg grader.

The following management practices will also reduce the amount of labor required to care for your birds:

1. Use deep litter (six to 10 inches) in laying and brooder houses.
2. Change litter only once a year in the laying house.
3. Self-feed growing pullets and layers a 32 or 26 per cent protein concentrate, along with whole oats, corn, and other grains in separate feeders.
4. Plan work so that more than one job can be done on each trip through the house.

By planning a program to reduce the hours of work per bird, the job will be more pleasant, and usually a better job will be done and more profit made.

TRACTOR SAFETY PRECAUTIONS

By J. T. GAILLARD
A.P.I. Farm Mechanization Specialist

THE farm tractor should be kept clean and free of dust, dirt, trash, and grease. This is particularly true of the tractor platform, brake and clutch pedals, foot rests, and steps.

A greasy platform or greasy pedals can cause an accident if the operator's foot slips and he falls, or if his foot slips from the clutch or brake pedal. A dirty tractor also creates a fire hazard which may burn up the tractor and other implements and possibly burn the storage shed or barn. A fire extinguisher should be kept handy as an added safety precaution in case of fire.

All control levers, pedals, steering gear, brake locks, and other control mechanisms should be in good operative condition. This assures prompt response to the operator's complete control of the tractor at all times.

The brakes on present-day tractors perform a double duty. One duty is to keep complete control of the tractor during field operations; and the other is to keep complete control of the tractor when it is operating on field roads and highways. A tractor operating on a highway pulling a load without good brakes is a safety hazard for the operator as well as for motorists. The brakes and the proper brake-locking devices should be kept in good condition at all times. The tractor should never be operated on a road or highway without having the brake pedals locked together so that brakes can be applied simultaneously. The parking brake lock is very necessary on all rubber-tired tractors because they will roll easily, and a tractor is a dangerous ton of iron and steel if it should roll down an incline without an operator.

The tractor operator's seat should be checked often to be sure there are no loose or broken bolts. A tractor with a loose seat could cause the operator to fall under an implement that is being pulled causing serious injury or death. One very important safety point to remember is that the drawbar is placed on the tractor to pull implements and other pieces of equipment. No implement, tool, or chain should ever be hitched to the tractor in any place other than the drawbar. The drawbar is designed to hold the tractor on the ground to prevent its turning over backwards when a heavy load is attached to it.

Safety shields should never be removed and left off while the tractor is in operation. The power take-off safety shields prevent the operator from getting caught in the engine by the take-off shaft. Other shields are put on the tractor to protect the operator and other people working around the tractor. This is also true for all safety shields on implements and equipment used behind the tractor.

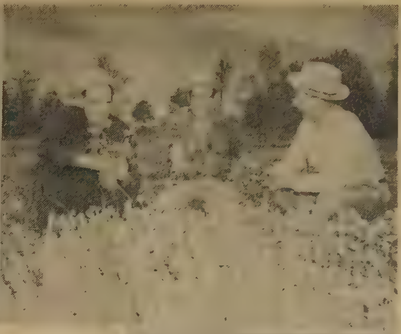
RECIPE FOR JULY

VEGETABLES are plentiful at this time of the year. There are green, yellow, and golden vegetables ripe and ready to furnish a variety of vitamins and minerals. Squash is a vegetable readily grown in Alabama gardens. Pehaps you would enjoy this recipe for baked squash as a change in your daily vegetable menu.

BAKED SQUASH

6 medium-sized squash
½ onion, chipped
½ c. diced ham
3 T. butter
½ c. milk
1 egg
½ c. bread crumbs
Salt and Pepper to taste

Cut squash in pieces and cook in small amount of water until tender. Drain thoroughly and mash. Add all other ingredients, mix, and bake in a casserole for 30 minutes in a medium hot oven.



TIMBER IS BIG ITEM—Timber accounts for $400,000 in income in the area around Marion in Perry County. Above left, Norman Crawford, Jack Tucker, and David Crawford talk over the lumber business while sitting on a huge oak log. The Crawford Brothers are also diversified farmers.

NO FISH STORY—Charlie Webb, left, and J. C. Webb, center, aren't kidding—they actually have knee-deep clover. At right above, they are showing off some Louisiana white Dutch clover to Acting County Agent Jack Tucker. The Webb Brothers have cotton, dairy cattle, beef cattle, and timber as sources of income from their farm.

DAIRYING BIG BUSINESS TOO—Ed Lee is shown at right with one of his dairy cows on pasture. Mr. Lee, a grade A dairyman of the Marion vicinity, is also an expert at pasture growing. Last winter he carried 25 heifers through on ryegrass and crimson clover. The only additional feed given the heifers during the winter was two blocks of salt.

Cotton, Cattle, Hogs And Timber

Diversified Farming Paves Road To Profits In Perry County

ASK any farmer around Marion what type of farmer he is and the chances are he'll say diversified. For every farmer, from the one-horse, 40-acre man to the large plantation owner, believes in diversified farming.

"If the cotton crop is short the farmer can fall back on his beef cattle, dairy cows, hogs, or timber," says Acting County Agent Jack Tucker. "Almost every farmer has some type of livestock on his farm to supplement his row-crop income."

Within an eight-mile radius of Marion, farming brought in about $2,600,000 last year. Cotton and cottonseed accounted for about one million dollars; cattle and hogs, $600,000; dairying, $400,000, and timber about $400,000.

The income from livestock equaled the income from a 5,000-bale cotton crop. Leaders predict the livestock income will pass the row-crop income in a couple of years, and they have plenty of reasons for their predictions.

In the vicinity of Marion, 15,000 head of beef cattle and 4,000 dairy cattle are grazing on about 75,000 acres of pasture. And more acres are being seeded to pasture crops almost every day.

A relative newcomer to Marion—hog production—is rapidly gaining in popularity. About 800 brood sows are now on farms in the area with more hogs of better quality being constantly added.

"But all of this didn't happen accidentally," points out Tucker. "The civic clubs, businessmen, and civic leaders of the town have had a big hand in telling the story of balanced farming."

An example of their interest in agriculture is the Marion Committee for Industrial Improvement. Recently this committee made funds available for the purchase of 10 purebred gilts to form the nucleus of an adult pig chain. These top-quality hogs are being introduced to help farmers get started with better quality hogs.

An example of the type farming Marion folks practice can be found on the farm of the Webb Brothers. Charlie and J. C. Webb get part of their farm income from four different sources—cotton, beef cattle, dairying, and timber. They have a fine herd of registered Herefords, good pastures, raise cotton and corn, and market a large volume of timber. J. C. is now serving as president of the Perry County Farm Bureau.

Another family of leading diversified farmers is the Crawford Brothers—Norman, David, Lawrence, and William. Their farming interests run from purebred cattle to horses and timber.

One of the most attractive places around Marion is Lakeland Farm. Although this farm is more famous for its 20 fishing lakes, owner Gene Donovan has five dairies operating under a partnership agreement with dairy tenants. The farm also has 1,000 acres of crimson clover.

As an agricultural section, Marion farmers are leading the way in developing sound farming programs that pay off in more profit and better farm living.

Every possible acre of cropland should have a "cover of green" this winter to provide grazing, protect the land from erosion, and improve the soil. The green cover may be winter legumes and small grain or mixtures of the two. For satisfactory results, plant on time and fertilize liberally.

All cattle under two years of age that have not been inoculated against blackleg this year should be given this protection as early as possible. Use the two purpose serum that immunizes against blackleg and malignant edema.

Planning For Progress

July Jobs For Fall Planting

By D. R. HARBOR
A.P.I. Extension Agronomist

JULY is an important month to most farmers in Alabama from the standpoint of planning their crop work for this fall. It is also important from the standpoint of doing something about getting fall seed crops properly planted at the right time.

The first job in getting ready to plant crops which will be seeded in the summer or fall is to do a good job of planning what crops to plant and the acreage to be devoted to each. Early July is a good time to do this planning, if it has not already been done. In doing this planning, thought should be given to putting the right crop on the right kind of soil. Try to have every acre at work this winter, or at least under protective cover.

Crops for which plans need to be made now, if they are to be seeded this fall, include the clover-grass permanent pasture; perennial legumes, including alfalfa and white clovers; winter grazing mixtures such as crimson clover-ryegrass mixture, vetch-oat mixture, oats alone, Caley peas and others; the small grains, mainly oats in Alabama, but including some wheat, and winter legumes for soil improvement such as the vetches, Austrian winter peas, crimson clover, and lupine in South Alabama.

July is not too early to make arrangements for seed and fertilizer for these crops. By arranging for seed and fertilizer now, a farmer may be able to get good seed and the kind of fertilizer he wants; whereas, if he waits until planting time, he may not be able to get good seed and the kind of fertilizer he will need.

In planning the crops to be seeded this fall it is important to keep in mind soils to which the various crops are adapted. For example, the clover-grass permanent pasture mixture should be seeded only on low, fertile, moist bottom land or fertile, clay upland soils. On the other hand, alfalfa should be planted only on rather fertile but well-drained soils. Alfalfa cannot stand "wet feet" over a long period of time.

Land preparation is particularly important for some of these crops, alfalfa being a good example. Land on which alfalfa will be seeded this fall should be turned in early July and disked or harrowed often enough to control grass and weeds until time to plant. Disking the land at moderate depth will also help firm the soil so it will hold moisture better and give a better stand when the seed are planted.

July is a good month to clean up fertile, moist bottom land which makes good clover-grass permanent pasture. By cleaning the land up at this time it can be prepared for seeding on time this fall.

Another mixture which responds to good land preparation is crimson clover-ryegrass mixture. Land where this mixture will be planted should be turned early in July, if it has not already been turned, and summer-fallowed by harrowing or disking until time to plant.

It pays to do a good job of land preparation for clover-grass permanent pastures on all soils of Alabama except some of the lime soils of the Black Belt. The value of land preparation for clover-grass permanent pastures is shown by some figures obtained from a survey of farmers who had prepared the land in various ways. This survey showed that where the land had been plowed and disked 90 per cent of the pastures were satisfactory. Where the land was disked only with an ordinary disk harrow 61 per cent of the pastures were satisfactory. Where no land preparation was done only 30 per cent of the pastures were satisfactory. These figures emphasize the importance of doing a good job of land preparation.

The state's grazing program would be tremendously improved if every farmer would resolve now to have his land ready, his fertilizer put in, and plant his seed at the recommended planting date, regardless of how dry or hot the weather is when planting time comes.

Can You Top This?

Five-year-old Howard Grant Ratliff, of Oneonta, Rt. 3, knows that he has a prize package at the end of the rope in his left hand. He is holding a Jersey heifer calf that had the largest birth weight on record for this breed. Previous birth weights of more than 100 pounds have been recorded for Jerseys.

According to dairy specialists, a normal Jersey calf should weigh about 55 pounds at birth. The calf at right above weighed a whopping 135 pounds. At left is a normal six-weeks-old calf. The dam of the heavyweight calf is Ward Basil Fairy, the sire is Jester Aim X. The calf is owned by Meadowview Jersey Farm, operated by Howard Ratliff.

Pen Feathers

by John Wee

SUCCESSFUL poultrymen in Alabama have found it necessary to keep a pullet flock in order to make the most money from the sale of eggs. This is true for several reasons. First, because pullets will lay the greatest number of fall and winter eggs. Pullets lay 20 per cent more eggs in their first year than in their second. Old hens molt and stop laying during fall and winter months (when egg prices are highest) and lay heavily in spring (when egg prices have dropped).

Receipts from the sale of an old hen will go a long way toward paying for growing a new pullet. Furthermore, the feed which the old hen would eat during her molt is nearly as much as that needed for a growing pullet. Consequently, it is wise to sell old hens when they molt and go out of production, and to grow enough good pullets to replace the entire laying flock each year.

In Western Kentucky Substation experiments to figure the value of all-pullet laying flocks as compared with all-hen flocks, the main findings were these:

1. Annual egg production of pullets was three to five dozen eggs higher than that of hens.
2. Winter production of pullets topped that of hens by about two dozen eggs.
3. Egg fertility, hatch of total eggs, and hatch of fertile eggs were higher for pullets than for hens.
4. Livability was slightly higher when chicks were hatched from pullet eggs.

THE Mexican bean beetle destroys most of the beans in July. Dusting beans, cucumbers, and squash every week with Auburn approved garden dust will greatly increase the length of time these crops will stay in production.

CANTALOUPES are often destroyed by melon and pickle worms during rainy weather in July. Dust plants every week and following heavy rains with Auburn approved garden dust or cryolite.

JULY is a good time to make late plantings of pole beans, tomatoes, and other crops. We usually have rains in late July which will help germinate seed or get plants off to a good start. On the other hand, we often have dry weather in late September and October. For this reason it is a good idea to plant beans and other fall crops on low bottom land areas which are likely to have more moisture at this time.

PAINT is an excellent finish for exterior floors, but it is not highly recommended for interior floors since it is less durable than other finishes. Since it hides the wood, it may be used effectively on old floors too worn to take a clear finish. But be sure to use floor paint. After the oil in the paint has had time to thoroughly oxidize, wax the floor.

OVERGRAZING kudzu results in thin stands and often, in complete destruction of the stand. Kudzu is overgrazed when the remaining growth does not cover the ground well. Kudzu that has been grazed down in May and June should have a chance to recover before dry weather in August and September begins.

ON many Alabama farms there are low, wet areas growing brush and other worthless growth that are contributing nothing to the farm income. Such areas, if cleared and properly treated, will produce good pasture. After crops are laid by, clear these areas, prepare land, apply lime and fertilizer, and be ready for seeding later on.

START marketing fall-dropped calves this month. These calves will usually sell for more dollars now than they will if held another month for more gains. By keeping them longer they may lose their milk bloom and you might hit the seasonal fall in price. This also gives the brood cow that calved last fall a longer rest period.

REMOVE bulls from the cow herd by the first of July to prevent having summer calves. If these bulls are in very thin condition, some form of additional feed would be helpful, preferably a mixture of half corn and oats. This is in addition to good grazing.

JULY is a very important month for the shepherd. During this month the ewes should be bred for early lambs. It is possible to have all the lambs come in one week, and it's good business to do this because someone should be with the ewes day and night while they are lambing.

Shown, lower center, are some of the herd makers of the hog project on the farm. Rex has 18 high-quality brood sows on the place. The sows are shown here grazing on a prize patch of Kenland red clover.

At right above Rex and County Agent M. M. Woodham stand in a field of early corn that the hogs will start grazing on in early July. It is Dixie 18 hybrid.

Stretching Income Through Diversification

Family-Sized Farming Can Be Big Business

REX McALILEI, who lives near Coffee Springs, in Geneva County, is by no means a "big" farmer. He has only 100 acres of open land. But Rex is what County Agent M. M. Woodham calls a good all-around farmer—one who demonstrates to perfection how a family-sized operation can become big business by following the trend toward livestock farming in the Deep South.

This Wiregrass farmer has a beef herd of 13 brood cows and a registered Angus bull. He has 18 brood sows and a herd of 67 shotes that came from spring litters. He has 45 acres of corn, which Woodham says will yield an average of 75 bushels per acre. He has 13 acres of peanuts that will likely bring a harvest of 15 tons. And the rest of his place, excluding an excellent garden spot, is devoted to topnotch pastures and temporary grazing crops. Last year Rex had 15 acres of cotton, but this time he dropped it in favor of more pasture.

Woodham explains that the farmer will make top yields on row-crop acreages because he prepared his land well and followed current recommendations in fertilizing. On some corn, he went even further, using as much as 1,450 pounds of fertilizer per acre. He also planted his corn and peanuts at the right time and keeps weeds out during cultivation without destroying the roots of plants.

One thing is fairly certain—no corn will be bought on the farm although some early patches will be harvested by hogs in the field.

In his pasture areas, McAlilei has crimson clover, crimson and Bahai, crimson and rescue, and some rye and vetch. And besides the 33 acres planted to these crops, he harvested six acres of oats for extra grain.

Rex is especially proud of a three-acre patch of Kenland red clover he tried this winter. He says this is a new variety of red clover which is more resistant to disease than the old reds grown many years ago and wiped out by anthracnose. The farmer credits his red clover with giving him more grazing per acre than any other crop.

Making a success of handling all these cash crops is proof a plenty that Geneva County's McAlilei farm is a busy place all year long. But the family loves it—they know they've got a good business.

Home Management Will Cut Rural Accident Toll

By STELLA L. MITCHELL

A.P.I. Extension Home Management Specialist

POOR management, ill-arranged work areas, confusion, and fatigue spell trouble for the home and add materially to the ever growing list of home accidents each year.

About 18 per cent of home accidents take place in the kitchen—most of them occur between 11 o'clock and noon and on Saturday afternoons. The second greatest home offender is stairways—10 per cent of all home accidents happen on inside stairs.

The three basic causes of home accidents have been found to be disorder, improper equipment or lack of equipment, and improper use of equipment.

Disorder is responsible for one out of six accidents. When working or walking areas are cluttered, it is easy to step on or strike against objects which cause falls, burns, and bruises. Equipment is now designed for safety. Rounded corners on ranges and refrigerators reduce the number of bad bumps on sharp edges.

Being in a hurry tempts women to use unsuitable utensils for a cooking operation, a penny instead of a new fuse, knives in place of can openers or screw drivers, and chairs or boxes for makeshift stepladders.

Poor cooking practices such as spattering fat, hot handles, steaming kettles, ovens, and broilers cause many burns. Good safe practice should include turning handles of cooking utensils so they are parallel to the front of the range, using hot dish pads for handling hot utensils, and lighting gas ovens in the recommended manner. (First, light the match, hold it near the oven burner, and then turn on the burner.)

Knives cause more accidents than do any other kitchen utensils. A sharp knife is the safest kind to use because dulled blades most frequently cause accidents.

A kitchen planned for convenience and safely operated under good management will eliminate confusion, decrease daily fatigue, and certainly reduce home accidents.

Organized Marketing In Chilton County

THE recently organized Chilton County Fruit and Truck Grower's Association is taking the headaches out of buying and selling produce for dozens of Chilton farmers. The association acts as a purchasing and sales agent for farmer members. The co-op buys seed, fertilizers, and packing containers for the farmers and acts as packing and sales organization for truck crops such as blackberries, cucumbers, beans, peas, tomatoes, peppers, and okra.

At left above Association Secretary Mrs. Preston Shaw displays a product of the co-op—Kosher pickles and sweet pickle chips—packed from locally grown cucumbers. At right Mrs. Shaw shows a new type packing crate that will be used for some products this year. The crate, made of heavy cardboard, is cheaper than wooden crates and has amazing strength. It will hold up a 200-pound man.. The crate can also be used as a display case in retail stores.

Requirements For Quality

Another study has just been completed at the main station at Auburn on the suitability of southern-grown blackberries of the erect and trailing types for commercial jams and jellies. In this study, jam and jelly products prepared from Alabama-grown Boysen and Young varieties (trailing type) rated higher in a panel test than similar jams and jellies prepared from the Evergreen variety (erect type) grown in Washington State.

Maturity Important in Quality. The maturity of the fruit when processed has a pronounced effect on quality of the product. Best flavor is obtained from well-ripe fruits, but soft fruits will not usually stand the handling necessary in processing. Fruits in the early stages of softening are usually at optimum maturity for processing. In tests at Auburn, jams and jellies prepared from full-ripe blackberries were superior in flavor to similar products prepared from firm-ripe berries.

In another study on maturity of peaches for processing, soft fruit was highest in flavor, but ragged and torn in appearance. The early soft stage was best for freezing or cold-pack canning, while the late firm stage proved best for preserves or pre-cook canning.

Fruit that is not ripe enough when harvested may be held in common storage for further ripening. The time required for ripening will vary greatly.

Blending May Improve Quality. In some cases color and quality of the product can be greatly improved by blending different kinds and varieties. In tests at Auburn, the Delicious apple, blended in equal proportions with a good acid variety, made an excellent applesauce product. The color of Hunt or Scuppernong muscadine products was improved by blending with a dark variety, such as the Tarheel. Jam made from muscadine pulp alone developed an unattractive brown color during cooking. This was changed to a beautiful purple color by blending one part of blackberry pulp with two parts of the muscadine pulp. The dark juice pressed from Tarheel and certain other dark skin varieties of muscadine was also excellent for coloring muscadine pulp in making jam.

AND HOW DOES YOUR GARDEN GROW?—Mrs. Melvin Harwell, of Ward, seems to be taking it a bit easy after getting her garden in top-notch shape. The Sumter County home demonstration club member grows everything from corn to cucumbers and from squash to strawberries. The secret of good gardening is to plant on time, fertilize right, and fight the bugs. Another very important point, adds Mrs. Harwell, is to have the husband help do the work. And so she gives Mr. Harwell much of the credit for their garden.

Research Results

in brief from A.P.I. AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATION

FORAGE YIELD OF PERMANENT PASTURES that have become densely covered with carpetgrass may be increased by plowing or disking and fallowing to reduce the stand of carpetgrass, fertilizing with 800 to 1,000 pounds of 0-16-8 per acre, and reseeding with two to four pounds of white clover and 10 pounds of Dallis grass per acre. This treatment has increased production, improved the quality of forage, and lengthened the grazing period.

YIELDS OF TOMATOES in a four-year test at Auburn were increased from 406 to 720 bushels per acre by use of a one and one-half inch surface mulch of peanut hulls, a waste product from oil mills. Yields of sweet corn were similarly increased from 4,727 to 10,941 pounds per acre. Yields of fall pole beans were increased about 160 bushels, and fall potatoes about 47 bushels per acre by a peanut hull mulch.

PECAN WEEVILS were found in 61 per cent of the pecan orchards in southeastern Alabama in a survey made during the summer of 1951. They were distributed throughout pecan producing counties as far south as Coffee County. Damage to the nuts ranged from light to very heavy.

ARIZONA CYPRESS RAISED FOR CHRISTMAS TREES need to be cultivated through the growing season. This practice is necessary when trees are small, and it should be applied for the first two or three growing seasons. The competition of grasses, weeds, and brush is thereby reduced. This results in better growth of young Arizona cypress trees. Results of experiments at Auburn point to the need of this cultivation.

EACH CALF RAISED IN A PORTABLE OUTSIDE PEN at the College Dairy Farm in 1951 had gained an average of 30 pounds more at the age of six months than each calf of a similar group raised in a conventional calf barn. There were less digestive and respiratory troubles among the calves raised in outside pens.

SAFE MOISTURE CONTENTS of blue lupine, Dixie runner peanuts, and reseeding crimson clover seed for storage in structures without temperature control are 11, 6, and 10 per cent, respectively. When stored at these low moistures and at a temperature of 96°F., germination was affected less than when stored at higher moisture contents. These results were obtained from small samples in laboratory tests.

THE MARKET FOR GRADE A FLUID MILK in Alabama cities and towns has expanded considerably in recent years. In greater Birmingham, for example, milk distributors' sales of bottled whole milk now are about four times as large as sales of 30 years ago. As long as present conditions continue, further growth of Alabama's fluid milk markets is likely. Farmers who have access to such markets, and favorable conditions for milk production, may well consider the possibilities of dairying. Of course, no farmer should invest the capital needed for grade A milk production until he is assured of a reliable market.

Marvin Marcus has spent a lot time fishing on the main streets Clanton the past few weeks. It's rtainly not because of heavy rains ecause we haven't had any, but st the same you can see "Mutt" t most any night with his long shing cane going up and down the reets. Naw, he's not nuts, he's ying to untangle the Peach Festi- l banners that have been decor- ting the streets for the past few eeks. The wind keeps fouling hem up.

We're likely to have full time dio from station WKLF by Fall ccording to dame rumor that is go- g the rounds. They are building ew studios, etc., out the Selma ighway and by the Fall elections e may be able to get local broad- asts at night as well as day time.

George Jester is our type weath- rman. He came by the other day tell us that July would be a wet onth and we were going to enjoy lot of cool rains. Well for the irst five or six days we were ready o doubt his predictions, but now ings are different. The rains ame and the temperature has fal- en several degrees which makes or easy and comfortable living. It akes the farmers mighty happy oo.

We made an awful mistake the ther day when we announced that ed Fulmer had been named State ommander of the VFW. Horton Walker, who is Adjutant, called us ast night to remind us to straight- n you out. Well here goes: David . Patton, of Athens, Ala., is Com- mander of the VFW and Red Fulmer (see cut) is State Commander of the Disabled American Veterans. Red was named Commander at the convention in Mobile two weeks ago.

Reese Mims and Jelly Bean have air-conditioning at their Barber Shop on Second Avenue. Barber shops the world over are known for their air-conditioning, but it's usually hot air. This air-conditioning that Reese and Jelly have is cold air.

Our compositor had Charlie Patterson selling Blue Goose instead of Blue Cross Insurance the other week. Charlie called to tell us that his goose was cooked if we didn't change that to Cross, so that, we did. Guess now you will remember that if it's Blue Cross Insurance you are after, see Charlie Patterson.

Bill Hester was up from Miami the past two weeks and came around to see us. He's getting along fine and looking well. Bill came by way of Orlando, Fla., and saw Julian Evans. Says Julian is getting along well too. We always enjoy Bill's visits, he's loaded with interesting things about his adopted home town. He must be a member of the Miami Chamber of Commerce.

LAND PREPARATION

Good land preparation is necessary for best results in planting most fall-seeded crops.

Who Is Going To Be Chilton County's Peach Queen?

That's the question that's uppermost in everyone's mind today as some 25 Chilton County girls make final preparation for the big day that's less than a week away.

These same girls, all contestants for the County's highest honor, are getting ready for the big contest that will be kicked off at a banquet at Chilton County High School lunchroom at 6 o'clock Monday night. "At that time," Joe Jackson, General Chairman, said, "All the contestants will be honored." Mr. Jackson also reported that the girls will then go to the high school gymnasium where they will be judged by the judges.

The name of the winner of this most coveted honor will be kept a strict secret until the ceremonies get started in Clanton's City Park next Wednesday. At the judging the girls will be presented individually on a stage. They will parade before the judges both in street clothes and in formal clothing. Even the names of the judges are supposed to be kept a secret.

On the day of the Festival all of the contestants will ride on a huge Peach Festival float from Thorsby right into the Clanton City Park and there the winner will be crowned by T. G. Brabston, of Birmingham, who will also act as parade marshall.

At a final meeting of all the officers and committee chairmen Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Jackson reported that he was well satisfied with the work and plans that have so far been made. He said that he felt that all of his committees had done an excellent job in working out and executing the details of their work.

At the same meeting, Bing LeCroy in charge of exhibits announced the prizes that will be given away for the prize baskets of peaches on the day of the Festival. For the best bushel baskets, the first prize will be $20.00, second prize, $15.00, and the third prize $10.00. First prize for half-bushels will be $15.00, second prize $10.00, and third prize will be $5.00.

M. R. (Red) Glasscock reported that he has made arrangements for a whole block in the City of Clanton to be turned over to peach growers so that they might park their trucks loaded down with the best of Chilton County peaches. These peaches will be for sale to buyers that are in the area on that day.

Cecil Ramsey, chairman of the barbecue committee, also made his report. He stated that hundreds of pounds of the best barbecue available will be ready for service at noon on the day of the big event. His barbecue pit will be set up in the city park also.

At the same time there will be a double-header baseball game for all those that like this type of sport. And Henry Grady Heflin has arranged another of his wonderful water shows which will take place at the park swimming pool on the day of the Festival. Mr. Heflin has been working his swimming participants daily at the pool in an effort to have the best show that has ever been presented in the local pool.

Peach Queen Contestants Entertained

Contestants for Peach Queen will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Reedie Taylor next Monday afternoon at 4 p.m. To date 22 girls are entered in the contest and the winner will be selected at Chilton County High School next Tuesday night. Gloria Robinson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Robinson, Clanton, Ala., Route 1. For four years she has been a 4-H Club member, and has been a very active member with good projects. Her projects have been cooking, sewing, canning, room improvement and grooming. Each year, sewing has been Gloria's main project and this year she was first place winner in the County Dress Revue. Now she is entering the State Dress Revue which will be held in Auburn Gloria has been working hard on her dress and records. Gloria has held several offices in her Club, and this year she was President of the Concord Club.

Another one of our representatives is also interested in sewing. She is Bettie Harper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Harper, Route 1, Jemison, Ala. Bettie was first place winner in the Skirt Revue of the County Contest. Bettie has had three very good projects this year: sewing, cooking and raising a calf.

HIGH SCHOOL LUNCH ROOM NOTE IS BURNED

The above picture shows P-TA president Mrs. Theran Watson, of Maplesville Senior High School, burning the note after our new lunch room has been paid for. This has been a long drawn out program but it is now completed, for which the parents, teachers and students are very proud. Every one that had a part, whether small or great, has reason to be proud.

Someone always says it can't be done, but the Maplesville people knew differently. We usually carry our part of the load. We say these programs can be carried out if enough time, effort, and care are put forth. Our principal, Mr. J. E. Daniels; our president,; our teachers; and parents worked toward this one goal, so we can say we are all proud it is over and belongs to us. We are waiting for our next project.

Pre-School Clinic At Maplesville

On April 23, 1952, Dr. G. M. Taylor, County Health Officer held a Pre-School Clinic at Maplesville High School. The purpose of this clinic was to give each child that will enter school in September. A physical check-up, especially eyes, ears, teeth, and throat.

Twenty-two children were examined that day. After the clinic the children visited the first grade room to get a view of school life.

The children must have a vaccination certificate by entrance date.

This clinic was sponsored by the Health Department, assisted by the P-TA. Each child was served cookies and cold drinks.

The pictures shown were taken during the clinic.

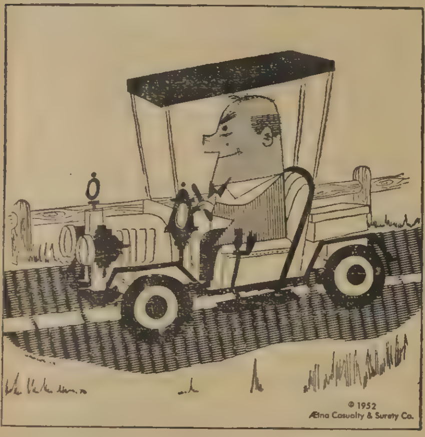
WHITE SUPREMACY

FOR THE RIGHT

WHO'S ZOO—ON THE HIGHWAY



DON'T BE A ROAD HOG. Always give the other fellow his share of the road.

THE SOUTH, CIVIL RIGHTS, THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION, AND SEN. RUSSELL

There are signs that the attitude of a few Southern political leaders might make impossible adoption by the Democratic convention of a compromise civil rights platform plank. Govs. Byrnes of South Carolina and Wright of Mississippi have let it be known they and their followers are in no mood to help work out a plank that will satisfy anybody but themselves. It is the same chip-on-shoulder attitude which threw the 1948 convention into bedlam and paved the way for the Humphrey-drafted plank.

For a time there was hope that the platform committee would be able to present a civil rights plank which would satisfy both Nothern and Southern elements of the party. Americans for Democratic Action, perhaps the farthest left of the non-communist organized political groups in the U. S., had indicated it would go along with a sensible compromise. This group has urged Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois to seek the Democratic presidential nomination. Gov. Stevenson has stated he favors leaving action in the civil rights field to the states. It is known that such Southern senate leaders as Hill and Sparkman of Alabama, Maybank of South Carolina, Johnson of Texas and Fulbright of Arkansas have been working quietly and effectively for "compromise with honor."

It is becoming plainer, however, that there are leaders in the Southern wing of the party who want to pull another 1948 bolt. Settlement of the civil rights fight would burst their bubble. Fight civil rights compromise and preserve the issue appears to be their strategy.

What is their goal? It could be election of a Republican president. Or it could be the preservation of their positions in the several most Dixiecratic Southern states as saviors of "Southern traditions and white supremacy." We're not sure what they're getting at. But we feel confident they are taking the straight road to damaging the South's position within the Democratic party. At the rate they're going, the South's once mighty voice in party councils soon will be an inaudible whisper.

One thing is sure. If Southern delegations follow the leadership of the Byrnes-Wright dissidents our region will meet a hostile attitude in Chicago. Compromise never issues from an atmosphere of hostility.

* * * *

Sen. Dick Russell must have died a thousand deaths in the past couple of weeks. He named Sen. Ed Johnson of Colorado to manage his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination in a move to take the regional tag off his candidacy. He has been seeking to build his candidacy into one which would attract support from every section of the nation. Russell was making headway. How much it is difficult to estimate. But enough at least to make many political wiseacres over the country guess a Stevenson-Russell ticket might come out of the convention. Such Russell supporters as Byrnes and Wright are making Russell's candidacy and a no-compromise-on-civil-rights attitude synonomous in the East, Middle West and Far West.

To say the least, several of Dick Russell's big-gun supporters are saying nothing in their pop-off sessions to enhance his chances outside the South. And there simply aren't enough delegates below the M&D Line to nominate him president.

Give the never-say-die Dixiecrats enough rope and they'll hang both the South's chances of gaining a compromise on civil rights and Dick Russell's chances of making a big splash at Chicago.—Lee County Bulletin.

There is one thing about baldness. It's neat.—The Pipe Line.

Believe me, these conventions are going to be the best-covered political meetings ever held. Bob Hope has been hired by NBC as a "radio-TV commentator" to deliver a daily summary of the proceedings. The United Press has signed the Quiz Kids—ranging in age from four to 15 to write a daily column on the conventions.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

One of those sizzling almost unbearably hot afternoons that followed one another in seemingly endless succession recently, we decided to try to escape the heat by going on a picnic to a nearby recreation spot.

We gathered together some appropriate food plus a big jug of cold lemonade and set gaily forth, especially the three-year-old and the five-year-old whose spiritis are never quelled by rising temperatures.

Now the picnic spot we had chosen has everything for the convenience of visitors, including tables benches, running water and grey stone fireplaces. As we rounded a curve and those fireplaces came into view, the three-year-old called out,

"Look! Tombstones!"

The resemblance was so striking that all during the picnic I kept having the gloomy feeling that we were feasting in the cemetery, and I kept being glad that we hadn't planned to roast weiners or to cook hamburgers. Fact is, I doubt that we'll ever have the same feeling about cooking on those 'tombstones' that we had before the three-year-old made his observation.

The heat wave played all kinds of tricks on the thermometers in our neighborhood. Our next door neighbor's porch thermometer registered 104 degrees in the shade one afternoon and apparently became so upset by the experience that the mercury in it seperated into several independent globs.

She tried unsuccessfully to shake the mercury together again and was about to throw the thermometer away in disgust when a visitor suggested that she put it in the refrigerator for a few hours. Surely enough, after she had given it the cold treatment, all the mercury settled in the bottom of the tube, and it has been behaving perfectly ever since.

Our neighbor around the corner decided to cook some muffins for supper the other night, but she couldn't find her muffin tin anywhere in the kitchen. Some time later, much too late to have muffins band had "borrowed" her muffin for supper, she learned that her hus- tin to hold his assortment of nails, tacks, screws and hooks in his workshop. He claimed it was the handiest filing system for such articles he'd ever discovered.

Now that the news has spread through the neighborhood, other wives are taking the precaution of hiding their muffin pans before they are confiscated by their husbands!

And speaking of muffin pans, our neighbor who specializes in informal entertaining uses hers as a relish tray. When she has guests for supper in her big back yard (complete with "tombstone"), she fills the compartments of the pan with pickles, onion slices, olives, relishes and salad dressings.

Now that potatoes are available again and are even coming down in price, that old Summer favorite potato salad is appearing around the neighborhood again.

For something really special, our good cook neighbor adds a can of tuna fish or a cup of flaked salmon to her potato salad. Roughly her recipe calls for two cups cooked, cubed potatoes, to which are added the fish. 1-2 cup diced celery, three tablespoons chopped green pepper, 1 tablespoon minced onion, lemon juice salt and pepper to taste.

FIN-FAN ITEMS

The Alabama Power Contest judges agree that Mrs. McMichael, Birmingham, won the Month of May $10.00 prize. Competition, was keen, but Mrs. Mac's 20 ounce Shellcracker could not be topped. Perhaps, you wonder how a 20 oz. Shellcracker could win over a 7 pound 9 ounce Largemouth Bass caught by Oscar McDaniel, Alexander City. The answer is, according to contest rule No. 3, the largest fish entered in the contest in preportion to the Whopper-Catcher base weights for its species. Whopper-Catcher base weights were worked out, after much study and deliberation, to make a fair measure of all species as one. The base weights are as follows: Largemouth Bass, 5 pounds; Smallmouth Bass, 3½ pounds; White Lake or Stripe Bass, 2 pounds; Crappie or White Perch, 1½ pounds; Shellcracker, 10 ounces; Bluegills, 8 ounces. An example of how the fish are compared: A Largemouth Bass weighing 4 pounds or 80% of base weight for Largemouth Bass specie would be defeated by a Bluegill weighing 7 ounces or 87½% of base weight for Bluegill speciies. Any fish entered in the contest that equals the above whopper weights will receive an attractive certificate, suitable for framing, which signifies that you are a member of the Whopper Catcher Club. You are also elegible to win the monthly $10.00 cash merchandise prize and final contest trophy awards. So, enter your catch at one of the many friendly fishing camps, most all are Official Weighing-in Stations.

The unpredictable willow flies sure have lived up to their name during the past week. They come and go so fast that man and fish can't keep up. Well, maybe the fish keep up but man is not faring so well. Last week several fishermen complained that large numbers of spent willow flies were seen floating on the water, but only a few scattered flights were found. It is generally expected that willow fly conditions will greatly improve within the next week or so.

While most people were grumbling about the hot weather and lack of fish activity, some whoppers were caught and entered in the contest.

Lake Yates—

Fred Phillips, Martin Dam Storekeeper, reports: C. E. "Pop" Wade, Jordan Dam, Power Company Electrical Foreman, used a Coosa Nugget on the Tallapoosa to bag a 3 pound 12 ounce Smallmouth Bass. "Pop" has been threatening to join the Whopper's Club for sometime and this catch makes him a full fledged member.

Lake Martin—

W. L. Pemberton, owner, Lake Hill Inn, near Alexander City, reports: Pete Blankenship, 137 Verena Street, Alexander City, fished a live minnow and cane pole on Elkahatchee Creek to catch a 8 pound 5 ounce Largemouth Bass. Pete had some struggle trying to land this lulu but after about ten minutes of hard work the job was done.

Lake Mitchell—

Acne Treatment

In the opinion of Dr. Robert P. Little of Quebec, Canada, most cases of acne, a prevalent skin disease of teen-agers, can be cured in a reasonable amount of time by following a few simple rules. Writing in a recent issue of Today's Health, Dr. Little stressed the necessity of cleanliness in the treatment of the affliction.

"Acne is the plugging of the oil glands," he said. "It is logical, then, that any primary treatment should remove these plugs. The simplest way is to wash the affected area thoroughly with soap and warm water several times a day. The skin should then be dried with a rough towel.

"This repeated treatment will remove many of the blackheads and prevent the formation of pimples by removing the acne bacteria. Along with this, the hair and scalp should be shampooed at least once a week (better twice a week) with a good soap.

"In men, especially, the hair should be kept trimmed. Everyone should keep his nails cut short and avoid touching the face with his fingers. The application of various creams to the skin may, at times, be beneficial. But girls with acne should avoid greasy skin creams, which often aggravate it."

Factors which may aggravate acne, Dr. Little pointed out, are drugs such as iodides and bromides; exposure to certain oils and tars; foods such as choclate, nuts, fish and pork; and systemic derangements such as infections anemia and emotional disturbances.

Dr. Little warned against squeezing the pimples, especially those in the danger areas around the forehead, the nose, cheeks and upper lip. Certain veins from these areas, he said, drain into veins that lie close to the brain; and if an infection spreads through them, a brain abscess may form and death result.

Low Bid On Bonds Received

A low bid of 3.269 per cent net interest has been received by the state on $1,250,000 worth of bonds needed to finance completion of the Alabama Agriculture Coliseum here.

The low bid was submitted by an account headed by Bradnax and Knight, of Birmingham. It was the second time in recent weeks the bonds had been offered for sale. The previous low bid of 3.388 per cent net interest had been rejected because state officials felt it was too high. No decision was made immediately on the latest bid.

The bonds were offered for sale by the corporation created by the 1951 legislature to have charge of completing the coliseum. In addition to the governor, the corporation includes State Finance Director D. W. Hodo and Agriculture Commissioner Frank M. Stewart.

With $1,500,000 already invested in the coliseum, money from the bond sales will be used to complete the structure. The corporation will use the cash to close in the building, add permanent arm-type seats, improve acoustics, and provide heating facilities, among other things.

Plan For A Safer Farm This Month

National Farm Safety Week will be observed throughout the nation July 23-29.

The purpose of setting this week aside is to reduce the tragic farm accident toll. And it can be done if every farm family adopts safe practices of living, working, and playing.

One-fourth of all on-the-job work deaths occur in agriculture. Also, one-fourth of all home accidental deaths occur in farm homes.

In addition to deaths, 1,300,000 farm people are injured in rural accidents each year.

Plant Grain Sorghum Now For More Grazing

Farmers who want more grain to harvest or graze this fall can have it by planting grain sorghum within the next few days.

When planted after June 1, grain sorghum usually makes more grain per acre than corn planted on the same date. Grain sorghum can be used to follow winter legumes harvested for seed, winter grazing crops and early harvested truck crops.

While it may be a little late to plant grain sorghum in North Alabama, it should be planted in the remainder of the state by July 15. And grain sorghum success practices include planting on adopted land, doing a good job of soil preparation, and planting an adapted variety..

Use plenty of treated seed, to do a good job of fertilizing, and cultivate enough to control grass and weeds.

Farmers Advised To Grow Fall Potatoes

This year the market for Irish potatoes has been unusually strong.

There have not been enough potatoes to supply the demand. And while supplies may increase when the late crop from other states goes to market, there is every indication that prices will continue to be high throughout the year.

Therefore, Alabama farmers, especially the ones in the northern part of the state, can take advantage of this situation by planting a fall crop. Of course, the late crop is somewhat more difficult to grow, and yields are generally lower than in the spring. However, when proper methods are used in production and growing conditions are fairly good, there is an opportunity for profit.

The local county agent has complete information on growing irish potatoes.

Census Bureau To Collect Figures Week Of July 14-18

National figures on employment and unemployment for July will be derived from information collected locally and in sixty-seven other areas throughout the country in the Current Population Survey, according to Mary L. Griffin, District Supervisor, Bureau of the Census, Clanton.

The Current Population Survey will be conducted this month during the week of July 14. Enumerators will receive detailed instructions regarding their duties during a training session which is being conducted in the Clanton district office today.

Mrs. Mary H. Gibson and Mr. John R. Hall, Jr., are the Current Population Survey enumerators who will interview Chilton County families during the July survey, it was announced by Miss Griffin.

GRADES AND STANDARDS

U. S. Grades and standards are available for practically all products. And they are followed carefully in most of the heavy producing areas and in marketing channels that handle each crop. The local county agent can tell farmers how they may learn more about U. S. grades and standards of different farm products.

When polio is around, the National Foundation cautions parents to watch for these signs: headache, fever, sore throat, upset stomach, tenderness and stiffness of neck and back. A person showing such symptoms should be put to bed at once, away from others. Then, call your doctor and follow his advice. If polio is diagnosed, call your local chapter of the March of Dimes for advice and assistance, including needed financial help.

New Tricots Prove Popular with Women

Tricot is the modern, quality construction of the knit fabric world.

It is not just a fancy name for jersey. Even though both jersey and tricot are knit fabrics, the difference in quality and performance is comparable to the difference between an ancient Model T and the latest sport model.

Tricot comes off the knitting machine as a flat fabric, just as woven cloth comes off the loom. Therefore tricot knits lend themselves to many more purposes than were formerly possible iin knit fabrics.

Slips, tailored dresses, men's sport shirts and pajamas, and children's overalls and romper suits are now available in tricot, and all of them hold their shape beautifully.

Facts On Planning Family Food Budget

No sum or share of income can be set to insure a satisfactory diet for every family at all times.

To lay out a definite sum and then try to fit food purchases to it is like putting the cart before the horse. First consideratiion should go to the family's food needs for good nutrition.

Plans to help homemakers select foods that meet these needs can be obtained by writing the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics of the USDA, Washington, D. C. Ask for family food plans for both low cost and moderate cost diets.

LOCAL BOY RECEIVES LETTER FROM PETE JARMAN

American Embassy,
Canberra, Australia
May 23, 1952.

Dear Oscar:

Upon my return from an extended visit to northern Australia I found the announcement of your graduation at the Ellington Air Force Base, on which Mrs. Jarman and I hasten to congratulate you most heartily.

It is good to have news of you again and we are interested to know whether you are now in the regular service or a reserve officer. Whichever it is, we hope you are enjoying thoroughly the fine service we are sure you are rendering, and you know you have our very best wishes for your continued progress, success and happiness.

Please remember us kindly to your parents when you write or see them. Since I do not know your present address I am sending this to Clanton, with the knowledge that they will appropriately forward it.

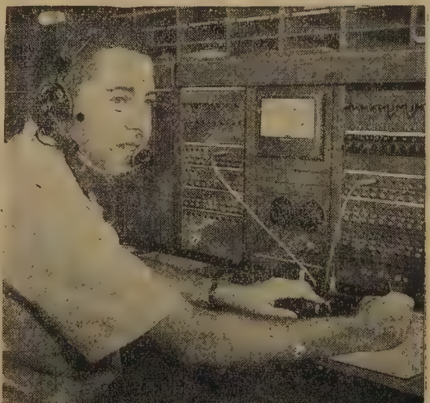
You will be glad to know that we are delighted with Australia and its people. We thoroughly enjoyed our two years here before we left for home leave and consultation in Washington last September and are looking forward to the probability of remaining at least two more years. Even though we are rather constantly on the go it is most enjoyable, we are delightfully situated and there is an absence of the tremendous pressure and criticisms which attends service in Congress. In fact, my constituents did the best job of which I have ever heard of kicking a congressman upstairs. There is really no comparison between the two functions in any way.

With kind personal regards and every good wish to you and your parents from us both, I am

Sincerely your friend,
PETE JARMAN.

Lt. Oscar William Jones, Jr.,
Clanton, Alabama.

HE'S Guarding your Phone



Guided by electronic "eyes and ears", the test deskman spots line troubles at once and gets repairmen there quickly, often before service is actually interrupted.

HEADING OFF line troubles helps keep telephone service good, and costs down. Growing efficiency all along the line is one of the reasons why the price of telephone service has gone up less than most other prices.

Through good management . . . by improving methods and equipment, and working facilities to the utmost . . . telephone folks are doing their best to provide the most and the best service for your telephone dollar. That's mighty important to Southern progress and to National Defense.

Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company

ONE OF YOUR BEST BUYS

Telephone service takes a smaller part of the family budget than it did ten years ago . . . and you can call twice as many people.

The 174 motor vehicle accident deaths reported from the entire state in January, February and March included one reported from Chilton County. The announcement was made today by the State Department of Health.

Get Extra Service From Claw Hammer

Extra service and greater efficiency can be obtained from a claw hammer.

Just make a slight alteration in one of the claws. If a small claw is filed out of the left claw of a hammer, it will be a big help in pulling out nails in hard-to-reach places. Also, it is very useful for pulling out small nails and tacks.

V. F. W. Supports Proposed Amendm'nt To Constitution

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. strongly supports the proposal for a new amendment to the U. S. Constitution which would limit both the authority and life of international treaties and would curb their use in lieu of legislative procedures according to David Patton of Athens, Commander of the VFW for the Department of Alabama.

The proposed Constitutional Amendment has been sponsored in a Joint Resolution now before both Houses of Congress. The Senate Resolution (S. J. Res. 130), offered by Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio and 58 other Senators, already has been favorably reported to the Senate floor by the Senate Committee of the Juidciary. An identical Resolution (H. J. Res. 415), introduced in the House by Representative John E. Rankin of Missippi, is still awaiting action by the House Judiciary Committee.

Commander Patton pointed out that national VFW support of the Joint Resolution and of the Constitutional Amendment it proposes, was assured in February by the V FW National Legislative Committee at its annual meeting in Washington. He added that, subsequently the VFW National Commander-in-Chief, Frank C. Hilton, of Pennsylvania, has urged the nearly one and a quarter million VFW members, its 10,000 posts, and its 52 state organizations to support the Joint-Resolution by appeals to Congress members, and that a formal resolution to be offered at the coming National Encampment of the VFW in Los Angeles, August 3-8, favoring the amendment is expected to be adopted without question.

Commander Patton explained that the proposed Constitutional Amendment aims particularly at Article VI of the Constitution, which article makes any treaty "the supreme law of the land," on a par with the Constitution itself. He reminded that, under Article II of the Constitution, a President may execute such a powerful, binding and enduring treaty provided he has the concurrence of only two-thirds of the Senators present at a Senate roll-call. The Commander further pointed out that the danger of "executive agreements" in lieu of treaties "is increasingly apparent."

"A primary danger of promiscuous treaty-making," went on Commander Patton, "is that so much authority can be assumed by a President in any claimed "emergency" that the traditional balance of power among the Executive, Legislative and Judiciary branches is upset. Also, there is a definite trend in current treaty-making activities to curb the inherent personal, economic and political rights of American citizens and to forfeit America's jurisdiction over our internal and domestic affairs, literally sacrificing our national sovereignty to some international pooling agency.'

How to spot an expert

An expert makes hard work easier.

When it comes to hauling, a GMC truck is your expert – for this very sound reason:

GMC – as the world's largest exclusive manufacturer of commercial vehicles—concerns itself 100% with the development of new and better ways to transport goods.

Each model is the careful answer to specific, tough hauling problems.

The new GMC "302" engine is a case in point. In addition to being America's highest-compression standard gasoline truck engine—it packs more horsepower for its weight than any other on the road! The result is savings in useless "dead weight" by as much as 500 pounds over other engines of equal horsepower.

It's this kind of expert engineering that makes us sure of one thing: whatever model you select at our showroom – panel or pickup, stake rack or platform—you'll have an expert on your next job!

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Welcome you good people to Chilton County's Fifth Peach Festival. Be sure to get yourself a good supply of our prize crop to take home with you. They may be grown bigger and more abundantly elsewhere, but they are grown no better. And that's not bragging—that's stating a fact.

Red Fulmer has gone into business again. He's starting, along with Marvin Lowery, a used car lot. It's located down the highway about three or four blocks next to Clarence Easterling's place. He decides to retire every now and then, but he just can't stay retired.

We heard one of the funniest stories the other day. Two tramps were looking for a feed so they stopped at a country house—one of our prosperous peach growers, no doubt—and asked for something to eat. The peach grower told them to cut the usual pile of wood and they could have some food. Looking up and down the highway and not seeing another house in sight, and feeling mighty low because of the lack of food, they agreed. The farmer left them for a while and went about his business. On coming back out to the wood pile he saw one of the tramps doing handspring, flip-flops, dancing a jig, etc., so he said: "Well, by golly, I didn't know your friend was an acrobat." "I didn't either," returned the tramp, "until I hit him on the shin with this axe."

Understand you can look for parking meters on the East side of the Highway within the near future. It has been a matter of controversy for some time.

We watched the Peach Queen Contestants on television Monday night. They looked pretty as peaches—we don't care if the expression is getting old, that's what we're plugging. Archie Ogburn and Joe Jackson weren't as pretty as the girls. We have to hand it to Joe Jackson, though, he's done a good job as chairman this year. He and Archie have made a good team. The Festival is a big success and much of the credit goes to Joe and Archie.

Fred Stein was first at the accident early Sunday morning at Maplesville. True, Fred as a Highway Patrolman and you'd think was supposed to be on the highways, but this was at 4 o'clock in the morning and it was Fred's day off. He was on his way home to enjoy a holiday and got an early start when he came upon the wreck. He called Martin's ambulance and Peewee rushed to the scene of the tragedy. He tried to get McCraw to a Birmingham hospital, but he died by the time the ambulance reached Siluria.

We should be forgiven for telling one "cute saying" of a grandson. The other day his dad had him at the river and was putting a motor on a boat to go up the river. Ray said: "Daddy, what you got that ice cream beater on there for?"

Town's loaded with strangers today and it's your duty as host to see that they have a good time. Make them welcome and invite them back again.

Red Fulmer Motors Opens On U. S. 31

Red Fulmer and Marvin Lowery has opened the Red Fulmer Motors on U. S. 31, across from the Southern Bell Telephone office and next to the "31" Service Station.

Red recently sold Chilton Motors, local Studebaker dealers. He announced Tuesday that they would sell only first class used cars.

Mr. and Mrs. John Studdard and children, Jearlyne, Shelby, James and Buddy Williams spent last Sunday at Cave Springs, Ga.

Fire Destroys Negro Homes

Several negro houses located on the L. & N. Railroad behind the Masonic Temple, burned early Sunday morning. Loss was not announced, but the greater part of three houses were a total loss.

Floyd Church Will Hold Revival

Revival services will start at Floyd Church the first Sunday in August, which is August 3rd. Rev. Hyman Atcheson will deliver the messages and the revival will last for one week. The public is invited.

A.A.U.W. ANNOUNCES LIBRARY OPEN TO PUBLIC ON TUESDAYS

The A.A.U.W. is happy to announce that interest in the Chilton County High School Library has picked up. This week a good number of people went by and used the library.

Won't you come by next Tuesday morning and check out some of those books that you have been intending to read for so long a time? Even if you haven't thought of reading a book, you would be welcome to go by and brouse through the library.

Kiddies, there's a whole section of books and short stories for you to select from. Ask mother to take you by so that you may select your own story. There are books for every age.

Don't forget the time! There will be some one there from 8:00 until 11:00 a.m. every Tuesday morning to help you find the particular books you want and to check them out for you.

FOX HUNTERS TO HOLD FIELD TRIALS

Fox hunters from a wide area in the southeast will be gathering in Fort Payne the last four days in July for the 12th annual field trials and bench show sponsored by the Tri-Counties Fox Hunters Association.

Several hundred hunters, according to President Jim A. Johnson, are expected to enter their dogs in the chase event and many will participate in the bench show. An added attraction this year will be a puppy show at the bench.

The four-day event opens July 28 with a special program in the City Park at 7:15 in the evening. Presiding as master of ceremonies will be Circuit Judge Jeff Haralson and Solicitor Jay Tindle will make a short address. DeKalb County High School's ranking band will play throughout the evening.

The bench show will get underway promptly at 8:30 and Hon. Carl Phifer of Parrish, Alabama, will be bench show judge. Trophies and ribbons will be presented the winners.

The hunt gets underway at daybreak July 29, when a cast will be made on choice running ground near Fort Payne. It will be followed by additional casts on July 30 and 31. Trophies and engraved horns will be given the top ten winners in the field. According to Association Secrteary, President L. H. Cooper, red fox are plentiful in the proposed running territory.

Hon. W. B. Hammond, Mayor of Hammondville, Ala., will serve as master of hounds, and Roland Blansit, Valley Head, Alabama, will be home base judge.

One of the highlights of the four-day event will be a big outdoor square dance in City Park at 8:00 p.m. July 29, when one of the well-known hillbilly bands will furnish music.

In making meringue, always add one teaspoon cold water to each egg white. This helps to prevent the meringue from falling.

One Hurt; One Killed In Highway Accident

Buddy Wade Hurt At Local Airport

Buddy Wade was seriously injured Saturday about noon when the propeller of the Wade plane hit him on the leg and cut through the flesh and bone. He was cut two or three inches above the left knee.

Charles Wade, his father, was with him when the accident happened, and he and Mrs. Wade rushed Buddy to St. Vincent Hospital in Birmingham, where he remained in surgery from 1 o'clock until 5 o'clock. It is reproted that he was resting well Monday and that they would be able to save his leg

Leonard McCraw, age 46, was killed early Sunday morning when the automobile in which he was riding hit a bridge at Maplesville. Martin's ambulance started with him to a Birmingham hospital, but he was dead before they arrived there

C. C. Rasberry, age 51, was badly injured in the same accident and is in Central Alabama Hospital

Coroner Leroy Martin quoted Rasberry as stating that the driver of the car must have gone to sleep causing the wreck.

OPS has brought injunctive actions through the Department of Justice against produce dealers in various parts of the country to stop the over-ceiling sale of potatoes.

TWO VARIETIES OF PEACH FOR WHICH CHILTON COUNTY IS FAMOUS

Child Hit By Car Tuesday

A child was hit by an automobile just south of Maplesville today (Tuesday) just before noon. Details could not be learned before going to press but it is understood that the car hitting the child picked it up and carried it to a Selma hospital. Local Highway Patrolmen are investigating.

CHILTON COUNTY SALES INCREASE OVER 1951

University, Ala. — April retail sales in Alabama were up 16 per cent from April 1951 with the largest increase scored by the clothing industry (up 36 per cent)

The University's Bureau of Business Research in its semi-monthly publication Business News, reports that of the 67 counties in the state only 13 had sales declines this April as compared with April 1951

Net retail sales in Chilton County for April increased 14.9 per cent over a year ago

Other 12 month gains in retail trade concerns show secondhand stores up 19.9 per cent, filling stations up 12.4 per cent, furniture and food concerns up over 10 per cent.

Greatest increase in the wholesale trade field was a 133.7 per cent sales hike of petroleum and petroleum products; electrical goods sales almost doubled in a year's time

During March and April, auto sales and auto equipment showed the biggest jump in the manufacturing category—up 53.6 per cent

Business News quotes the Council of Economic Advisers as reporting that new housing starts across the nation increased seasonally in April to 108,000 units, or 12 per cent above April 1951. This was the second successive month of 1952 in which starts exceeded those of the corresponding month a year ago.

The Bureau publication is a public service of the University of Alabama and is available without charge to interested persons upon request.

WELCOME VISITORS

Today all visitors have a Key to the City of Clanton. You are our guests and our every aim is to make you feel at home and have a good time.

This, Chilton County's Fifth Peach Festival, is destined to be the biggest and best to date and your attendance and the fact that a bumper crop of peaches, plus buyers from Northern markets bidding for the lucious fruit, combine to make it the success that it is.

Enjoy yourself while in Chilton County. Come back to see us at any time. We're always glad to welcome good folks here.

A GOOD TRAFFIC RECORD

Our local Highway Patrolmen, County Officials and City Officers, are to be congratulated on the fine accident record that is Chilton County's the first six months of 1952. We doubt any other county boasting a better traffic record.

True, fenders get smashed, some automobile sides are caved in, tops are flattened, but we have been exceedingly fortunate in the small number of deaths caused by traffic accidents.

Death has taken all holidays but 2 in Chilton County this year. The carefulness with which you drive determines how many will die the second half of 1952.

NOT CHILD'S PLAY

We do not believe a National Party Convention like the Republicans have just held in Chicago should be accompanied by so much foolishness and child's play.

We believe that television with it's report to the people will change a great many of the old ideas and ways of our National Conventions. We are not only referring to the Republican Convention as we understand the same foolishness and horse play goes on in the Democratic National Convention as well.

Seems to us this business of naming the standard bearer of each of our major parties should be taken seriously from start to finish and carried on in an orderly manner. It is of the utmost importance to each and everyone of us and not a plaything as most of those attending seem to think. It is vital to our progress, our livelihood, and in fact, our existence, at this time that we elect a leader who can not only solve the problems of a troubled nation, but also the problems of a troubled world. We do not believe that a convention held under circumstances such as we witnessed last week on television could possibly be to our best interests.

If the Democrats are smart when they meet in Chicago on July 21st, they will take into consideration the reaction of the people of this country to the tomfoolery just witnessed and strive to hold a dignified, orderly convention that will bring credit to the party.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

Nearly all little boys like trains, but with our three-year-old trains are almost an obcession. He's never happier than when he watching a freight engine switch and shuffle cars around on a siding. When he can't watch a real train, he lines up all the chairs he can move and takes long trips on his make-believe train.

Other youngsters may idolize cowboys or fliers or baseball players but to our three-year-old the real heroes of this world are the men who run the trains.

Not long ago, on one of our infrequent visits to the picture show, one scene was devoted to music of a symphony orchestra. I whispered to the three-year-old, "The man in front showing them how to play is the conductor."

"Where's the engineer?" was the immediate reply.

Nobody ever seems to have enough waste baskets. Our neighbor around the corner solved her waste basket problem by salvaging several big cardboard, metal-rimmed cartons from the trash pile behind the drug store, the kind of cartons that ice cream is packed in.

After she had washed the cartons thoroughly, she gave each one a coat of bright enamel inside and out, using colors to match the rooms in which she meant to use the baskets. Then she decorated each of the enameled cartons with decals from the dime store.

Now nearly everybody in our neighborhood is begging the drug store for empty ice cream cartons!

Personal observation: All children are well-behaved in a picture show as long as their supply of popcorn lasts.

The next time you make a scrap bag, you might want to follow the example of the next door neighbor who made her new one out of clear plastic.

Now when she wants to find a particular piece of material, she doesn't have to waste time rummaging through her scrap bag or emptying all the scraps out—she can locate it in the clear plastic bag at a glance.

Something I never knew before: A quarter of an apple placed in the sugar jar will soften the hardest lumps of sugar. The top of the jar must be on tight before the apple can work its magic.

It seems that new ways of preparing eggplant, which is hardly anybody's favorite vegetable, are always turning up. A recipe-collector the other day says her favorite eggplant recipe calls for soaking eggplant slices (½ inch thick) in French dressing. Then drain slices and broil until tender, usually about 15 minutes, turning once. Sprinkle grated cheese over the tops of the slices and return to broiler until cheese melts.

Onions seem to be coming into their own, too, judging by the space being devoted to them in recipe columns. The favorite onion dish around our house is this casserole:

Peel large onions, cut in half and boil until tender. Drain and place in shallow baking dish. Add a can of cream of mushroom soup, sprinkle crushed potato chips over the top and place in a moderate oven until thoroughly heated.

SAFETY MEASURE FOR MACHINERY ON FARM

Farm machinery is a great tool for farm operations, but it is also a dangerous thing if not handled properly.

J. T. McGaillard, API Extension specialist in farm mechanization states that safety shields and inspection plates should always be kept in place.

LIVESTOCK AND SOIL IMPROVEMENT

Livestock offers farmers an opportunity to increase their incomes and conserve and increase the productivity of their soils at the same time.

FALL VEGETABLE CROPS

A good firm seedbed is most important in getting a stand of fall vegetable crops.

What To Do Before Paint Is Applied

Auburn, Ala. — Any surface should be made clean, dry, and smooth before paint is applied.

Alice Peavy, API Extension home management specialist, says that this means free from dampness grease, gummy or stickly substances loose paint, and dust.

She points out that oil paint and varnish will not dry on a damp surface nor over a partially dry coat of paint or varnish. They either remain sticky or crack and peel. Each coat should dry thoroughly before the next coat is applied.

"If a new, unpainted wood or metal surface is in good condition clean it with steel wool or fine sandpaper and dust it thoroughly before painting," adds Miss Peavy. "When this step is taken, a lasting coat of paint will result."

Bronchoscopy

Bronschoscopy, a term meaning the inspection or observation of the bronchi, is becoming of increasing importance in the modern diagnosis and treatment of chest diseases.

Air, as it is inhaled, passes through the larynx or voice box and into the trachea or windpipe. The trachea divides in the chest into two main bronchi which conduct air to each lung, one on either side of the chest. Each of these main bronchi then divides into the bronchi to each lobe of the lung. Within each lobe, the bronchi divide and branch, thus becoming smaller and more numerous so that each tiny area of the lung receives its tiny bronchus. These bronchi are a system of branching tubes and may be likened to the branches of a tree. Because of this similarity, it is sometimes called the tracheobronchial tree.

The function or action of this system of tubes is to conduct air to and from the lungs and to drain the lungs. The actual absorption of oxygen into the blood and the elimination of carbon dioxide from the blood occurs in the lung itself, but it is the bronchi which conduct the oxygen to the lungs and remove the carbon dioxide.

The second principal function of the bronchi is drainage. It is estimated that about a quart of fluid is brought up from the bronchi every twenty-four hours. The inside walls of the bronchi are moist and this moisture must be constantly changed and kept fresh. The interior of the bronchi is lined with cells which have a minute hairlike tuft protruding from their surface. These "cila," as they are called wave back and forth and move the secretion in an upward direction.

When the fluid on the walls of the bronchi becomes too plentiful or too thick in consistency to be eliminated by the cilia, then a cough occurs; and these secretions are carried upwards by that action.

The instrument used in the examination of the bronchi is called the bronchoscope. Although there are many different types and sizes the bronchoscope consists essentially of a straight, hollow, round tube with a tiny electric lamp at the end. It is possible to see through it and to insert into it various instruments.

Bronchoscopy is one of the developments in modern medical care which has increased diagnostic accuracy and has great therapeutic value in the treatment of various pulmonary diseases. Its value in the removal of foreign bodies from the lung is a life-saving procedure

Pneumonia Is No Longer A Dangerous Killer

Montgomery, Ala. — The State Health Department says that pneumonia appears to be on its way out as a major cause of deaths in Alabama—largely due to the so-called wonder drugs and improved medical services.

State Health Officer Dr. D. G. Graham says pneumonia deaths in Alabama last year were less than half the annual average for the five-year period ending with 1931. This was despite Alabama's sharp population increase in the past 20 years.

Graham said 1,085 persons died in the state from pneumonia last year. The five year annual average 1927-31 inclusive was 2,227. He said however, that it still ranks high among killers. It ran fourth, behind heart disease, brain hemorrhage and cancer.

Another health department disclosure was that Alabama whooping cough cases fell from 97 in April to 65 in May. This is the least number of cases reported for any one month this year, the department said. Only DeKalb, with 21, and Jefferson, with 10, reported as many as 10 cases in May.

Industrial Accidents Show Increase In 51

Montgomery, Ala. — State Industrial Relations Director Joe L. Coleman says industrial accidents injured 6,897 Alabama workers last year, 171 more than in 1950.

Coleman said the slight increase was due to the larger number of firms reporting. The frequency in injuries was actually lower for 1951, he said.

Lumbering showed the greatest frequency of accidents last year among the major industrial classifications. Iron founderies were second.

Figures over the past six years show the number of accidents dropped sharply in 1949, but have risen slightly each year since. Coleman said the total number of mandays lost in 1951 was 595,183. This is the first upswing in man-days lost in five years. The number has been decreasing each year since 1946.

ABC Board Cracks Down

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama ABC Enforcement Chief Joseph T. Burton says 286 illicit moonshine stills were destroyed last month in the state.

He said the destroyed stills were capable of producing 54,936 gallons of moonshine whisky a month. Burton estimated the value of the destroyed stills, and other seized items, as $51,811.

In addition, the enforcement officials made 424 cases, arrested 292 persons, destroyed 139,200 gallons of mash, seized 2,270 gallons of whisky, 4,909 bottles of beer, and 257 gallons of homebrew.

Taken were 28 vehicles, and Jefferson County led with 50 destroyed stills. Tuscaloosa was in second place with 35. Other counties in which 10 or more stills were broken up included: Walker, 14; Shelby, 10; Monroe, 11; Mobile, 15.

Ordered and Decreed, this the 9th day of July, 1952.

VICTOR J. HEARD,
Judge Chilton County Law and Equity Court.

Filed in office this date, July 9th, 1952.

C. DELLE D. COBB,
28-3tc Ex-Officio Register.

The drama found great favor with early Alabamians in every part of the state except in the Tennessee Valley. In this area camp-meeting evangelists spent many a sermon denouncing the theater and theatergoers.

It was not at all an uncommon site to hear a candidate for public office make a politcial speech at an early Alabama funeral, for the candidate could always expect a good audience since everyone for miles around usually was in attendance. A funeral in that day and time was an excellent excuse to get away from the loneliness of pioneer life.

Southern Agriculture Makes Remarkable 10 Year Record In Farming Activities

Latest Figures Published By The Progressive Farmer

Birmingham, Ala. — Latest census figures and data furnished by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the Department of Agriculture combine to give an encouraging picture of the rural South of today. A folder recently released by The Progressive Farmer, Birmingham, gives state totals on number, size and ownership of farms, cash farm income and expenditures, number and value of livestock, and data on livestock, automotive and other mechanical equipment.

Some striking facts are brought forth clearly. For instance, during the 10-year period, 1940-1950, the South's farms decreased in number by 11.8%, in acreage harvested by 6.5% and in farm workers by 18%. Yet, in the same period, the South's farms increased in total acreage (including pastures and woodlots) by 6.2%, in tractors by 241.5%, in expenditures for livestock and poultry feeds by 358%. These figures indicate fewer but larger farms, less acreage devoted to row crops and more to pastures and livestock, less hired help and more machinery.

Indicating a trend to larger farms, census figures show that farms of less than 50 acres decreased 12.4%; 50-100 acres, 15.7% and 100-220 acres, 14.3%. Farms of 220 acres and over increased 13.6% with the largest gains in the 1000 acres-and-over class—36.9%.

Much has been said about the growth of the South's livestock industry, and animal census figures and valuation for several classes are given by states. As a whole, the South owned, as of January 1, 1952, 27,881,000 cattle—31.7% of the nation's total.

The South still owns 92.4% of the nation's mules — it is hard to believe that there are still 1,777,000 of these faithful workers in the South. But there are also 926,000 tractors and 822,137 trucks at work on Southern fields, and that totals almost exactly one tractor or truck for every mule. It is interesting to note also that over 40% of the tractor-owning farms get along entirely without horse- or mule-power.

The farmer is a big spender, too, as shown by these figures. During 1949 he spent over $848 million for hired labor, $551 million for livestock and poultry, $701 million for feeds, $294 million for gas and oil, and $185 million for tractor and machinery repairs.

To show that the average Southern farmer's economic position has been better, 1,747,074 of the South's farms are operated by the owner (or manager) and only 905,321 by tenants. This an increase of 12.1% among owners, and a decrease of 37.5% among tenants. The South's cash farm income in 1940 was $2.54 billion, and in 1950 it had grown to $8.42 billion—an increase of 230%. Besides using a large part of the increased earnings to pay off mortgages, and buy new equipment and stock, the rural South has banked a huge sum. In 1940, deposits in country banks (towns of less than 15,000 population) totaled $1.18 billion: in 1950 the total was $5.02 billion.

The average Southern farm today consists of 150 acres, of which 36½ acres are devoted to croplands; it raises 10½ cattle, valued at $1,510 and other livestock and poultry valued at $327. More than 65% of Southern farms are worked by the owner, and the average farmer had a cash income in 1951 of $3,540 and a worthwhile bank account.

Cold statistics prove that "it's true what they say about Dixie!"

OPS has continued until next November 4 the suspension from price controls of rates, charges and compensation for services performed by custom packers in connection with the harvesting, preparing for market and marketing of fresh fruits, vegetables, berries and tree nuts which are exempt from price ceilings under the General Ceiling Price Regulation.

OPS Director Ellis G. Arnall has reassured consumers that "for the foreseeable future, we are not prepared to take decontrol action in any consequential area. Decontrol connotes an outright and permanent casting off of control, which in the present situation would be dangerous," he observed. "We will, of course, continue to decontrol commodities which are not significant from the point of view of the stabilization program."

OPS and the Steel Industry's own experts have agreed that the whole package of proposals of the Wage Stabilization Board would increase the industry's labor costs by $3.49 a ton in the first half of this year, by $4.58 a ton in the second half, and by $5.94 a ton in the first half of 1953. The steel companies are entitled to increases of about $3 a ton on the average under the Capehart amendment and such have been authorized by OPS. However, OPS takes the stand that part of the increased costs can be absorbed fairly and equitably by the steel companies under the OPS earnings standard.

TO PICK OUT quality celery, select stalks of medium length and thick stems free from damage. The exterior should be smooth with fresh looking leaves. Limp or stringy stalks with dry brown tops should be avoided.

Good cauliflower has a creamy white color. It's clean, feels heavy and is firm. Outer leaves should be fresh and green. Avoid those with dark spots or yellowed leaves as this indicates age.

Fresh, fine cabbage has no discolored veins, and is well trimmed. Lift it to test for heaviness. It should feel heavier than it looks.

Cracked or water-soaked carrots will not give you the most for your money; neither will those which have green on top of the carrot. The color should be a bright, fresh orange, and the skin smooth, firm and clean.

(Makes 3 dozen)

- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup granulated sugar
- ½ cup brown sugar, firmly
- 2 eggs, unbeaten
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 1 cup shredded coconut, toasted
- 1 cup rolled oats, toasted

Combine shortening, sugars, eggs, salt and vanilla and beat thoroughly. Sift flour and soda together; add to first mixture with coconut and oats; blend together thoroughly. Drop level tablespoonfuls on greased baking sheets. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 10 to 15 minutes.

If fresh mushrooms are exposed too long to strong light, they will lose weight and wither. Brown mushrooms are more flavorful than white ones.

Green onions at their best are tender and crisp with fresh green tops. Avoid those with damaged tops or nicks as these indicate age.

There are many different kinds of okra. Some are two inches long while others are four. Some are green, others are whitish green. Some are smooth, others are grooved. All should have fresh pods that snap easily.

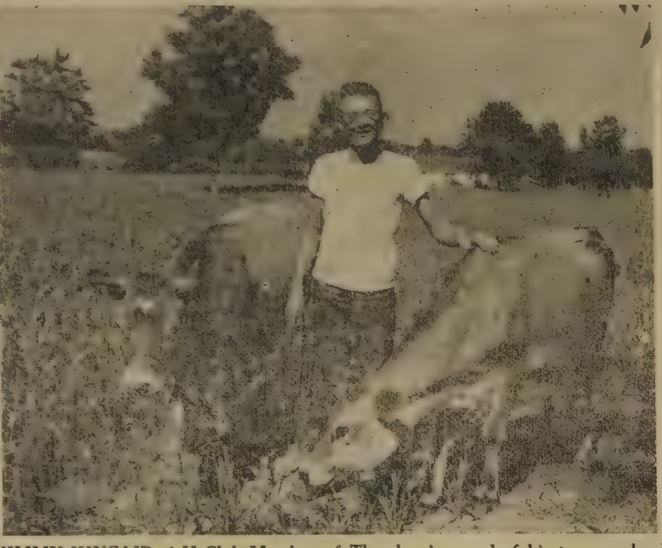
County Youth Making College Money From His Dairy Cows



JIMMY KINCAID, 4-H Club Member of Thorsby, is proud of his two purebred Jersey heifers. One of the heifers Jimmy won in last year's County Show as a Showmanship and Grooming Award. The heifers are grazing sudan grass that was planted for temporary grazing.

Jimmy Kincaid of Thorsby Route 1 is one of the outstanding Junior Dairymen in the County. Last fall Jimmy bought a purebred Jersey heifer while participating in the County Jersey Show. When the show was over Jimmy was able to carry two purebred heifers home rather than one, as he had won the heifer which was awarded for showmanship and grooming. With two nice purebred Jersey females Jimmy was well on the way toward starting a herd of his own.

When the two family milk cows freshened, Jimmy's daddy, James H. Kincaid, agreed to give Jimmy the money from milk sales if he milked and cared for the cows. Also agreed, Jimmy was to pay for any feed that was needed which was not grown on the farm. According to Jimmy's statement, he has been able to buy supplementary feed make his spending money and put $40.00 monthly in the bank. This amount saved is for an educational fund. Jimmy has already decided to go to college when he finishes [illegible]

Pasture on the Kincaid farm consists of lespedeza sericea, kudzu [illegible] and white clover. Sudan [illegible] was planted for temporary grazing [illegible]

Next week Jimmy will attend [illegible] 4-H [illegible] Auburn as one [illegible] County delegates

As Jimmy develops his dairy program he should make an outstanding record in dairying. Not only would he earn a cash income from his dairy work, but he will learn a great many things about dairying and dairy cattle that can be learned only by actually doing the work.

Better Cotton Grades Bring Higher Prices

Auburn, Ala. — At present spot market cotton quotations show that one inch white low middling cotton is selling for $30 to $40 a bale less than one inch white middling cotton

"Therefore," says O. N. Andrews API cotton specialist, "growers should make every effort to produce good grades of cotton this fall."

He suggests that grass, weeds, and insects be controlled. Boll weevil; and aphids often cause spots and stains. If cotton becomes rank, defoliate to reduce loss from boll rot. This practice will also reduce damage from insects. Start picking cotton clean and free of trash when bolls are open wide, and get it out of the field before too much weather damage occurs.

The specialist adds that if cotton is picked damp, spread it out to dry. Dew-damp cotton may ruin the quality of a truck or trailer load, representing several bales Also, take cotton to the gin dry, and do not mix clean picked cotton with rough picked dirty cotton Finally, take cotton to a good gin equipped to do a good job.

News Of Soil Conservation In Chilton County

Earl O'Neal, Stanton, is planning a gravily irrigation over his bottom pasture. With a few old plank and ½ day of labor, Earl turned a small creek down the same bottom pasture last summer, and was pleased enough that a more permanent dam and lateral drains will be installed this year.

Earl as well as a lot of neighbors have also done an excellent job protecting their timberland from fire.

Monroe Foshee has some good news for farmers who have bermuda and have not thought too much of it as a grazing crop. Reseeding Crimson Clover was sowed on the murda two years ago and fertilized last year. Mr. Foshee states, "That is some of the best grazing I have on the farm."

To utilize some rough land with kudzu already established on, James Kincaid is now hogging off some early corn next to the kudzu and the kudzu is furnishing the necessary proteins to top out the hogs.

Grady Cleckler, Clanton, Ala., Route 5, states, "If you don't believe quail will eat billions of lespedeza seed, just plant you a border and let it make seed and the birds find it." The birds craw are always full of those seeds.

In case there is enough moisture in the soil to turn and harrow, now is a good time to begin land preparation for fall pastures and winter grazing.

All Out War Being Declared On The Boll Weevil

During the past few days, nine cotton fields have been checked for boll weevil infestation. Fields were selected in different areas of the County, and infestation ranged from 12 per cent to 67 per cent and—if this is a fair smaple—the boll weevil war should now be declared.

The materials and procedures suggested should be of assistance in applying cotton insect poison materials effectively:

Poisons to use:

1. A 3-5 mixture of BHC-DDT
2. Alternate applications of calcium arsenate and a 3.5 mixture of BHC-DDT.
3. Alternate applications of calcium arsenate and calcium arsenate and calcium arsenate that contains 2 per cent nicotine.
4. 20 per cent toxaphene.
5. 2.5-5 per cent aldrin-DDT.
6. 1.5-5 per cent dieldrin-DDT.

When to Poison:

Dust or spray when cotton insects are present in large enough numbers to damage stands or reduce yields. Usually when plants are fruiting freely and 25 per cent or more squares are punctured. (Most Chilton County fields have 50 per cent of squares punctured now).

How to Apply Poison:

Begin with three dust or spray applications, applied four to five days apart. After third application check infestation each week. Now start control procedure with an application of poison every four to five days if infestation again reaches twenty-five per cent. It will require seven to ten pounds per acre, per application of calcium arsenate and ten to fifteen pounds of Toxaphene or other organic materials. For effective cotton insect control, farmers have been applying a total of seven or more applications. It is "folly" to think that one or two early poisonings will control insects If you are going to start poisoning cotton insects, stay with the job until it is completed or don't start.

MACEDONIA

(Too Late For Last Week

A good number was present for Sunday School and B.T.U. Some business was taken care of. Among the business was the sad news that the Young People beat the Adults this quarter. Or was it sad? Its pretty good news I guess to have the young people so interested in church work. Our penalty for losing is to treat the young people to ice cream and lemonade at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Briggs Gibson Saturday night. Everyone who has freezers are requested to bring them along with filling. Those who haven't freezers, bring something to help out with lemonade or cream We sure have lots of ice cream eaters around Macedonia. Also B.T.U. officers will be chosen for the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Cofer and Lorene visited Mr. and Mrs. John Pullen and family of Lawley last week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Smith's sons Ralph, Jake and Wren, visited them last week. They also visited with Mrs. Becky Cates of Selma, who is at present a semi-invalid.

The 4-H Club girls met with their leader, Mrs. Buna Ward. There were eight present. They demonstrated oatmeal cookies.

Last Sunday we were delighted to have a very fine young minister from Howard College with us, Rev Billy Ray Nix, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Nix. It always delights us to see our youth begin a life for God, because they build our tomorrows. We invite him back.

Weed Killers Don't Spare Cotton Either

Auburn, Ala. — Each summer during recent years a few cotton growers over the state have become alarmed over what they think is a new cotton disease. On further investigation, however, they find that their cotton has been damaged by 2,4-D or similar weed killers.

O. N. Andrews, API Extension cotton specialist, explains that when cotton plants are affected by 2,4-D the leaves and squares may become narrow, long, thick, and frazzled on the edges. Yields may be greatly reduced, especially if injury occurs in the fruiting stage.

"Therefore," warns the specialist farmers and others using 2,4-D or other weed killers should take every precaution to prevent spray from drifting to nearby cotton fields. Sometimes the material may drift and injure cotton several hundred yards away. If the ester or volatile form of 2,4-D is used, even the fumes may damake nearby cotton or other plants sensitive to these chemicals."

Prepare Land Correctly For Fall Planting

It's about time to prepare land for fall crops, according to J. T. Gaillard, API Extension specialist in farm mechanization.

He reminds farmers that poor land preparation has caused many poor stands in the past. "Land should be turned with a turn plow followed by a disk harrow to remove air pockets," says Gaillard The disk harrow should be followed by a section harrow to remove air pockets near the surface and to do a smoothing job."

FIN-FAN ITEMS

Alabama Fishing is sadly under rated by Alabamians. For instance, when most local anglers go out and fail to bring in a full string they immediately throw off on the location instead of placing the blame on their own lack of know how know where and know when. Then these are those that bring back nice catches and think nothing of it—this hurts because the story should be passed on to others Some of the State's leading newspapers devote very little or no space at all to fishing. What the New York Yankees or the Pittsburgh Pirates did crowds the fishing news clear off the streets. Pick up a copy of most any sports magazine and look over the advertisements of vacation spots and fishing lodges Canada, Maine, Wisconsin and Florida are well represented but no Alabama Camps are listed. How about it Alabama? We do have what it takes, so let's bring some of that $40,000,000.00 home that they say is our recreation potential increase. Let's talk up our fishing instead of running it down. A little sprucing up around some of our camps and more friendly chit-chat with the customers would sure pay off.

This is the time of year when some catch 'em and some don't Last week some mighty crafty fishermen went home empty handed while Marion W. Easterling and Leeland Hudson, Clanton, each caught the creel limits in White Lake Bass. Their string of 30 fish tilted the scales to 48½ pounds This success story came from Lake Lay. About the same time, C. E "Pop" Wade, Jordan Dam, caught enough Bass from the waters of Lake Yates to feed his entire crew of some 20 men with a most delightful fish fry.

If that thrilling inboard boat race on Lake Jordan interferred with your going to the casting tournament June 29th, you can catch up by attending the Fifth Annual Dixie Tournament to be staged July 19th and 20th at Lane Park, Birmingham. The Birmingham Izaak Walton League has the honor of sponsoring this highly entertaining display of real casting skill. There will be two days of fly and bait casting events. A ¼ ounce skish spinning event will also be included in the program. Teams from all over Dixie will be on hand to vie for the many attractive prizes. You may participate too, even if you do not belong to a Club, prior to this tournament. So bring your gear and the kids, there will be barbecue and enjoyment for the entire family. If you have never attended one of these tournaments, you should come out and pick up some good casting pointers from the experts. Mr George B. Alexander, 1307, First National Building, Birmingham 3 will answer any questions or give you other details you may desire.

Alabama Power Fishing Contest rolls into a new month as new Whopper-Catchers vie for trophies.

Lake Lay—

Ed Hardiman, Manager, Riverview Fishing Lodge, near Lay Dam, reports: Mrs. Frances Yeackle Route 5, Clanton, picked up 15 Stripes (the limit) that weighed 19 pounds. The largest on the string was two pounds 8 ounces and a top water plug and Peck's White Fly was the bait used. W. W. Eager. 4805 Georgia Road, Birmingham also used a top water plug and fly trailer to catch, on the first cast, a 2 pound and 8 ounce Smallmouth Bass. M. E. O'Neal, Route 5, Clanton, caught his 2 pound 12 ounce Smallmouth Bass with a Buck Jones Fluffy Tail.

Lake Mitchell—

Traywick's Boat Landing, mouth of Yellow Leaf Creek, reports: Ralph Jones, Route 5, Clanton, used a Midget River Runt and about 15 minutes to land his largest catch of the day, that being a 4 pound 11 ounce Smallmouth Bass.

We have a large supply of Whopper Catcher certificates so enter your catch in the contest. You may win a nice prize.

Keeping Quality Of Frozen Meat

All frozen meats may be thawed before they are cooked or during cooking.

"However," says Lavada Curtis API Extension food preservation specialist, "meat that is thawed at ordinary room temperature should be cooked promptly because the warm, wet outer surface is an ideal place for spoilage to start."

She explains that if meat is thawed more slowly in the refrigerator, the surface remains cold and the thawed piece can often be held a day or longer without developing off odors. Of course, the meat thawed in the refrigerator will have a better taste.

Maybe Your School Bus Could Use One —

Wonder if you heard about the idea a school-bus driver had?

He got a little leary about cars that would either whizz past the bus—or else be so cautious they'd creep behind and clog up traffic.

His solution was simple: he attached an old red-amber-green traffic signal—the kind you see at intersections—to the rear of the bus! Hooked it up so it works just like a traffic light. Now motorists know when the light is green it's safe to pass ... amber means caution ... red means to stop and stay behind the bus.

From where I sit, this fellow deserves congratulations. Such extra safeguards help protect the interests of the entire community. In a similar way, the Beer Retailers protect their own and the public's interests by voluntarily co-operating with the Self-Regulation Program sponsored by the Brewing Industry. They keep their places bright and orderly, spic 'n' span—so they'll always have the "green light" from the public.

BELLINGRATH GARDENS TO BE ADMISSION FREE DURING DEEP SEA RODEO

Mobile, Ala.—The beauty of fabulous Bellingrath Gardens, "Charm Spot of the Deep South," will play an important role in the entertainment of the 1952 Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo visitors.

The gardens will be open to the public admission free on Sunday, August 10, during the ten-day Deep Sea Rodeo Festival, which starts August 7, with Confederate Trade Days, and will be climaxed with competition for $10,000 in fishing prizes August 15-17.

Bellingrath Gardens will be open to the public free of charge as part of the 83rd birthday celebration of Mr. Walter D. Bellingrath, founder of the gardens.

The entertainment program will include guided tours of the $35,000,000 Alabama State Docks, tours of historic homes, championship stock car races, wrestling matches, a swimming tournament at Spring Hill College and many other attractions.

Jesse Acree, Rodeo President, urges visitors to "come to Mobile between August 7 and 17, and enjoy a grand summer vacation with entertainment for every taste—plus the opportunity to spend Confederate money and get some real shopping bargains.

Acree points out, too, that "the whole deal is instigated and sponsored by the Mobile Junior Chamber of Commerce."

DUE PRAISE

Those who contributed so much to the successful Peach Festival held last week are due high praise from the citizens of Chilton County.

What benefits the farmer in this county benefits all. And the Festival just closed was successful in every way. Publicity throughout the State and the South was received, all committees functioned well, our neighboring cities joined to "put the Peach Festival over."

Those due praise are too numerous to mention. They come from outside Chilton County as well as from within. All we can say is that to the Daily Press, the Weekly Press, the Radio Stations, WAFM-TV, the Civic Clubs and Chambers of Commerce in Birmingham and Montgomery, and all those wonderful people contributing their "bit" to insure its success, the Chairman, the co-Chairman, the Committeemen, and all loyal Chilton Countians thank you from the bottom of our heart for your cooperation.

TODAY'S BEST BUY

Some other section may challenge the claim of Chilton County as the "peach and berry center of the world" but any challenger would have a hard time producing better peaches than those Chilton County beauties we found at a roadside stand the other day.

Our basket was run of the orchard but we'd give it a blue ribbon in any competition. And here's a tip for thrifty housewives throughout Alabama:

The peach crop is about twice as big as it was last year and prices are far below what they were in '51. That makes Chilton County Peaches just about today's best buy.—Birmingham Post-Herald

IMPROVEMENTS AT CITY HALL

Things have cooled off a bit at City Hall. Things got pretty hot around there for awhile but the Mayor and Council thought something should be done about it and got a cooling system. Now it's "20 degrees cooler inside."

An addressograph machine has been purchased too for mailing water and gas bills. This cuts down considerably on the work that was done in the past each month in mailing water bills and gas bills to the subscribers.

The past week saw a cancelling machine purchased and installed at City Hall. This machine eliminates the buying of stamps and having to stick them on individual letters and post cards, of course saving additional time for the young ladies in the City Clerk's office.

All in all, many improvements have been added at city hall. The Mayor and present Councilmen have conducted the city's business with marked effeciency and we see no reason for a change when time comes to elect a new Mayor and Council.

Things have been running smoothly at City Hall for a long time now and when things are running smoothly, and all City Officials are cooperating, the people, you and me, are the ones who benefit.

We believe it would be wise if the people of Clanton would retain it's present City Officials for another four years.

During the course of a day, children make so many requests and ask so many questions that parents sometimes "turn off their ears" in self defense.

The three-year-old and the five-year-old bombarded me with so many questions the other day, and a hot day it was too, that my ears had been turned off for quite some time when I became aware that the five-year-old was being most persistent with her question. So I listened, and what I heard was,

"Do we have any old Cizzero?"

Thinking that my ears must be playing tricks, I asked for a repeat. With the patience children reserve for stupid adults, she asked again,

"Do we have an old Cizzero?"

I was completely puzzled, couldn't even begin to guess what it was she wanted, so I asked, "what are you going to do with it?"

"Cut out paper dolls," she answered. "You know, they're all kinds of paper dolls in a Cizzero."

Then the light dawned—she wanted a Sears, Roebuck catalog!

The mother down the street who does a lot of sewing for her small children has always been afraid that one of her youngsters would get too close to the machine while she was sewing and get his hand hurt in the whirling fly wheel.

Now she has dispelled her fears by the use of a simple safety precaution: she slipped a plastic refrigerator bowl cover over the wheel. With the wheel covered, there's certainly less danger of small fingers being caught in the spokes of the wheel.

Our neighbors around the corner, the ones with the television set, declare it's amazing how many friends "just happened to drop by" on the nights the Republican and Democratic conventions in Chicago were being televized.

We had a drawer pull, the screw type, that was loose and had been falling off for months despite our efforts to tighten it. Then along came the next door neighbor and fixed it in a few minutes.

All she did was put a strip of tinfoil in the hole in the knob and then replace the screw. The threads in the screw cut into the tinfoil and imbedded it in the wood, making a tight connection.

For a refreshing drink these hot days, try mixing frozen orange juice concentrate with ginger ale or sparkling water instead of with plain water. This beverage is ready for a party if scoops of sherbert or ice cream are added just before serving.

To feed the friends who dropped by to watch the conventions on television, our neighbor kept a jar of her own special sandwich spread in the refrigerator. She makes the spread by mixing ½ pound smoke-flavored cheese with six tablespoons mayonnaise and 2 teaspoons caraway seeds, and she serves it spread on crackers or on thin slices of rye bread.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

HEARING LOSS

Many people have trouble with their ears and hearing, but for some reason or other do nothing about it. Since hearing loss usually develops very gradually without pain, with no running of the ears in most instances, a person finds it hard to believe that the ears are going bad and is inclined to blame the change in hearing on something else.

Hearing loss stems from many causes. Hearing loss also appears in many forms, any one of which may result from infections, disease or injury, individually or collectively. Many types of hearing loss can be remedied by medication. Others require surgical attention.

Some persons may not benefit by any medical or surgical procedure, but instead may be helped with other procedures which might include the use of a hearing aid. The proper decision as to which kind of treatment is to be utilized depends solely on an accurate and positive diagnosis.

Many people think they can be aided by vitamins, operations on the nose or tonsils or ear, but this is not always the case. People should not be misled by wild-eyed advertising or high pressure salesmanship.

It must be remembered that a hearing aid does not restore normal hearing. Rather it helps the person to hear in the same way that an artificial leg helps a person to walk, but at the same time does not restore normal walking. A person should not 'shop' for a hearing aid. The process of getting a hearing aid should be seperated from the process of diagnosis and treatment. It should be considered part of good treatment of certain kinds of hearing loss. Hearing loss should not be hidden. It should be discovered and treated. For every person some improvement is possible, if only to allay his fears and, if only to learn how to make the best use of the hearing he has left.

Clean Those Hats, But Do It Safely

The first step in renovating a hat is a thorough cleaning job.

The job can be done with one of the many cleaning fluids found on the market. Since they are inflammable and explosive, they are supposed to be used out of doors and entirely away from fire or heat.

Hats that have been cleaned must be allowed to dry thoroughly out-of-doors before blocking. Several hours are required for the cleaning solution to evaporate.

Alabama Deep Sea Rodeo Offers $10,000 To Lucky Fishermen

EVENT TO BE HELD OFF DAUPHIN ISLAND

Mobile, Alabama—Fishermen who compete for $10,000 in prizes during the 1952 Alabama Deep Sea Rodeo will have an extra measure of convenience and safety with the benefits offered by Marine Station WLO.

This station, offering ship-to-shore communictaion service, has its headuarters at Alabama State Docks and will go into operation August 10, just prior to the rodeo scheduled August 15-17, in the Gulf of Mexico just off historic Dauphin Island.

The 1952 rodeo is planned as the largest sporting event ever held in the Mobile area and about 3,500 anglers from all parts of the U. S. are expected to participate. Prizes will include a new 1952 all-steel station wagon, boats, outboard motors and scores of other fishing awards.

As a prelude to the fishing festival, there will be a Confederate Trade Days program, August 7-9, when Mobilians and visitors can spend Confederate money as part payment for items they buy in local stores.

A highlight of the sports festival will be the Rodeo Championship Stock Car Races at Lakeview Estates. Between 50 and 100 drivers are expected for these races which offer $1,000 in cash prizes, a championship trophy and other awards.

Plans have been made for a world's championship match and other sporting events will be featured.

Free color folders may be obtained by writing Alabama Deep Sea Fushing Rodeo, P. O. Box 172, Mobile, Alabama.

Jesse Acree, Rodeo President, urges folks who like sports, especially fishing, or who are interested in spending Confederate money to be in Mobile between August 7th and 17th.

"The 1952 Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo will be the best in the 20-year history of this sports event—be sure you are on hand for the fun," Acree urges.

Convicted Of Fraud In Unemployment Compensation Cases

Montgomery, Ala.—Fifty-eight Alabamians were convicted of fraud in drawing unemployment compensation benefits during the first half of 1952, Joe L. Coleman, Director of the Department of Industrial Relations, announced.

However, he pointed out that the number of cases of fraud was very small compared to the total number of claims paid.

No overpayment was discovered in 1,704 cases investigated during the first half of the year.

Overpayments due to both fraud and error amounted to $31,824 for the sixmonth period, or slightly over one-half of one per cent of the total amount of benefits paid.

Meanwhile, $23,209 was recovered in repayments and by charging overpayments against subsequent claims for unemployment benefits.

Both total overpayments and fraud cases tried in Alabama courts showed a sharp drop from the same period last year.

The number of convictions for fraud in drawing unemployment compensation during the first half of 1951 was 100.

Order Pine Seedlings Before Time To Plant

Alabama farmers are in for a disappointment this winter if they wait until planting season to order pine seedlings.

By the time planting season rolls around, the seedling supply will be exhausted. Now is the time to place orders for seedlings. Any farmer who orders 10,000 seedlings or less at the present time will be sure of receiving his order.

Glenns Return From Interesting Trip

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Glenn have returned from a week of most interesting sight-seeing in Florida. Leaving home on Monday, their first stop was at Daytona Beach. From there, they went into St. Augustine where they enjoyed a tour of the city in a surrey with the fringe on top, driven by an old colored uncle, wearing his high-top hat. On to Clear Water, then to Weeki Wachee, where they attended the "Spring of Merimaids." under water theatre, and enjoyed a jungle cruise ten miles down the river.

Visiting other points of interest and returning by Tallahassee they stopped for a visit with Mrs. Glenn's cousin, the former Senator of Florida, Claude Pepper and his family.

The Glenns arrived in Clanton on Saturday, and on Monday she was listening to the Joe Rumore radio program and much to her surprise Joe announced that he had received an air mail letter from Charles A. Riddle, who is in Korea, asking for a song to be dedicated to his mother, Mrs. H. H. Glenn of Clanton. Of course, hearing this song from her son made Mrs. Glenn's vacation week complete.

My readers keep asking why we didn't have news last week. The reason is that my news now must be in Clanton on Tuesdays, so from this on, I will mail my news on Saturday instead of Mondays, as I have been doing. So if you have news and are interested in continuing the Maplesville News please call it in on or before Saturday, otherwise the news will hot get in. I have noticed in my year of writing for the Chilton County News and Union-Banner the ones that hollow the loudest and do the most grumbling and complaining when the news is short or left out entirely are the very people that never make any effort to see that their news gets to the reporter.

It takes an item here and an item there to make the news so if you are not interested enough to get in your items of news—why grumble and complain.

Lutheran Church News

Service 11:00. Sunday School 10:00. Sermon topic, First Things First.

With the passing of the Republican national convention, and with the Democrats now in session, the Lutheran church submits this statement concerning its position on politics.

The Lutheran church is non-partisan politically because we feel that the choice of political affiliation should be left up to the individual. The church will intervene in politics only when religious freedom or moral pirnciples are threatened, such as the attempt on the part of President Truman to appoint an ambassador to the Vatican. Even when the church does so intervene, it always does so on the basis of principles and not partisan politics.

Democrats, Dixitcrats, or Republicans! the Lutheran church cordially welcomes you to its services and invites you to become one of its faithful members, for "ye are all One in Christ."

Korean GI Bill of Rights to Provide Five Benefits

The so-called Korean GI Bill, recently enacted into law for veterans who served in the armed forces since the start of the Korean conflict on June 27, 1950, provides five benefits.

Harley A. Smith, Manager of the Alabama Veterans Administration Regional Office, in an explanation of the new law said today that benefits, designed to assist veterans in their return to civilian life, are (1) education and training; (2) guaranteed or insured loans for homes, farms and businesses; (3) unemployment compensation; (4) mustering-out pay; and (5) job-finding help.

The education and training provisions allow a veteran one and one-half days of training for each day in service after the outbreak of the Korean fighting—regardless of where the service was performed —up to a maximum of 36 months.

However, veterans who have previously trained under earlier veterans' training laws—the World War II GI Bill or Public Laws 16 or 894 for the disabled—may get up to 48 months, minus whatever time they've already spent in training under those earlier programs.

A veteran may train in school or college, on-the-job or on-the-farm, so long as the school or training establishment has been approved by an appropriate State Approving Agency and meets other qualifications of the law. Only one change of course program is allowed, except under certain conditions determined by the Veterans Administration.

Veterans in GI Bill training will receive an education and training allowance each month from the Government, to meet part of the expenses of their training and living costs. Tuition, fees, books supplies and euipment will not be paid by the Government; instead, they will have to be paid out of the monthly allowance.

Rates for veterans in full-time training in schools and colleges are $110 a month, if they have no dependents; $135 if they have one dependent, and $160 if they have more than one dependent. Those in training less than full time will receive lower monthly rates.

Top monthly amounts for on-the-job trainees are $70 without dependents; $85 with one dependent, and $105 with more than one dependent. The maximums for institutional on-farm trainees are $95, $110, and $130. The law requires that on-job and on-farm rates be reduced, at four-month intervals, as the training progresses and the veteran's own earnings increase.

The law also specifies that veterans taking institutional on-farm training must devote full time to their program.

The new GI Bill places a $310-a-month ceiling on job training, regardless of dependency status. Should a veteran's training allowance plus his earnings as a trainee exceed this amount, VA will reduce the allowance accordingly. There's no ceiling, however, on what he may earn.

A veteran will get his monthly allowance some time after the end of each month of training completed. Before the VA can pay him, the law requires a certification from both the veteran and his school or training establishment, that he was enrolled in and pursuing his course during that period.

This new method of payment differs from procedures followed under previous veterans' training laws. Under earlier laws, VA paid tuition and other costs directly to schools, and also paid eligible veterans a monthly subsistence allowance.

Although the new law took effect with approval of the bill, no training allowances can be paid for any period prior to August 20.

The loan provisions of the new GI Bill for post-Korean veterans are similar to the GI loan program now in effect for World War II veterans. Some changes have been made, however, to protect the interests of home-buying veterans.

The amount of VA guarantee on a loan is the same for both groups of veterans. Home loans may be guaranteed up to 60 per cent of the loan, but the guaranteed portion may not exceed $7,500. Other real estate loans may be guaranteed up to 50 per cent, with a $4,000 top. And non-real-estate loans, such as GI business loans, may be guaranteed for up to 50 per cent with a $2,000 ceiling as to the guarantee. All such loans also may be insured.

VA's direct loan program, now in effect for World War II veterans, has been extended to veterans who served since Korea. Under the program, VA may make loans directly to veterans, but only in certain areas where four per cent GI loan money is not available.

GI loan safeguards, written into the new law, apply both to World War II veterans and those with post-Korean service. Among them are the following.

A veteran's property must meet or exceed minimum requirements for planning, construction and general acceptability. This provision doesn't apply to construction started within 60 days of date of approval, nor houses which have been completed at least a year before they were purchased with a GI loan.

VA may refuse to appraise any dwelling or housing project owned or built by anyone who has attempted to take unfair advantage of veterans in the past. Examples would be substantial deficiencies in the house, failure to discharge contract liabilities, or unfair practices in regard to contracts or marketing of the houses.

Also, VA may refuse to guarantee loans made by lenders who have failed to service loans adequately, who have failed to keep adequate loan accounting records, who have shown poor credit judgement, or who have engaged in other practices detrimental to the veteran or to the Government.

In the case of World War II veterans who have returned to active duty, their unused loan entitlement under World War II GI Bill will be replaced by the same amount of entilement under the new law. The result is that you won't be bound to the GI loan deadline of July 25, 1957, set up in the earlier law; instead, under the new law, they'll have 10 years from the end of the present emergency to obtain GI loans.

The new GI Bill's unemployment compensation program, administered through the States by the U. S. Department of Labor, provides unemployed post-Korean veterans with payments of $26 a week, up to a total of 26 weeks. The top amount that any veteran can get, therefore, is $676.

The unemployment program takes effect 90 days from approval of the bill. It has been tied in with the new law's mustering-out program in the following way:

A veteran entitled to $100 mustering-out pay can't get unemployment compensation until 30 days after discharge or 90 days from the effective date of the program, whichever is later. A veteran who gets $200 mustering-out pay has to wait until 60 days after discharge or 90 days from the effective date of the program, while one who receives $300 must wait either 90 days after discharge or 90 days after effective date of this program, whichever comes later.

Eligibility requirements for the foregoing three benefits—education and training, GI loans and unemployment compensation—include (1) a discharge under conditions other than dishonorable; (2) active service any time after June 27, 1950, and (3) at least 90 days' total service, unless discharged sooner for a service-connected disability.

The mustering-out payments, provided for in the new GI Bill, will be made at time of discharge to anyone who served in the rank of captain or less in the Army or Air Force, or as lieutenant senior grade or less in the Navy. The veteran also must have an honorable discharge.

Payments are $300 for those with at least 60 days' service who were on active duty outside the continental limits of the United States or Alaska; $200 for those with 60 days or more service who were not outside the USA or Alaska, and $100 for those who spent less than 60 days on active duty.

Veterans eligible for $300 will get $100 upon discharge; $100 a month later, and $100 a month after that. Those who are to receive $200 will get $100 at discharge and the remainder a month later. And veterans eligible for only $100 will be paid that amount all at once.

Post-Korea veterans discharged before the new GI Bill became law also may receive mustering-out pay. To obtain the money, they must apply to their branch of service within two years from date of approval of the bill.

The mustering-out program, similar to that in effect after World War II, will be administered by the Armed Forces and the Treasury Department, and not by the VA.

The new GI Bill extends job-finding assistance to veterans with service after the start of Korean hostilities, on the same basis as veterans of World War II. The help includes job counciling and employment placement services of the Veterans Employment Service, a part of the U. S. Employment Service.

Veterans were reminded that the last three benefits of the new GI Bill—unemployment compensation, mustering-out pay and job-hunting aid—are not administered by the Veterans Administration. So veterans should not write VA about them, if they want further information or have questions to be answered; instead, they should correspond directly with the ageny concerned.

The new GI Bill contains important deadlines that post-Korea veterans should keep in mind, VA said.

Education and training, for post-Korea veterans, must be started by August 20, 1954, or two years after release from active duty, whichever comes later. No trainee may be given beyond either seven years after discharge or seven years after the end of the current emergency, whichever is later.

In contrast, for most World War II veterans, the GI Bill cut-off date for starting has already passed, and may not extend beyond July 25, 1956.

The deadlines for loans for veterans with service after Korea is 10 years after the present emergency comes to an end. The deadline for World War II veterans who have not gone back on active duty is July 25, 1957.

Finally, the deadline for unemployment compensation under the new law will be five years after the end of the emergency period

The date on which the present emergency comes to an end is one that has to be determined either by Presidential proclamation or by concurrent resolution of Congress.

Plan Now For A Much Safer Farm

The reason more and more people are accidentally killed or injured is not because the instinct of self preservation is decreasing; it's because the number of hazards is increasing.

For example, out on the farm, a new crop of dangers is springing up with the introduction of electricity, new labor-saving machinery, new insect poisons, and new devices for doing many things.

It isn't that these new 'gadgets' are unsafe—the danger lies in their misuse and the lack of knowledge of what precautions to take in using them.

To avoid danger, then, one must know of its existence. And during National Farm Safety Week, July 20-26, every farm family is urged to put into effect this simple, three-point safety program:

Learn to recognize and hunt out accidents and fire hazards on the farm. Correct or remove all hazards. Learn to live, play, and work safely around hazards that cannot be removed.

INCREASED MILK PRODUCTION

According to research by the Bureau of Dairy Industry regular milking and feeding increased milk production 3.9 per cent and fat production 5.2 per cent.

HOMECOMING AT JEMISON METHODIST CHURCH AND A QUARTERLY MEETING

Sunday, July 20th, will be homecoming day at the Jemison Methodist Church. Dr. Preer will preach at the morning service. All members, former members, and friends are invited to attend. Basket lunch will be served at the church.

Farm telephone expansion has been one of Southern Bell's biggest and most important jobs for years—and today is more important than ever. It is a job that takes a lot of money, materials, experience, know-how—and time.

Doing Good 4-H Club Work

Frances Arlene Brown of the Verbena Junior 4-H club is doing some very good project work. She is the 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie F. Brown, Route 1, Mt. Creek.

Arlene's projects for this year are cooking, sewing, canning, and home improvement. For three years, she has been a 4-H member and is keeping some very good reports of the work she is doing.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown are both very interested in Arlene's projects and are eager to help her. When Arlene suggested they needed a new electric stove so she could make some oatmeal cookies which she had learned to make at a neighborhood 4-H meeting this summer it was not long before Mr. Brown made preparations to get the new stove. Now the whole family is enjoying the meals Mrs. Brown and Arlene are preparing on it. Other home improvements they have made are painting the kitchen and cleaning the yards around the house.

Arlene has been cooking for several years but at first her food was not always successful. Now she has learned to bake bread, cakes, and cookies without burning them as well as cook vegetables.

This winter the Brown family will be able to enjoy eating some of the food Arlene has preserved this summer. She likes to can and has some very pretty jars of tomatoes, peaches, berries and jelly.

As a sewing project, Arlene has made several garments for herself. The pretty scarves she has made show that she likes to embroider and does a nice job of it too. She has made some pot holders to use while she is cooking.

Cooling Milk No Problem To Isabella Dairyman

Mrs. C. C. Moore of Isabella finds that cooling milk is not problem. An over-flowing well running day and night cools the milk and keeps it in perfect condition until it is picked up by the milk truck. The over-flowing well on the Moore farm is the only one of its kind in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C Moore of the Isabella Community find that a dairy program comes nearer filling their need for a source of cash income than any other type of livestock program. The Moores have been selling milk for only about two months, but they are well pleased with this program.

At the present Mr. and Mrs. Moore are milking seven cows. Based on the current test and volume of milk sales amount to one hundred and fifty seven dollars per month after hauling charges have been deducted. By the end of August Mr. and Mrs. Moore plan to increase their volume of milk to three cans per day. An increase of one can per day will increase the milk check to two hundred and ten dollars per month. By the time the fall increase in price and premium bonus is added, the check will increase considerably. After milking cows for several weeks Mr and Mrs. Moore decided that a milking machine would save enough time to justify the investment. By putting in a milking machine, milking time was cut over half. According to Mrs. Moore, they are able to milk the cows and get the milk in the cooling barrel in one hour.

Mr. Moore has not had to buy any feed and hopes to be able to get through the winter by buying only cottonseed meal. Mr. Moore plans to increase and improve both the summer and winter pastures so that the major portion of the milk can be produced with grass and clover.

The Moores have a sound, well-planned program underway. They feel that good milk cows and home grown feed are the foundations of a successful dairy program.

Two More Highway Patrolmen Added

Chilton County has two additional highway patrolmen to patrol her highways this week. Patrolman J. H. Craddock and G. C. Webb have been added to the Chilton County force giving the county four full-time highway patrolmen and two patrol cars.

Sheriff Luther Kendrick was instrumental in part in securing two additional men for the county and he has advocated and worked for these additional men for the past several years.

Trace Minerals No Cure For Brucellosis

Widespread claims that the feeding of trace minerals will prevent or cure brucellosis in animals or undulant fever in man have been proven false by controlled experiments

Scientists at the University of Wisconsin found that natural feeds given the cattle in the experiments contained all required minerals. Inasmuch as the animals could not use additional amounts, feeding trace minerals wasted materials and time; trace minerals did not influence the susceptibility of cattle to brucellosis or lessen its effects when the disease was established, and feeding trace minerals did not shorten the course of the disease.

Feeding of trace minerals to cattle is not given a blanket of condemnation by the committees of scientists, however. There are some instances where such mineral feeding is desirable from a nutritional standpoint, but not for its effects on brucellosis.

If The Home Freezer Should Stop Running

What to do when the home freezer stops running is a very important matter.

If it stops and the current will be off for some time there are several precautions that will keep food from spoiling.

First, keep the freezer closed. If the box is filled, food will remain frozen for three or four days, depending upon the size of the freezer. If the box is not repaired in that length of time, move food to a locker plant. Of course, dry ice added to the freezer will prevent food from thawing.

Wheeled Table Can Make Housekeeping Much Easier

It's not so much the work as the walking that wears many women out during a cleaning job.

Running back and forth for utensils and supplies adds weary mileage to any job, and it often interrupts the work so much that nervous tension is built up.

But the cure for back-breaking is simple. Plan the job in advance so that it fits into the day's schedule. Then assemble all utensils and supplies for it on a whelled table or cart that can be rolled from place to place as is needed. If a sturdy cart with two shelves is used. it can carry not only small items, such as soap, brushes, cloths, and sponges, but two pails of water for washing and rinsing and the vacuum cleaner as well. By having supplies at a convenient level, lifting and stooping as well as back-tracking are avoided.

Big Air Show At Gragg Field

Sunday will be a big day at Gragg Field when the monument to the late Dr. V. J. Gragg is dedicated. A 35 piece band from Maxwell Field will furnish the music and the local Post of the American Legion will present the Colors. Local Boy Scouts will also have a part in the ceremoines.

More than forty planes will take part in a big airshow during the afternoon. Alabama's big man of aviation, Asa Rountree will be a guest, and Probate Judge W. L. Parrish will act as Master of ceremonies.

Miss Rebecca, a granddaughter of Dr. Gragg will unveil the monument and Dr. Clifford Mullins, a grandson, of Rineville, La., will make the acceptance speech in behalf of the family

Artificial Breeding Helping Many Farmers

Many Alabama farmers are now getting profits from the artificial breeding of dairy catle.

The reason for this is the increased production of offsprings sired by bulls from the Auburn stud. And the number of cows being sired daily by these bulls is growing rapidly.

Since January 1 of this year, over 3,000 cows have been bred in 10 Alabama counties, and the heavy breeding season is stil ahead.

Through artificial breeding it is possible to spread the influence of one bull to several hundred dairy cows in one year. This is positive proof that artificial breeding of dairy cows is worthwhile, and the good part about it is that it's here to stay.

Hog Care During Hot, Dry Months

Temperatures of hogs often rise to 105 degrees Fahrenheit or higher if shade isn't provided for them during hot summer days.

Of course, these high temperatures knock out appetites and, in turn, upset money-making possibilities.

Shade and plenty of clean, fresh drinking water are the cheapest things hog producers can give their pigs. Brush arbors in corn fields provide good shade. And it should be remembered that thirsty shotes at a dry watering trough are costing their owners real money.

Now Is A Good Time To Kill Pond Weeds

Summer is an excellent time to get rid of pond weeds, such as cattails and water lilies.

They can be controlled by spraying them with a strong ester type of 2,4-D on the exposed leaf surface. Mix one cup of 2,4-D in five gallons of kerosene or diesel fuel. Apply on hot, sunshiny days when no breeze is blowing. Repeat spray application when new growth appears.

DRY SOIL CROP

Autauga County Agent C. L. Breedlove says more and more farmers are using sericea as a summer grazing crop because it produces well on poor, dry soil.

Fish steaks, dredged lightly with flour, dipped in milk, then in cornmeal or cracker crumbs and fried in deep hot fat are much improved in flavor, and the flour helps the meal adhere better.

"LEST WE FORGET"

(Editor's Note: The following was written on June 18th, 1937 by a resident of Clanton. The truth of the article is so in line with our conditions today that we are printing it here for the first time with the permission of the writer).

There are those of our people who possibly do not remember the hard times during the years of 1921 and 1922, when our farmers could not sell their cotton for more than five cents per pound, and when the farmers would shell his corn and bring it to Clanton, he would be glad to get as much as twenty-five cents per bushel for it, the farmer could not pay the merchant, he could not pay the bankers, he could not pay the doctor. The merchant could not pay the wholesale dealer, nor could the doctor pay his drug bills. The banker was afraid to loan the money; not that the man to whom he would make the loan was dishonest and would not pay, but on the other hand the banker was afraid the man to whom he WOULD loan the money COULD not pay.

Many people who had money in the banks withdrew their money from the banks. Bank holidays were being declared in many States of the Union, many banks failed, and people lost their money. After March 4, 1933, by an order of President Roosevela all banks were closed for a few days and an examination made by the Government of the financial condition of the banks, most all of the banks were permitted to re-open and go ahead with normal business. There was some of the banks that had to be helped by the Government, that is to say, the Government made loans to the bank and placed the bank in a safe and sound condition. After this was done the Congress of the United States passed a law wherein the Government of the United States guaranteed to each depositor his deposit up to $5,000,00. You can see very clearly and very easily just what this meant. Prior to March 4, 1923, when a bank closed its doors the depositors lost all or a major part of their deposit, today that is not true, should a bank fail today most every man would be able to get all the money he had on deposit in that bank, because there are very few of our citizens who at any time have more than $5,000.00 on deposit at any one time.

Now, there are those who will argue to you that Pres, Roosevelt should have cooperated with Pres. Hoover after the November election in 1922, in other words, that Pres. Roosevelt should have taken charge after the November elction in 1932, and should have told Mr. Hoover how to run his office. This Pres. Roosevelt refused to do. It appears to me that Pres. Roosevelt did right, because it is not fair and it is not right for one man to try to run and control a public office when another man has been elected to perform those duties. There are those who will tell you that the depression was just about over in the spring of 1933, and that Mr. Roosevelt has done nothing to help our people.

You have heard it argued here in this County that the President of the United States has nothing to do with the price of cotton, or the price of corn, or the price of livestock, that the price is always fixed and controlled by the law of supply and demand. This Theory will never be believed by you again.

Old cars were being driven by a great majority of our people in the spring of 1933, what is the condition now? Most every one has a new car, the merchant, the banker, the farmer, the preacher, the lawyer, and even the very poorest of our citizens have an automobile. Everybody seems to be happy, money is plentiful, every one who wants work can get it, and you can talk to most any man, who has an open mind and he will tell you that conditions now are more satisfactory to him than were the conditions in 1931 and 1932.

It would be fine, it would be joyful, it would mean much to our County, our State and our Nation if every man owned his home. "For you have the poor always with you," and there should be some way devised by some great mind, whereby every one should own his home, the home is the foundation of our American civilization. You hear much talk about farm problems, when you take the mortgage off of the homes of our American farmers you have gone a long way toward solving the farm problems and you have increased the peace and happiness of the fireside. A man can do very little with a load of debts hanging around his neck. Has anything been done in recent years, to aid and assist the farmer in owning his home, and has anything ever been done, except in recent years, by the Government to aid and assist the farmer in owning his home.

It is true that many of us are quick to forget, but had you rather have it like it is today or would you rather have it like it was in 1931 and 1932? We are now living in an airplane, automobile and radio era, and it is difficult for many of us to own these luxuries and at the same time have sufficient money left with which to maintain our homes and to pay for the actual necessities of life. We should all have confidence in a wise and just ruler, under a wise and just ruler the people are happy, but when the unwise or unjust or wicked rule the people mourn and suffer. Look around about you and take stock and find out for yourself whether you are in better conditions now than you were in 1931 and 1932.

FOOD POISONING

A sanitary kitchen and proper hygienic measures in handling and preparing food will prevent the occurrence of two of the most common types of food poisoning. So says Dr. Edward A. Lane, White Plains, N. Y., in a recent issue of TODAY'S HEALTH.

Few people go through life without sometimes becoming ill from something they have eaten. The two most common forms of such disorders follow the eating of food that contain either salmonella bacteria or a poison produced by straphylococcus germs.

Straphylococcus germs thrive at room temperature in such foods as meats, custard or cream pastry. Some kinds of straphylocci have the ability to form a toxin, and this substanes is extremely irritating to the gastorointestinal tract. Food poisoning from straphylococcus germs has a sudden onset, occurring in two to four hours after eating contaminated foods. Nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, cramps and prostration result. The acute stage lasts only about three to six hours and the illness is seldom serious.

The salmonella bacteria are found in humans, cattle, fowl, rodents, cats, and dogs. The symptoms from this type of food poisoning do not develop until 12 to 24 hours after consumption of contaminated food, and the illness is more frequently accompanied by fever and usually lasts from one to three days.

According to Dr. Lane, ways to guard against these types of food poisoning are: (1) scrupulous cleanliness of the kitchen; (2) prohibiting handling and preparation of food by anyone who has any infection on the exposed surfaces of the skin, any symptoms of inflammation of the mucous membranes of the nose or throat, or has any other illness; (3) keeping all foods, except dry or packaged groceries, in a refrigerator until they are prepared for cooking or serving; (4) cooking thoroughly those foods that are most apt to be natural sources of salmonella bacteria infection, such as meats, fowl, eggs and egg products.

"Most outbreaks of this nature are probably due to faults of omission or commission occurring after the food is purchased, and while it is being kept in the kitchen or storeroom, or during preparation for serving. If the kitchen is kept sanitary and food is handled and prepared with due regard for proper hygienic measures, these very unpleasant types of illness should seldom occur."

Around OUR HOUSE
by Kathryn Tucker Windham

A child's idea of time, of the meaning of years, is often startling. Just last week, for instance, the five-year-old let it be known that she considered my childhood to have been spent back in the prehistoric ages.

We were having a song session, singing all the songs we could think of not well but enthusiastically. We had finished all the old favorites when the five-year-old suggested a song of which I had never heard. When I confessed my ignorance, she replied somewhat contemptuously,

"Why, mother, that's an old song. It must be at least twenty years old. People were singing it when dinosaurs lived in this world."

Speaking of singing, the mother down the street who has a big family says there's nothing like singing to keep babies and toddlers happy.

Instead of going grimly about the business of performing unpleasant or unpopular tasks, she makes a game of them by singing (and she admits that she can barely carry a tune) any bit of nonsense about the activities. At face-washing time, for instance, she may chant, "This is the way we chase the dirt, chase the dirt, chase the dirt, etc."

At mealtime, she says even carrots and spinach disappear without much fuss if she sings, "Bobby's mouht is open wide—Now we pop his spoon inside."

Most of the mothers in the neighborhood have done all they can to eliminate ironing these hot days by letting their children wear seersucker and nylon that need no pressing and by letting many other garments go unpressed.

However, there are always some garments that simply must be pressed. Our neighbor down the street simplifies this chore by sprinkling her clothes while they are still on the line. She turns the garden hose to a fine spray and dampens the clothes until they are just right for ironing.

Peeling a hard boiled egg has always presented a problem around our house. Some homemakers say the eggs will peel perfectly if the peeling is done while they are still hot. Others swear by the let-them-cool-first method. Then there's the school of thought that contends egg shells should be cracked all over while other egg peelers insist that only one end should be cracked.

We've tried all the suggested methods, and, frankly, we get the same unsatisfactory results with each one. Now our clever next door neighbor says a pinch of salt added to the water in which the eggs are boiled will make them peel to perfection no matter what method is used.

If this method of egg peeling works, we're going to make a congealed egg salad by this recipe:

One tablespoon gelatin, 1-4 cup cold water, 1 1-2 cups hot water, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup diced celery, 3 tablespoons chopped pickle or relish, 2 tablespoons diced green pepper, 1 tablespoon grated onion and 6 hard-cooked eggs sliced.

Dissolve gelatin in cold water. Add hot water, lemon juice and salt. Add other ingredients when gelatin begins to harden.

Letter To The Editor

Editor fo Chilton County News:
Dear Sir:

You and the Union-Banner have paid the City Council and myself a very high compliment by recommending that the people of Clanton continue us in office another term. This full endorsement of our accomplishment for the city for the past four years is gratifying, and for the Council and myself I say "Thank You." I know we have managed well and it is pleasing to us that you and others realize the fact.

I did not intend to ask for the Mayor's office again. I am willing to retire, but I do not know of a better way to spend my time than in an effort to improve Clanton, and if the citizens want me again for Mayor I may give them an opportunity to express their choice.

There is much to be done. Immediate attention should be given to the enlarging of our water filtering plant. We need two additional filtering units and they should by all means be installed this winter preparatory for the increased demand for water next summer. We have ample supply of water now, but very little surplus water filtered on hand at the close of each day. We are consuming it about as fast as we can prepare it for use. A shortage of filtered water can occur any day now. We are asking the people to please not waste the water.

Business affairs of Clanton are in good condition, but they are also in fine condition to be easily wrecked by mismanagement and wrong use of the money.

The first payment on our gas system will be due next year, and the amount to be paid is approximately $27,000.00. And for the years 1954, 1955 and 1956 about the same amount will be due each year Failure to pay these bonds when due would be a great loss and damage to Clanton, and I do not believe the present officials would permit that to happen.

It would be a pleasure for me to pay these obligations when due, especially for the reason I did exert every effort possible and used all influence I had to bring natural gas into Clanton, and I do not regret having done so.

You will hear from me again later.

Respectfully,
C .FENN JONES, Mayor.

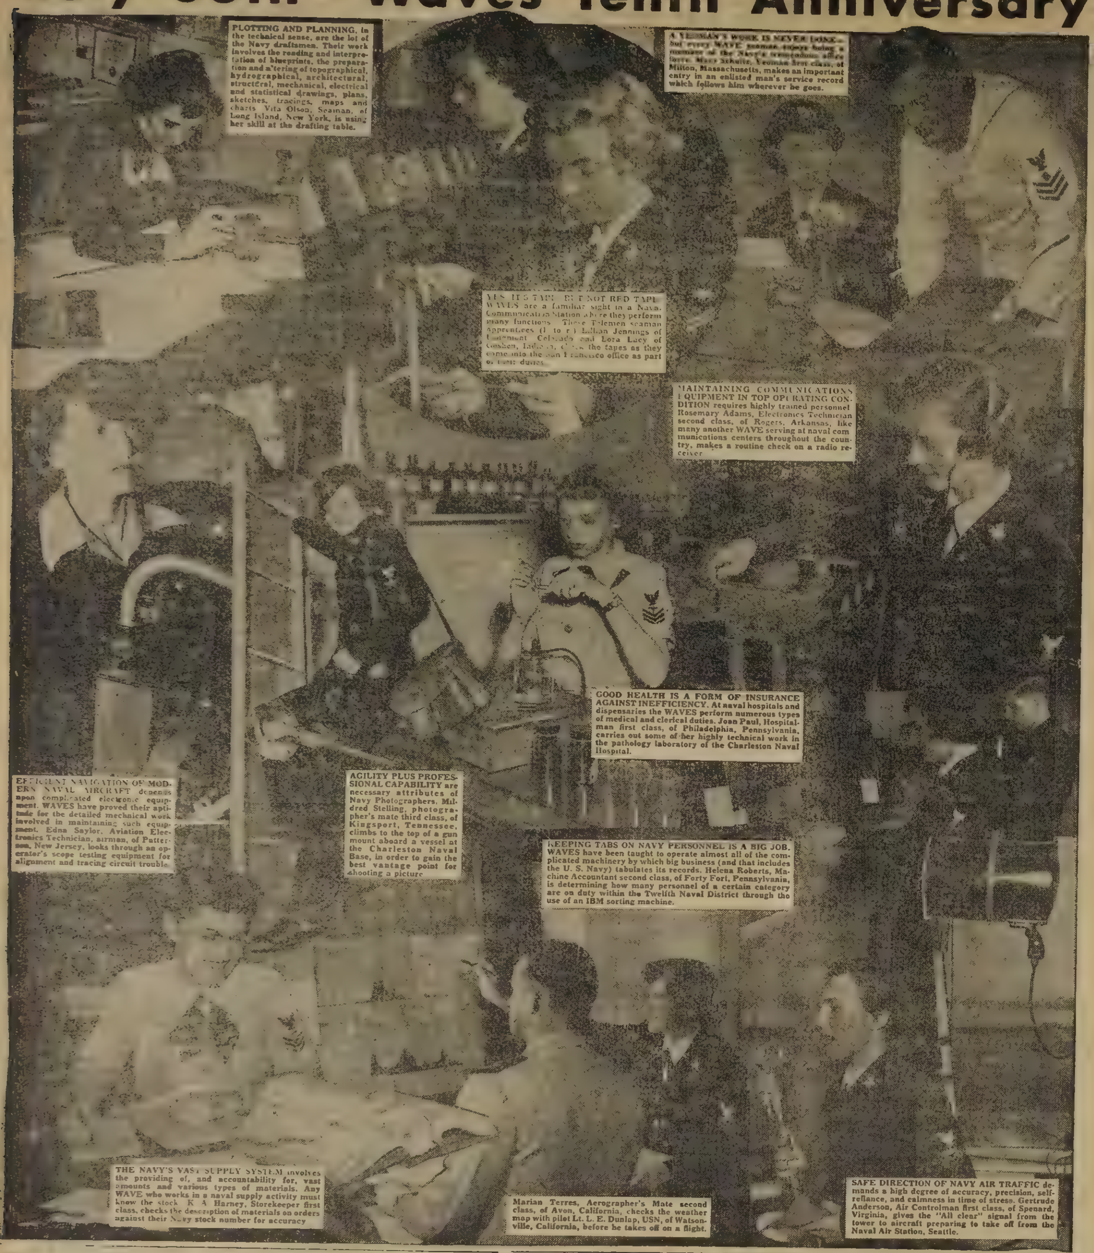
July 30th – Waves Tenth Anniversary



PLOTTING AND PLANNING, in the technical sense, are the lot of the Navy draftsmen. Their work involves the reading and interpretation of blueprints, the preparation and altering of topographical, hydrographical, architectural, structural, mechanical, electrical and statistical drawings, plans, sketches, tracings, maps and charts. Vita Olson, Seaman, of Long Island, New York, is using her skill at the drafting table.

A YEOMAN'S WORK IS NEVER DONE— but every WAVE seaman enjoys being a member of the Navy's tremendous office force. Mary Schultz, Yeoman first class, of Milton, Massachusetts, makes an important entry in an enlisted man's service record which follows him wherever he goes.

YES, IT'S TAPE—BUT NOT RED TAPE. WAVES are a familiar sight in a Naval Communication Station where they perform many functions. These Telemen seaman apprentices (l. to r.) Lillian Jennings of Longmont, Colorado and Lora Lacy of Goshen, Indiana, check the tapes as they come into the San Francisco office as part of their duties.

MAINTAINING COMMUNICATIONS EQUIPMENT IN TOP OPERATING CONDITION requires highly trained personnel. Rosemary Adams, Electronics Technician second class, of Rogers, Arkansas, like many another WAVE serving at naval communications centers throughout the country, makes a routine check on a radio receiver.

GOOD HEALTH IS A FORM OF INSURANCE AGAINST INEFFICIENCY. At naval hospitals and dispensaries the WAVES perform numerous types of medical and clerical duties. Joan Paul, Hospitalman first class, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, carries out some of her highly technical work in the pathology laboratory of the Charleston Naval Hospital.

EFFICIENT NAVIGATION OF MODERN NAVAL AIRCRAFT depends upon complicated electronic equipment. WAVES have proved their aptitude for the detailed mechanical work involved in maintaining such equipment. Edna Saylor, Aviation Electronics Technician, airman, of Patterson, New Jersey, looks through an operator's scope testing equipment for alignment and tracing circuit trouble.

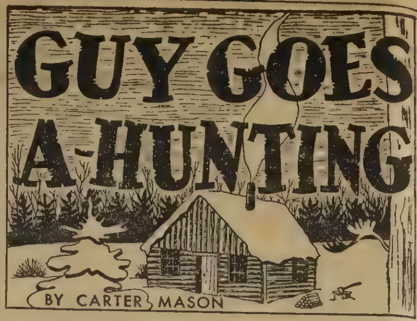
AGILITY PLUS PROFESSIONAL CAPABILITY are necessary attributes of Navy Photographers. Mildred Stelling, photographer's mate third class, of Kingsport, Tennessee, climbs to the top of a gun mount aboard a vessel at the Charleston Naval Base, in order to gain the best vantage point for shooting a picture.

KEEPING TABS ON NAVY PERSONNEL IS A BIG JOB. WAVES have been taught to operate almost all of the complicated machinery by which big business (and that includes the U. S. Navy) tabulates its records. Helena Roberts, Machine Accountant second class, of Forty Fort, Pennsylvania, is determining how many personnel of a certain category are on duty within the Twelfth Naval District through the use of an IBM sorting machine.

THE NAVY'S VAST SUPPLY SYSTEM involves the providing of, and accountability for, vast amounts and various types of materials. Any WAVE who works in a naval supply activity must know the stock. K. A. Harney, Storekeeper first class, checks the description of materials on orders against their Navy stock number for accuracy.

Marian Terres, Aerographer's Mate second class, of Avon, California, checks the weather map with pilot Lt. L. E. Dunlap, USN, of Watsonville, California, before he takes off on a flight.

SAFE DIRECTION OF NAVY AIR TRAFFIC demands a high degree of accuracy, precision, self-reliance, and calmness in time of stress. Gertrude Anderson, Air Controlman first class, of Spenard, Virginia, gives the "All clear" signal from the tower to aircraft preparing to take off from the Naval Air Station, Seattle.



GUY GOES A-HUNTING

BY CARTER MASON

GUY EVANS had never been hunting. He had always thought he'd like to go hunting because his closest friends, Mel Harper and Ed Jordan, seemed to get a great deal of pleasure from their sojourns into the north woods.

"Suppose you take me with you?" he said to his friends a week before they were due to depart on their annual excursion. "I'd like to get away for awhile and have some fun."

Mel and Ed exchanged glances. "Ever been in the woods?" Mel asked.

"No. That's why I'd like to go."

Mel and Ed talked it over and agreed to let Guy accompany them. Guy was delighted. It would be swell, he thought, spending a couple of weeks with two congenial companions far away from it all. He pictured a leisurely ride up to Waterville on the train, and many pleasurable moments later in a snug log cabin deep in the forests.

Guy outfitted himself at a local sports store. The night before departure Mel called up and told him to meet them at the airport at dawn. Guy was rather surprised. He had looked forward to the leisurely train ride.

A taxi deposited him and his baggage at the airfield in the biting cold of a mid-winter's dawn. Mel and Ed looked at his baggage and shook their heads.

"You'll have to leave it all behind except for a 25-pound pack and the clothes you wear," they told him.

They landed in Waterville two hours later. It was still cold and barely light. Guy was in favor of a hot cup of coffee, but Mel said they wouldn't have time if they wanted to reach camp by nightfall.

Saul Payson, 6 feet 3 and with a voice like a moose horn, yelled at them from a ramshackle flivver. Saul was the guide. At sight of Guy he looked questioningly at Mel and Ed, but nobody said anything. They piled into the flivver and drove through the town and out on to a rutted country road. The wind whipped in their faces.

An hour later Saul stopped the flivver in a cleared place beside the road, covered the engine hood with an old rug and began unloading.

"This is where we begin walking," Mel explained.

The trail that they followed was a tote road that wound through the woods. It was deeply rutted, besides being covered with a three-inch fall of snow. Before they had traveled a mile Guy's new boots began to pinch.

They had walked, it seemed a thousand miles, before Saul stopped to rest. Or that's what Guy thought was happening. In reality, Saul had stopped only to shoot a rabbit that was sitting on its haunches and watching them in the most harmless manner imaginable.

Then they went on. At 1 o'clock they came to a frozen-over stream, on the banks of which was a one-room log cabin. There was nothing very snug about it. There was no fire in the rusty box stove and only two bunks besides a couple of roughly made chairs and a table.

It was colder inside the cabin than it was outside. When Saul handed Guy a bucket and an axe and told him to go down to the brook and chop a hole in the ice for water, he was grateful.

A fire was burning when he got back and bacon was frying. It was the most delicious odor Guy had ever smelled. He eased down on one of the bunks and thought that he'd never be able to get up again.

Saul made coffee and cut up some bread and they ate ravenously. Then Mel and Ed suggested going hunting. Guy would have preferred to remain where he was and die comfortably.

They tramped around and saw nothing. They returned to a cold cabin and built up the fire. By the time the cabin got warm, Guy was half asleep in his bunk.

He awoke about midnight to find Saul snoring beside him, and his body chilled to the bone. He dozed occasionally till dawn. Then Saul routed him up and sent him after water. It was barely light when they went out hunting again. They divided, Saul and Guy going together. In a clearing Saul told Guy to wait and he'd scare up a deer.

Guy waited. Hours passed. He thought he must be freezing. It began to snow. He guessed that Saul had become lost or forgotten him. He began to walk around to keep his feet from freezing.

After a while he came to a road he thought must be the road that led to the camp. He followed it. He walked for hours. The snow stopped. It grew colder. It began to get dark. Guy kept on walking. He figured the road would lead somewhere and he only hoped he'd get there before it grew so dark he couldn't see.

He was right. The road led to where the flivver was parked. Guy was an expert mechanic. It took him five minutes to get the motor started without the ignition keys.

He drove back to Waterville and went immediately to a hotel. The hotel lobby was warm. The room that he hired was warmer. He relaxed, sighing deeply. Then he drew a hot bath, rang for the bellboy and got into the bath.

"Get someone to go out to the Harper camp," he instructed the bellboy, "and tell whoever's there that Mr. Evans is safe. Warm and safe, and he's going to stay that way."

In preparing scalloped dishes, corn flakes used in place of bread or cracker crumbs have a better flavor, are always ready to use, and make a more attractive dish. Just crush and use as bread crumbs.

When cooking macaroni, rice, noodles, or other starchy foods, add one tablespoon of butter to the water and it will not boil over. And the butter will also make the dish richer.

Latehran Church News

Morning worship 11:00 o'clock, Sunday School 10:00, Sermon topic, Seeking and Not Finding.

One erroneous concept held by quite a few Protestants concerns the Sabbath Day. Some say that the Sabbath Day was changed to Sunday, others say that one must observe the actual Jewish Sabbath (Saturday).

Actually Saturday is the Sabbath day and not Sunday. There is no passage of scripture to indicate that it was ever changed to Sunday thus to refer to Sunday as a "Christian Sabbath" is reading into the Scripture something that is not there. Let us glance briefly at the Scriptural teaching on this point and see what God has to say.

First of all, Saturday, the real Sabbath, commemorates the completion of creation. (Gen.2:2); for Israel only (Ex. 31:13); not to be observed by the Christian church (Gal. 4:9, 19; Col. 2:14-16); superseded by Christ (Luke 6:5).

Sunday, the Lord's Day, is a memorial of Christ's resurrection (Mark 16:1, 2.) and the authorized day for Christian worship (Acts 20:7; I Cor. 16:2).

We cordially invite your comments. Write to: The Lutheran Church, Thorsby, Alabama.

Council meeting will be held one week from this coming Wednesday, Aug. 6, at 7:30 p.m. The place will be announced in next Sunday's bulletin.

Installation of church councilmen is to be done at a public service of the congregation so we will plan to do that next Sunday. Please all councilmembers plan to be present next Sunday for this installation so this can be taken care of.

Read our Church news in the County papers due to the courtesy of both the Chilton County News and the Union-Banner, free space is allotted to us, along with other churches, for church news and brief articles. The price stabilization agency has a letter from a Virginia merchant which makes this statemtnt: "Until OPS made me keep records, I did not know which lines I was carrying made money for me and which lost money. Now that I'm having to keep records, though, I know where I stand. I used to just pay my bills and what-ever was left over was profit."

Why do they last so long?

—because ½- to 2-ton trucks built by GMC have all these heavy-duty features—features most other manufacturers reserve "for big trucks only!"

Compare GMC point by point with any other truck!

Full-pressure lubrication protects all main bearings—force-feeds even to the piston pins!

Airplane-type main & rod bearings stand up under heavy pressures and high speeds—last longer!

Deep, rigid frame construction—just like the big GMC's—backbones the rugged, truck-built chassis!

"Shockproof," four-point cab suspension—same as heavy-duty GMC's—prolongs the truck's life and protects the driver!

Recirculating ball-bearing steering mechanism assures "passenger car" ease in handling!

Long, "pillow-action" springs smooth the going, cushion the load!

"Luxury-type" seat cushions have individually wrapped coil springs like the big GMC road-liners—contribute to driver comfort and efficiency!

Get a real truck! All-truck construction throughout!

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Olive oil or salad oil will not turn rancid if you will add a pinch of sugar to the oil as soon as it is opened.

A dozen cloves dropped in the vessel in which doughnuts are frying adds a delightful spicy flavor.

In making dark cakes, especially jam cakes, coffee may be substituted for milk, giving a delightfully different flavor.

When using fresh fruits in salads, marinate in the dressing as soon as they are cut, or squeeze lemon juice over them to prevent discoloration.

Use muffin tins for baking apples, stuffed peppers, tomatoes, etc. They will keep their shape better.

When preparing bacon, place in a flat, shallow pan and cook in the oven. It will crisp more evenly than in a frying pan. Drain at once.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all of our friends and neighbors for their kindness and help during the illness and death of our husband and father, Mr. J. E. Littlejohn.—Mrs. J. E. Littlejohn and family.

"I REMEMBER"
BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Bertha Andrew, Belfry, Mont.: I remember when mother had to wash the wool and cotton and then went to the woods and found the different plants to color it red or brown. Then she corded it, spun the thread and wove the cloth to make our wool blankets, cotton towels and underwear. I also remember the old song, "Just Because She Made Them Goo-Goo Eyes."

From Mrs. Vern Boulton, Boise, Idaho: I remember when I was a little girl, Dad always sent me to the icehouse Sunday morning to get the ice for the wonderful homemade ice cream mother made. We would all take our turns at the freezer.

From Mrs. Allen Thompson, Eubank, Ky.: I remember when women rode mules and horses to church. They rode side-saddle, with one baby in their laps and one on behind. The men would either walk in front or ride another horse or mule. The women wore long calico dresses that dragged the ground.

From J. T. Fillingim, Graceville, Fla.: I remember when the preacher announced night meeting he said it would start at early candlelight. If he had said seven o'clock, not many people would have had clocks or watches to go by.

From Alice Nicholson, Cascade, Mont.: I remember when you went to the store to get a gallon of kerosene, and the grocer put a potato on the spout so it wouldn't spill.

ONE OF ALABAMA'S LEADING WEEKLIES

VOLUME XXX CLANTON, ALABAMA THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1952 NUMBER 32

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Pulled a big boner last week. Had Henry Grady Heflin story on his going to Artillery School at Fort Sills and it was misplaced and left out. You'll find it in this issue.

Got a post card from Sunnyside, Fla., sent by the A. B. Stanleys and J. Guy Alreds while they were on their vacation. Said they were escaping the Chilton County heat but we have been doing alright up here the past few days. Of course, we didn't have the beautiful scenery that you will find along the beaches on the Gulf Coast but the temperature has been a little more kind to us.

Seems Howard Bookholdt, our popular Superintendent of Education, is having quite a time in a different part of the country. He's in New York, you know, going to school. He writes that "the old country boy" is having the time of his life in the big city. Says it gets ind of lonesome up there with so few people around, (just seven and half million, you know). Howard says one thing about that town, 'most of the people are lost most of the time." Sounds confusing.

Dewitt Easterling is visiting here his week. He runs a cafe and Motel at Freeport, Fla. He likes his work fine and says that business is extra good. He gets to see lot of Chilton County folks going to, and coming from, Panama City, Fla., all the time. You'll see picture of his Motel and Cafe in our next issue.

Another thing you'll see in our next issue is a lot of green ink. Red Glasscock and the County Agent's office, through the cooperation of the newspapers will run a "Keep Chilton County Green" edition for the next three weeks. The idea s to encourage the planting of winter crops here.

Sure was sorry to hear about ack Hayes' accident. Learned today that he was doing better. You now he was struck by an automobile driven by Judge W. L. Parrish Monday afternoon. The accident appened at the courthouse corner. t was raining and the Judge failed o see Jack in time to stop. Our ympathy to Jack and also to Judge Parrish who, we know, was hurt eeply because of hitting his good riend.

Quote of the week: Marvin Vicers, pastor of the First Methodist hurch, said Sunday night, "Amen, o a preacher, is just like sic'em to dog."

Chilton County Agircultural Fair ill be held for three days in September. Date set is Sept. 13, 14, 5, and will be held at Gragg Field. The Fair this year is being sponsored by the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce and Committees ave been named and work is well underway on the project. Plans re for this to be an annual event nd with the cooperation of County merchants and businessmen it an get off to a good start this ear. M. R. Glasscock is general harman.

Lt. Col. Barnett DeRamus and on, Barnett Junior, or Sonny, received their promotions the same ay. Sonny's was to First Lt. He on the front lines in Korea with e 7th Inf. Div. DeRamus Senior stationed with the 3rd Air Force England.

We have been reading about hlorophyll making breath kissing weet. It just comes to mind that hlorophyll comes from grass. Billy oats eat grass but did you ever e anybody who wanted to kiss a illygoat?

"NOTICE"

The Chilton County Chamber of ommerce has changed time and lace of regular meeting. The next eeting will be held Thursday night t 8 o'clock August 14th, at the ity Hall in Clanton.

All members or any person interested in becoming a member is urged to attend this meeting.

Dedication Services Gragg Field Sunday

Text Of Speech By Luther Little

Judge Parrish, Members of the Gragg family and Friends:

This occasion is one that produces within our hearts, minds, and souls, strong emotions. It is only fitting that we should gather today to pay tribute to the memory of one who contributed so exceedingly much to his community and to his fellow man.

On October 3, 1876, in a modest farm home, in the Refuge community—only a few miles north-east of this very spot—there was born into the home of V. J. Gragg and Emily Baker Gragg a man child, a son, Vincent Jones Gragg II.

It is a well known and established axiom that both heredity and environment contribute to the characteristics which personalize the individual human being. Vincent Jones Gragg II was graciously and bountifully endowed with ability, courage, determination, and a keen sense of foresight all typical of the expressed traits of character of his father, Vincent Jones Gragg I, a veteran soldier of the war between the states, and of his grandfather Henry Gragg, a great native South Carolinian, and a soldier in the great war—the American Revolution.

In the days of his early childhood, Vincent Gragg learned what it really means to "earn your bread by the sweat of the brow." He cleared land, he plowed a mule in the new ground. He split rails and built fences. He, nevertheless, availed himself of the opportunity of attending school whenever he could. On one occasion when Vincent Gragg was about twelve years old, and while he was attending school in the old log house at Union Point, the teacher overheard a serious conversation among the boys. The topic of discussion was directed toward the subject as to what each of the boys would do later in life. Finally the teacher, the late W. C. Robinson, butted into the serious discussion with this remark: "See that yellow-haired brat over there. If there's one of you to make a school teacher it will be Vincent Gragg." And make a school teacher, he did.

Vincent Gragg attended other schools in the county, including the Clanton University School, where he studied under the renowned teacher E. Y. McMorries, Ph. D. He later attended the Kentucky School of Medicine, and then Tulane University in New Orleans, from which institution he graduated in medicine and with special honors. All this college career did not come easily. Vincent Gragg had to work to make money to stay in school. At the age of sixteen he taught his first school, and then taught many more terms before he completed his medical training at Tulane.

Following graduation, Vincent Gragg returned to his native home, Chilton County, and from this date on was Dr. V. J. Gragg.

We read in the Good Book, in Genesis the second chapter, and the eighteenth verse;—"And the Lord said, it is not good that the man should be alone; I will make a helpmeet for him." Also we read help meet for him." Also we read in Proverbs the nineteenth chapter and the twenty-second verse these words: "Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing."—Dr. Gragg heeded these admonitions and was married to Miss Viola Rutherford, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Rutherford of Chilton County. To bless this union there was given unto them four children, Annie, Clara Mae, Vincent, and Thomas. The grim reaper made his first call upon this family in 1902 and carried with him Little Clara May. The second call was made in 1916. On this date he carried with him Mrs. Viola Gragg.

At a later date Dr. Gragg was united in marriage to Miss Eula Florence Roper, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Roper of Clanton. To them was born one child—Elizabeth.

Dr. Gragg may be characterized as a man who possessed many abilities and many desires or dreams. When these abilities were expressed, and when these dreams came to pass, humanity was served. It was through the unrelenting efforts of Dr. Gragg that the interest of the community was aroused in having in our midst a hospital. This institution has been a real blessing to suffering humanity of this community. Dr. Gragg served his people here by the thousands. On one occasion Dr. Gragg was overheard to remark—at a time when he was hard pressed for funds—that he had over a hundred thousand dollars on his books. Fees that were rightfully due him for faithful medical or surgical services. On another occasion a good citizen came to the office of Dr. Gragg for medical examination and treatment. The examination was carefully and patiently performed, and then the medicine was compounded and delivered to the person. It was then a moment of embarassment for the patient as a half dollar was tendered to the Doctor in payment, and with the statement — "This is all I have to my name." Dr. Gragg accepted the half dollar, and said, "Thank you, now your bill is paid. But here, I want to give this half dollar back to you. Buy something to eat for yourself and your family." This one little incident, among the thousands that might have been here related, bespeaks the real inside of the heart of the man whom we today honor. That great spiritual leader and writer, Paul, admonished his brethern to have this trait of character. In his first letter to the Corinthians, in chapter thirteen and in verse thirteen, we find these words: "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

In the civic life of the community, Dr. Gragg was always alert and aggressive. He served his home town as Mayor for six years (1921-26). Time does not permit us to herein record the many, many, achievements of our fair city during this period of time. His interest extended into the educational and the recreational programs of his people. He served as a member of the local school Board. He was keenly aware of the needs of library facilities. He was a charter member of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, which is a luncheon service club for men. He served this club in every official capacity. He believed strongly in the motto of this club—'We Build.' This motto means to build good communities and good citizens. This might have well been

Auburn Outlines Program To Help Farmers Get Most From Their Crops After Drought

Auburn, Ala.—To help Alabama farmers in the serious emergency brought on by the drought, API Extension specialists have outlined a program aimed at getting as much [illegible] from feed, food, and cotton crops. It [illegible] the ex- [illegible] centers on getting ready for Fall grazing and small grain crops.

Among the suggestions were the:

1. Cut corn that is past making grain. Shock and cure it out well in the field or make it into silage if a silo is available.

2. Harvest cotton as soon as possible. Pick it clean and take it to the gin dry to get best grades.

3. Harvest peanuts to produce the biggest yields of highest quality nuts and hay under existing circumstances.

4. Save all roughage possible, including [illegible] Johnson grass and native meadow hay.

5. Disk early-harvested corn and cotton land and other land after fertilizing so moisture will be absorbed when rains come. Have soil ready for seeding when moisture is in the soil in late August and September.

6. Seed one or more of the following for late fall, winter, and spring grazing: crimson clover and ryegrass or small grains; oats, oats and vetch; ryegrass, rye, wheat, fescue gras salone.

Seed Caley peas on Johnson grass in the Black Belt and bottom areas; seed crimson clover on Johnson grass on uplands.

Seed crimson clover, vetches, Caley peas, or ryegrass on Bermuda sod after applying fertilizer and disking and just before frost.

When rains come, top-dress Johnson grass, Dallis grass, and fescue grass with nitrogen to make extra growth for hay and grazing

Seed Ladino (or other white clovers) and alfalfa for grazing hogs on a fallowed seedbed.

Fertilize in August and early September permanent pastures containing white clover, orchard grass, bluegrass, or fescue

7. Plant food crops on low bottomlands where there will likely be more moisture. Prepare a good seedbed by thorough plowing and disking and use generous applications of fertilizer

8. Do not dump cattle on the market, especially thin cattle. If necessary, buy feed to carry them until the fall market rush is over.

9. Buy as many thin stockers this fall as you can carry over.

10. Corn stover with legume hay meal will winter cattle, sheep and workstock.

11. Keep your herds and save your best heifers, even if you have to borrow money to buy feed to do it.

12. Keep your cottonseen to feed or to exchange for meal if you can get a good trade.

13. Use a grain feeding table to determine how much cows should be fed according to their ability to produce.

14. Get rid of low producing, unprofitoable cows.

15. Feed calves a milk substitute to release more whole milk for the market.

16. Carefully balance dairy rations containing purchased concentrates to cut down on protein costs.

17. "Stretch" grain by using protein supplement, mineral mixtures, salt, and early planted oats or other grazing crops.

18. Sell market hogs as soon as possible. Don't try to produce extra fat.

19. Do not sell brood sows. Carry them through the winter on grazing crops and maintenance ration of grain. Plant oats or wheat to carry the 1953 spring pig crop until early planted corn is ready for hogging off.

The Extension specialists advised farmers to see their county agents for further details.

Letter From Mayor Jones

Winter weather is fast approaching and it behooves everyone who intends to convert their heating system to Natural Gas to have the change-over made now while the plumbers and gas pipe fitters are, to an extent, idle.

We serve a double purpose by using natural gas. It is a cheaper and more dependable fuel and by supporting the natural gas system, we are making a great power in our city available to turn the wheels of industry and our city more inviting to those seeking locations. The gas system is an asset, not a liability. It is in the class with our water system, sanitary sewer system, lights, and good streets, and it increases the value of our property and our business. Therefore, I consider it to our personal interest and it is a civic duty to support the natural gas system. Let's build a better and nicer Clanton. We can do it by all pulling together.

Respectfully,
C. FENN JONES, Mayor.

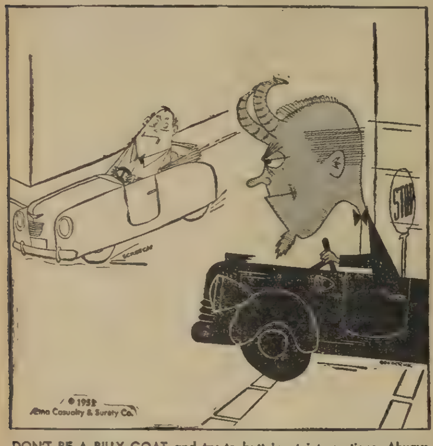
FOR THE RIGHT

WHO'S ZOO—ON THE HIGHWAY



DON'T BE A BILLY GOAT and try to butt in at intersections. Always assume the other fellow has the right of way and you'll live longer.

When Hon. John Sparkman received the nomination on the Democratic Ticket for vice presidentcy it had been just 100 years since the State of Alabama had been so honored. It's a safe bet that so much time will not have lapsed again before the State of Alabama and the South is recognized in National Convention as producing great statesmen.

A great crowd gathered at Gragg Field Sunday last to honor the memory of Dr. V. J. Gragg. A marker was placed there in memory of the untiring work he did for aviation, and his aid in securing the airport at Clanton. In Chilton county he is remembered for many things. Some remember him for his works of charity. Some remember him for his leadership. Some as the family doctor on whom they could lean in great trouble. Most remember him just as a likable human being with all the faults, and redeeming qualities of the average man. He was extremely civic minded and spent much of his time and money on making Clanton and Chilton County a better place in which to live.

HOME TRADE IS VITAL TO TOWN

The chief argument in favor of home trade is the fact that it not only rebounds to the benefit of all residing in the adjacent trade territory which is a part of every community but pays in dollars and cents. Every dollar sent away to build up business in some big city is just that much taken away from the resources of the home community.

If people will only figure up the incidental costs and conveniences occasioned by sending out of town for anything that can be purchased in their home town they will readily see that it pays to trade at home. It is customary to ignore such items, but they are there just the same and are part of the cost of the goods that are purchased in that manner. For instance, the cost of a trip to the city, time wasted away from employment, goods brought home that are not really needed, higher prices actually paid for the goods on account of the stupendous overhead of the big city stores. All this means cost and must be charged up against the purchases if one is honest with oneself.

In case of mail order purchases there are money order and postage fees, express or freight charges, time wasted and delay in waiting for the goods, annoyance of exchanging the goods that do not fill the bill, or that do not measure up to the grade expected—these and many other charges of like nature should honestly be figured up against the purchases. If this is done and quality of goods compared it will be found that it is a case of trying to lift yourself by your bootstraps. There is no easy way to secure goods for a less figure than they can be supplied by the experienced business man of Chilton County.

Perhaps nothing is studied any closer than the retailing of merchandise and you can safely figure that your live home merchant is working hard to secure the best of merchandise to place before his customers at the lowest possible figure consistnt with sound business principles. And in this day of keen competition there are few business men who do not run close to the danger line in fixing prices that will attract trade and meet competition anywhere.

It is only necessary to use common sense in dealing with these problems. The field is open to all who may wish to enter any line of business, and if there were big profits to be made that condition would not last for every opening for business is carefully searched out, and competition has reduced everything to the level of lowest possible prices.

Around OUR HOUSE
by Kathryn Tucker Windham

The five-year-old has a gaping hole in the front of her mouth—her lower, left-hand tooth has come out! After many days of wobbling around, it came out quite unexpectedly while she was munching on a piece of red watermelon.

As she held it proudly in her hand to display it, I couldn't help thinking how much easier it is to lose teeth than it is to grow them, couldn't help remembering the discomfort and crossness that same tooth caused when it was first pushing through her tender baby gums.

She could hardly wait until bedtime to put the tooth under her pillow so the fairy could replace it with a dime. She seemed quite impressed by the story of the tooth fairy and seemingly had no doubts as to its truth.

Well, after she had gone to sleep, the 'fairy' couldn't find a single dime in the house and had to substitute a quarter. She was delighted with the larger piece of money, so delighted that she forgot her pretense of believing the fairy story and exclaimed,

"O, thank you, Mother!"

Made me wonder how the legend of Santa Claus will fare this Christmas.

The contents to women's purses usually cause so much comment that it could hardly be considered wise to suggest that anything else be added to the collection. However, if there is any room at all, try tucking a piece of chalk into your purse.

The chalk will pay dividends by making it easy to do quick clean-up repairs on white accessories. Those spots of grime that appear on white shoes, purses, gloves, belts, etc., at the most inopportune times can be removed temporarily by rubbing the chalk over them.

Outdoor cooking is becoming more and more popular in our neighborhood. Our neighbor down the street taught her guests a new trick the other night: she rubs soap over the bottoms of utensils used to cook over an open fire. Then when dish washing time arrives, the smut and smoke on the utensils disappear with almost no effort.

Our next door neighbor, who has a suspiciously large number of old umbrellas around her house, has discovered a new use for these articles. She removes the cover, hangs the umbrella upside down by its handle and uses it for a clothes drier.

She took one of the coverless umbrellas along with her on her vacation, and she declares that it was worth even tht strange looks certain bell boys and motor court attendants gave her when they spotted this unusual bit of luggage.

For a real treat, serve your family an orange refrigerator cake some sultry August day. Here's how it is made:

Soften 1 tablespoon gelatin in 1-4 cup of orange juice. Add 1-3 cup sugar and 1-2 cup of boiling water, stirring until sugar and gelatin have dissolved. Add 3-4 cup orange juice. When gelatin begins to stiffen, beat until fluffy and add 12 marshmellows cut into small pieces, 1-3 cup orange pieces and 1 cup whipped cream. Pour into pan which has been lined with sponge cake or ladyfingers. Chill in refrigerator overnight and serve garnished with orange slices.

Here's How To Make More Milk Profits

Profitable milk production depends to a large extent on farm feed production.

Buying large quantities of feed is justified only when milk prices are extra attractive. And a good feed production is beneficial only when it is based on feeding cows proper amounts according to weight, milk production, and physical condition.

Grain is only a substitute in the feed budget for the nutrients cows fail to get in their roughages.

Buyer Beware

Widespread claims that the feeding of trace element minerals will prevent or cure brucellosis in animals or undulant fever in man have been proven false by controlled experiments.

Knives And Ledger Plates

Dull knives and worn ledger plates do poor work and cause increased load and troublesome draft.

PUSHES SAFETY CAMPAIGN

Montgomery, Ala.—Gov. Gordon Persons has lauded the Alabama petroleum industry for the part it is playing in pushing the state's highway safety campaign.

Persons said the Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee did an outastanding job in handing out safety reminder slips during the July 4 week end. The slips passed on to motorists carried the message, "we'd hate to lose you."

Governor Persons said that with such co-operation of interested groups he felt the number of traffic fatalities can be substantially reduced.

Since there were no woodyards between Alabama's pioneer settlements, early steamboats had to fire their boilers with trees which the crew felled along the riverbanks.

The Home Freezer Has To Be Defrosted

Naturally, the home freezer has to be defrosted once or twice a year or when about one-half inch of frost collects on wall and shelf areas.

A layer of frost over one-half inch thick reduces food storage space and makes the freezer inconvenient to use.

If a freezer frosts too rapidly, keep these facts in mind. Don't open the freezer and leave it open more often than necessary. Properly package all foods put into the freezer so that moisture necessary for quality food does not escape and become useless frost. Be sure that the gasket makes a good seal, and if excessive frost accumulates around the opening, install a new gasket.

MORE MONEY NEEDED BY BOARD OF EDUCATION

Montgomery, Ala.—State School Superintendent Dr. W. J. Terry says the Alabama education department will have to borrow money to operate public schools until more tax money is received on Oct. 1.

Terry said some $12,000,000 will be needed between now and when the new revenue becomes available at the start of each new fiscal year. The Education Department has had to borrow money nearly every year to finance its late-year operations, but until 1949, it could get the cash from a special educational trust fund.

However, the 1949 legislature took the surplus from that fund and appropriated it for operating expenses. This year the state will have to borrow the $12,000,000 from an outside firm. Last year, too, it was necessary to borrow a like amount and that debt will be paid off within two months. Terry said he expected to borrow the same amount next year.

Judges For Chilton Field Trials Are Named

Judges for the coming foxhunters field trial to be staged in Chilton August 18 through 21st have been named. The Chilton County Foxhunters Association have gone all-out to get judges from outside the county. These judges are paid judges and are all foxhunters and experienced in field judging of hounds.

Judges named are as follows: J. L. Johnson, Roanoke, Ala.; Ronnie Liles, Malone, Ala.; A. D. Bowen, Wedowee, Ala.; Will Hayes, Buffalo, Ala.; Paul Kasey and Leland Gresham, from Mississippi; Aubie Carden, Anniston, Ala.; H. R. Dennniston, Birmingham, Ala.; and they may use Frank Smith from Clanton if necessary. Judges will be quartered at the Ellis Tourist Court.

The trials will get under way on Monday, August 18th with registrations at the Willingham Hotel. That night, August 18, a bench show will be held on the hotel parking lot with Buck Tatum, Ripley, Miss., doing the judging. Mr. Tatum is nationally known as a judge. A lot of expense and effort has gone forth to secure Mr. Tatum. He will be Master of Hounds in the field trial.

Running will commence Tuesday morning at day break in the vicinity of Ball Hill, just off Higgins Ferry Road. Ten or more judges will watch the marked hounds in the field and score them by the point as to their performance.

Hounds under 2 years old will be run only two days. They will be scored separately from the hounds over two years—or, the All-Age. Four beautiful trophies will be awarded the first four hounds in the two classes—the largest being a 14-inch trophy.

There will be a puppy show for pups under one year of age the night of the bench show. No entry fee will be charged. Ribbons will be awarded winners. Any pup that runs in the field will have to be entered as a Derby.

All judges will be on horseback.

On Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 20, a barbecuse will be given beginning at 4 o'clock until gone. Place to be announced later. The public is invited. Trophies for winners in the Derby Class will be awarded at the barbecue.

Running will continue through Thursday. This Field Trial has the makings of one of the toughest in the state. All hunters are looking to this hunt to test their hounds against some of the best in the state. Visiting hunters will be quartered at local hotels, tourist courts and fishing camps.

Anyone with a fishing camp that they would let a few hunters use for three nights are requested to contact Marion W. Easterling, Clanton, Ala.

Your hounds will be fed. Western Grain of Birmingham has donated 300 lbs. of Jim Dandy Dog Ration. It is hoped that some of the other feed companies will see fit to donate some feed to these rgular feed buyers.

Mr. Gresham Smith, Marion Easterling and Clark Headley have consented to pay for the judges rooms at the Ellis Tourist Court. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Porch of Verbena will quarter the Master of Hounds and 2 judges. Mr. Gresham Smith, Dr. Claughton and Mr. J. R. Porch are furnishing the horses.

If anyone in the county has a horse that could be used these three days, please contact Mr. J. R. Porch in person or by telephone at Verbena, Ala.

Caring for the horses is in charge of R. T. Carter, Secretary of the Association. Horses and hounds will be kennelled and stabled at the Clanton Stock Yards barn.

Mr. "Red" Mims of Fairview, Clanton, is in charge of placing signs to casting grounds. He will also help in caring for the horses.

Marion W. Easterling is in charge of the feeding of hounds and the reception of guests in helping them find a place to stay.

J. R. Porch will be at the barn Monday afternoon and night to see that hounds are properly numbered.

On Wednesday night, at 7:30 p.m., a business meeting will be held at the Willingham Hotel. At this time officers will be elected for the coming year.

All foxhunters and sportsmen in Chilton County are urged to gather at the Willingham Hotel Monday afternoon and night, August 18, to welcome out-of-town and out-of-state hunters and help make the Chilton County hunt a premier hunt in the nation. Chilton has the best running territory anywhere. It's up to everyone to make these visitors know it.

The zero milestone of Birmingham, the point from which official mileage of Birmingham is computed, is located at Woodrow Wilson Park. It is marked by a marble shaft, capped with a direction finder of bronze, erected by the Alabama Motorists' Association.

Makes Plans To Enter Heifer In September Dairy Show

Mary Lou Traywick, 4-H Club Member of Poole's Cross Roads, is making plans to show her grade Jersey heifer in the September Dairy Show. John Sellers, 4-H Club Leader, will assist Mary Lou and other 4-H Club members in getting their animals ready to show.

As the September Dairy Show gets closer 4-H Adult dairy cattle owners will give their animals the extra attention they need to get them properly groomed and trained for showing. This year's dairy show will be open to grade as well as purebred dairy animals. While both purebred and grade animals will be entered, they will be exhibited in different divisions, and will not be shown in competition.

This year a very ince premium list is being offered. Heading the premium list will be a purebred Jersey heifer that will be awarded to the 4-H boy or girl who does the best job of fitting and showing his or her animal. This award will be made to the owner of either a purebred or grade animal.

In addition to the purebred dairy heifer awarded for showmanship and grooming, another purebred heifer will be awarded by the Shelton Truck and Tractor Company. The Shelton award will be given to the most outstanding 4-H boy or girl of the year.

Approximately forty animals, both purebred and grade cattle, have been entered.

This year's dairy show promises to be by far the largest dairy show in the history of the county, in spite of the drought and feed shortages. The Danishor—or Point System—of judging will again be used. By using the point system of scoring, a more uniform distribution of prize money can be made. When cattle are scored by the point system they are compared to the ideal type animal, rather than placed in relation to the other animals in the show. Three of the four ribbon groups—blue, red and white—earn points and are eligible for premium money.

4-H or Adult dairy cattle owners who have not entered their cattle should do so immediately by contacting the County Agent's office. Assistance will be offered in selecting and fitting and grooming if desired. Unless animals are entered well in advance of the show date, it will be difficult to make arrangements for the animals during the show.

Your reporter recalled to memory some weeks ago a person by the name of Lizzie Manuel. "Lizzie Manuel" lived in what at that time was called the Range of Whatley Town. She was kind and considerate of the men who had cattle on or in that range. She never missed an opportunity to care for a sick cow or feed one that needed to be fed. A missed or lost cow was always found. Any way that she could help she always lent a helping hand. As a child in Lawley, Ala., I remembered "Lizzie" and her son, Jessie. Others of you, no doubt remember her entire family. Lizzie and Jessie came to Lawley and traded at my father's mercantile store.

I drove to Pleasant Grove community recently and inquired where "Whatley Town used to be." After arriving at a residence I inquired of Lizzie Manuel and was told that she lived some where near 4-Mile Branch, near Selma. I took one day off and searched that section from house to house. Found no trace of Lizzie Manuel or any one who knew her. Two weeks ago while on my way to Selma I decided to take the road out to where used to be known, The Poor House. There I stopped at the first residence and asked an elderly woman, if she knew a Lizzie Manuel and she immediately replied "Yes, she lives right there in that house." Lizzie still lives and is now, I believe, 74. Her son, Jessie, is dead. She recalled many cattle men who had cows on out in that range.

Alabama Leading Tree Farm State

Birmingham, Ala.—Alabama has regained its title as the nation's leading "tree farm" state.

Texas, which held the lead for a short while, dropped back before Alabama's total of 404 tree farms—privately owned, business-managed woodland properties used exclusively for the production of continuing crops of trees.

Alabama and Texas have waged a see saw battle for the national tree farm honors for many months. Alabama was the first Southern state to certify tree farms. Today, Alabama has 2,593,950 acres in certified tree farms.

W. A .Belcher, Birmingham, head of the newly-formed Alabama Forest Industries Advisory Committee, said that one out of every four industrial workers in Alabama is dependent on forest crops for his livelihood.

"Lumber, paper and pulp, and furniture manufacturing account for j10 per cent of the per capita income of Alabama,'" Belcher points out. "From the standpoint of payrolls, value of products and number of persons employed, the state's wood processors rank just after primary metals and textiles among Alabama industries," he said.

Alabama ranks first in the South and fourth in the nation in lumber production. The state's pulpwood harvest is the fourth largest in the South. Timber crops harvested off Alabama's 18,000,000 acres of commercial fortseland provide the basic raw material for more than 3,000 wood-using plants.

Every Alabama county has a substantial income from forest harvests. A statistical summary of forest production based on 1950 state severance tax returns shows Clarke County led the state in production of both pine and hardwood lumber. Baldwin County produced the most pulpwood. Crenshaw Couny was the state's largest producer of cross-ties and switch ties.

1,030 PERSONS ARE DROPPED FROM STATE WELFARE ROLLS

Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama Welfare Commissioner Bill Dorrough says 1,030 persons were dropped from state welfare rolls from May to June.

The drop continues the decline in the number of cases handled by the State Welfare Department since new legislation went into effect at the beginning of the fiscal year, Oct. 1, 1951.

Dorrough says in June his department paid 101,373 cases a total of $2,451,477 compared to the 102,403 cases that received $2,472,245 in May. The average per case payment last month was $24.18 up four cents from the May average in spite of $20,298 drop in the amount spent for assistance.

In all 2,484 cases were closed in June Dorrough said, but 1,442 new ones were added.

NEW POLIO CASES

Montgomery, Ala. —The State Health Department says that 20 new polio cases last week boosted Alabama's total for the year to 92.

However, this is still 74 cases below last year's figure for the comparative period.

The previous week's polio count was 13. Five of last week's cases were in Cullman County, which had three previously. Calhoun County, which had eight cases, reported four more last week.

In another report, the State Health Department disclosed that the divorce rate in Alabama climbed slightly last year, although the national total was subsequently lower.

state-by-state tabulation by the Na-

According to figures based on a tional Office of Vital Statistics, divorces in Alabama jumped from 8,743 in 1940, to 8,766 last year.

National figures dropped from 385,144 in 1940 to 371,000 last year.

SOUTHERN BELL SEEKS RAISE IN RATES

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama's Public Service Commission has received a petition from the Southern Bell Telephone Company here seeking an annual rate increase of $917,000.

Southern Bell Manager Harry B. Lackey said the rate increase was needed to take care of wage boosts approved by the Wage Stabilization Board for Bell System workers on June 8.

Lackey said that under the proposed rate adjustment, the charge for pay station calls will go up from 5 to 10 cents and some of the long distance calls within the state will be increased.

Lackey said basic reisdential and business rates would not be affected by the proposed rate change. The APSC will set a date for public hearings on the telephone company rate increase application within a few days, PSC President C. C. (Jack) Owen said.

Owen also disclosed this week that Southland Telephone Company, Atmore, had been authorized to borrow $25,000 to finance improvements and make additions to its system, and to sell an additional 50,000 worth of First Mortgage Bonds.

The concern was authorized to borrow the $25,000 from the Chase National Bank, New York, at a four per cent interest, for a period not to exceed one year. The authorized new $50,000 bond issue was to be sold at 4 1-2 per cent interest to Mutual Life Insurance Company, New York, with the First National Bank of Mobile, as Trustee.

LAND PROCURED FOR NEGRO STATE PARK

Montgomery, Ala.—State Conservation Department Director Earl M. McGowin says that land had been procured from the TVA which will provide a major park area for Negroes in Alabama.

McGowin said site for the camp area is included in a 2,200 acre parcel of land in Joe Wheeler Reservation, in Lauderdale and Lawrence Counties, purchased for $51,630, from the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The land includes 1,800 acres in Lauderdale County, and 400 acres in Lawrence. The Lawrence section now has 37 buildings, of which 17 are brick. Most of it is on Wheeler Reservoir, but some is on Wilson Reservoir.

McGowin said the part for Negroes will be set aside at first for day-use, swimming, picnicking, boating, and for general recreation purposes. Later he said it was hoped overlight facilities will be added. The tract lies on the north side of the Tennessee River, on First Creek Embayment, in the Wheeler Reservoir in Lauderdale County.

For the past two years the State Conservation Department has had this land under lease. The 1951 legislature appropriated the $51,630 necessary to purchase the land. McGowin closed out the transaction when he presented a state warrant to D. O. Dugger, reservoir manager for Wheeler-Pickwick Reservoir. The purchase was from the federal government, through the TVA.

McGowin said indications already this year were that Joe Wheeler State Park would rank second in attendance only to the Gulf Shores State Park. McGowin said it was hoped that as soon as facilties are completed in the area that it will be wholely self-sustaining.

It contains two boat liveries already, he said, one on Wilson Lake, the other on Second Creek.

Tell Consumer About Home-Grown Produce

A question raised frequently by retail food merchants and other distributors is "Why are locally-grown foods not given as much advertising and sales 'push' by growers as most foods that are shipped in from other states?"

The answer, they believe, is that local growers quite often seem unconcerned about their products after they leave the farm. On the other hand, much promotoional effort is spent by growers or groups of growers in other producing areas to convince everyone—including the consumer—that what they grow is absolutely 'tops'.

This means that the job of selling each individual customer is partially done before she enters a retail store. If she has already become acquainted with an item thru such means as newspaper and radio advertising, she is much more easily attracted to it.

In other words, it pays to advertise tnd promote home-grown produce.

It Pays To Handle Hosiery Carefully

The salesgirl knows that smooth handling of hosiery helps avoid snags that lead to runs and ruin.

Therefore, buyers should take the tip and keep hands and fingernails smooth.

Such stress on smoothness may seem extreme unless the cost of careiessness in handling hosiery is counted.

Providing smooth care for hosiery includes keeping stockings in a smooth container, each pair seperate, instead of tumbling them together in a drawer where they may catch on rough wood or something else in the drawer. And many a run in a brand-new stocking has started by putting them on too rapidly.

Adequate Wiring For Greater Efficiency

Inadequate and improper wiring is not only inefficient, but it is dangerous, too.

Therefore, if you are planning to rewire your farm or wire another farm building, be sure it is properly done. Helpful pointers on safe wiring may be obtained at the local county agent's office.

Alabama Fair Welcomes Work Of State Artists

Birmingham, Ala.—One of the masterpieces of art, "Peace And Plenty," painted by George Inness, will adorn the walls of the Art Show at the Alabama State Fair here Sept. 29-Oct. 4.

The announcement was made today by Mrs. Erskine Tidmore, secretary of the Birmingham Art Association and director in charge of the State Fair Art Show.

Mrs. Tidmore said the widely-known work of Inness is being loaned to the Fair by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. The .Birmingham Art Association is sponsor of the show.

In addition to this great work, the State Fair will display paintings of Alabama artists. Last year, entries were received from about 20 cities throughout Alabama.

Interest in the State Fair Art Show has increased steadily over the past few years, Mrs. Tidmore said. The display of great works has helped stimulate participation in the show and patronage of those who attend the Fair. Last year, Charles Wilson Peale's "George Washington" commanded widespread interest. It also was loaned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The Painting of Inness this year will highlight one of the finest and most extensive exhibitions of works by native artists ever hung in the grandstand of the State Fair.

Mrs. Tidmore predicted that entries this year will top the 1293 received for the 1951 show. In addition to the regular classifications, there has been added a special classification for youngsters under 10 years of age, she said.

Scores of awards will be made to local artists for works in all classifications.

Robert Favre, young Birmingham artist, wno the grand award last year with his oil painting, "Cats." Second prize was taken by Richard Zoellner, with an etching, "Twilight."

Mrs. Tidmore said pictures for this year's show must be received not later than Sept. 22. Entries will be judged Friday, Sept. 26 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. They will be hung on Saturday, Sept. 27, but will not be shown to the public until Monday, Sept. 29, opening day of the Fair.

Assisting Mrs. Tidmore with the show are Lemuel McDaniel, Mrs. Willard Mobley and Mrs. Frank Black.

TWO NAMED TO HEALTH DEPT. POST

Montgomery, Ala.— Claude P. Owens and U. D. Franklin have been named division directors in the State Health Department's Bureau of Sanitation.

Owen was succeeded as director of the Malaria Control Division by G. R. Wright, formerly director of the Division of Typhus Control. The Typhus Control Division has been combined with the Malaria Control Division.

Crimson Clover Seed Market Looks Bright

The 1952-53 crimson clover seed production program is on the minds of many farmers right now.

The reason is that crimson clover seed production dropped from 8,500,000 pounds in 1951 to around 4,500,000 pounds in 1952. Some of the drop was caused by rains at harvest time, drought, and lack of bees for pollination in some cases.

It is again time to make plans for crimson clover seed production, and in some areas it's time to plant. Of course, the right kind and amounts of fertilizer should be used. Recommended is an application of 300 pounds of 0-16-8 per acre. And do not overlook boron for good seed yields. Include at least 10 to 15 lbs. borax per acre.

An investment of less than $1 per acre in borax has increased seed yields worth $65 an acre when seed were selling for 25c a pound.

POPLAR SPRINGS

(Too late for last week)

We had good attendance at both morning and night services, and very inspiring messages delivered by Bro. Cook. We were glad to have each one of you at our services.

Our revival begins Saturday night August 9th. So everyone be much in prayer that we will really have a successful revival. Bro. Wallance of Kemp, Ala., will be doing the preaching.

Our singing school got off to a good start Monday afternoon. We wish many more would enroll and learn more about singing for the Glory of God. Mr. Audie Brown is teaching.

Rev. and Mrs. N. E. Cook and children and Mr. and Mrs. Sylvin Easterling visited Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Pate and family near Sylacauga Saturday night. Mrs. Cook's father, Mr. Stephen Pate, returned home with them for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Parker and boys and Mr. Phillips Jennings spent Monday with Rev. and Mrs. N. E. Cook. Gerald and Thurl Parker remained with the Cook's to attend singing school.

We are sorry Mrs. John Cox, Mr. Dave Jones, Mr. Jesse Thornton and Mrs. John Bradberry are still unable to be out at church. Also our pastor's mother is having trouble with her foot again. Let us remember these and all other sick, and our boys in service in our prayers.

Our hearts were made sad to hear of the death of Mrs. Rebecca McDowell, who has been away in the hospital. She was the wife of Mr. Joseph McDowell. The family have our heart felt sympathy, and may they look to the One who doeth all things well, for comfort and strength. And may they realize that Heaven is dearer since mother is there.

Come to prayer service Wednesday night.

FIN-FAN ITEMS

Dr. H. S. Swingle, Fish Culturist, Auburn, and his students worked in conjunction with the State Conservation Department in making a fish population study on beautiful Lake Jordan. The final figures have not been tabulated at this time but early in the survey, Dr. Swingle announced that Jordan surpasses all other reservoirs in the state in number of game fish. This includes Guntersville on the Tennessee River and all other reservoirs with the exception of Lake Mitchell, where a survey will be made in the near future. Comparative figures of Guntersville and Jordan will be announced upon completion of the Jordan survey.

Fishermen on Jordan Lake will see large quanities of dead fish floating about during the coming week, as it was impossible to collect all of the survey casualties. Perhaps you may wonder just how a population study is conducted. Approximately an acre contaniing a given volumn of water is staked out and marked with buoys. This area is then poisoned and as fish begin coming to the water surface, they are picked up by a crew of game wardens who turn the fish over to the fish culturist. The fish biologist and fish culturist then classify all fish according to species and sizes where upon a fairly accurate count can be made of the average fish per acre. The purpose of these surveys is to determine just what we have and what can be done to improve conditions. Each year thousands upon thounsds of dollars are wasted restocking lakes that are actually over stocked to begin with. After all these years, from the beginning of time, men are finally becoming aware of the fact, that fish reproductivity is a highly complexed science and should be treated as such. In other words, just because you do not catch a fish each time you wet a hook, does not necessairly mean that you need a new stock of fish.

You may need food for the fish you have already. To have good fish conditions, you must have a good balance between food and fish, and on that score, Lake Jordan proves to be the best of the best in Alabama.

Only a few fishemmen were out during the past record hot week, but several nice entries were entered in the Alabama Power Company Fishing Contest.

Lake Lay

H. C. Leigh's Fishing Camp, Waxahatchee Creek, reports: Ed Goodgame, Clanton, used a fly rod and a medium popping bug to catch his nice string of Bluegills. The largest weighed in at 9 ounces.

Lake Mitchell

Traywick's Fishing Camp, Yellow Leaf Creek, reports: R .O. Dunaway, Calera, spent a good ten minutes playing a 4 pound 15 ounce Smallmouth Bass caught with a chugger spook, red-head. Daniel Boone, 2301 South 15th Avenue, Birmingham, tried his luck down about the islands below Mitchell Dam and had a pretty good time. Dan used a Dalton Special to catch his string, the largest Smallmouth Bass weighed 3 pounds 12 ounces

Powell's River Road Store, near Clanton, reports: W. R. Culver, 2800 North 38th Avenue, Birmingham, found a shady spot on Cargile Creek and with the aid of a fly rod, hooked a 3 pounds Smallmouth Bass.

CHIEF ALAPOCO SAYS: An excessively large number of motorboat fires and explosions occur just after refueling. Practically all can be traced to carelessness and are preventable.

Deep Sea Rodeo Time Is Near

Mobile, Alabama—If it swims, it can win a prize during the 1952 Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo

That just about sums up the $10,000 prize situation for the 20th Annual Fishing Rodeo, scheduled Aug 15-17, in the Gulf of Mexico off historic Dauphin Island

Of course, the top prizes will go for the big fish—the tarpon, redfish, ling, cavalla, etc.—but there will also be prizes for the biggest turtle, crab, catfish and other common species from the briny deep.

First prize for the big catches will run around $300 in merchandise—boats, motors, tackle, etc.—and in the top brackets four prizes will be awarded for each type fish

It won't matter too much where the fishing is done. It can be from a palatial fishing craft out in the Gulf or it can be done from the wharves and jetties on the Island

There will be some fine prizes for the youngsters, too. The boy and girl under sixteen landing the largest fish will get approximately $100 in prizes.

There are so many prizes this year that a top-ranking judge, Roy H. Martin of Panama City, holder of three world fishing records, will do the officiating. Martin will be assisted by L. G. Adams and John Allen, past presidents of the Rodeo.

And for the lazy folks, you don't even have to fish to be eligible for the new 1952 all-steel station wagon which will be given as an attendance prize.

Jesse Acree, Rodeo President, points out that "if you like to fish and win prizes doing it, the place to go is the 1952 Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo."

But you do have to be fat, thin or ugly to win the prize given the Fattest Man, the Thinnest Man and the Ugliest Man.

Sunday afternoon, July 20th, the above boys and their parents gathered at the County Agent's office in a downpour of rain before departing for camp. Glancing at the group, one could tell in an instant that a lot of fun and excitement was yet to come. An interesting variety of play equipment, fishing tackle, melons and fruit were placed in the truck along with the groups baggage.

The group arrived at Camp Rotary, near Wetumpka, about 4:00 p.m. The boys were divided into three age groups and assigned to cabins along the water front. Twelve councilors from the Montgomery YMCA were on hand to help direct activities throughout the camp. Excellent food was prepared by regular cooks employed by the camp.

Outlined is a normal day of Camp activities: Reveille, Calisthenics, flag raising ceremony, breakfast and clean-up detail, Chapel services, recreational activities such as swimming, canoing, surf-board riding, archery, handicraft, riflery, soft ball, tennis, badminton and basketball, lunch, rest period in barracks for an hour, more recreation until flag lowering ceremony, supper, Vesper services, entertainment in the gymnasium such as singing, games, story telling, tricks, boxing and wrestling. Lights out at 10:00 p.m.

Each 4-H Club member at Camp was insured for the protection of his family in case of accident. Each activity was supervised by a well-trained councilor. Non-swimmers were taught to swim and dive for his future protection.

Camp leaders and 4-H leaders would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the parents and thank each boy that attended camp for the splendid cooperation showed while at Camp. The spirit of the 4-H Club pledge:

I pledge my head to clearer thinking,
My heart to greater loyalty
My hands for greater service
My Health for better living for my club, my community and my country, was observed throughout the camp.

Dedication Services At Gragg Field

the motto of Dr. Gragg.

Dr. Gragg was a member of the County Medical Society, and served this professional group in every official capacity. He was indeed a professional physician. He was a dauntless advocate of a strong County Health Department, and contributed much to the inaugural of this service, and to the successful operation of this Department.

Dr. Gragg's physical endurance seemed to be endless and inexhaustible. This one day's schedule will attest as an example. He arose, bathed, shaved, dressed, had breakfast, performed two major surgical operations, attended the rest of his patients, drove to Coosa river for his exercise. He swam the river, over and back, not just once but twice. He then returned to Clanton, parked his automobile at this airport, warmed up his plane, flew to Meridian, Mississippi and had lunch with the famous Key brothers. After his return to Clanton in the afternoon he attended an office full of ailing people.

On a cold, dreary, February day, the seventeenth, of 1947, Dr. Gragg took leave of this old world, on his last flight. He had reached the promised length of life here, three score and ten.

James Russell Lowell once spoke a tribute to a departed friend of his, Dr. Channing. His words are most fitting to my feelings of my departed friend today.

Therefore I cannot think thee wholly gone;
The better part of thee is with us still;
Thy soul its hampering clay aside hath thrown,
And only freer wrestles with the ill.

Thou art not idle; in thy higher sphere
Thy spirit bends itself to loving tasks.,
And strength, to perfect what it dreamed of here
Is all the crown and glory that it asks.
For sure, in Heaven's wide chambers, there is room
For love and pity, and for helpful deeds,
Else were our summons thither but a doom
To life more vain than this in claey weeds.

I have one last remaining thought which I would like to leave with you, particularly his family. This thought has been best expressed in the words of Lucile Lippitt.

I would not that immortal soul reclaim
To lift again his burden of the earth.
It is God's recognition of his worth
That sends him forth to be a living flame
Of liberated life. No transient fame,
Or wealth, or circumstances of birth,
No high adventure, or glad days of mirth
And comradeship could hold him. In the name
Of all I reverence in him, of all I love,
Forth now I speed him, armed with faith assured
That all the glory of his mortal past,
Spread wide, will light the way, like stars above,
For those who cherish him. I have endured
His loss, triumphant that he lives at last.

State 4-H Club Camp Best In Long Series

FOR 465 Alabama farm boys and girls the week of July 7-12 brought the realization of their hopes and dreams of the past 12 months. This was a banner week for these youngsters who flocked to Auburn for the 32nd annual State 4-H Club Camp and Short Course.

The weatherman smiled down on the young farmers and homemakers as they scurried about the A.P.I. campus taking part in a jam-packed schedule of activities. Included in the week's proceedings were leadership training sessions, state project contests, picnics and parties, election of officers for the State 4-H Club Council, and tours of the campus and Experiment Station.

The baking contest, with a record group of 50 counties participating, was the first contest held. Winners were Olene Howle, Heflin, Rt. 3, Jo Ann Catchings, Rockford, and Wanda McElroy, Ft. Payne, Rt. 5. These girls each received a $100 educational scholarship from Calumet Division of General Foods Corporation.

An event filled with glamour was the dress revue in which 61 county sewing champions modeled their prize-winning ensembles. First place in the revue went to Bettie Morris of Blountsville, Rt. 3. Joyce King of Vincent, Rt. 2, was named alternate. District winners included Betty Wise, Opp, Rt. 3; Mabel Layton, Ragland, Rt. 1; Jeanell Kite, Opelika, Rt. 1; Mary Kay Boyd, Livingston, Rt. 1; Jurldean Wiginton, Hackleburg, Rt. 1, and Wanda Joyce Davis, Wilmer, Rt. 1.

Dairy foods team and individual competition was another exciting event on the camp calendar. In this contest Carolyn Shockley of Heflin, Rt. 3, was named individual winner. And the Houston County team of Ann Hudson, Columbia, Rt. 2, and Jo Ann Granberry of Ashford, Rt. 2, won first place in the team contest. Individual district winners were Jo Ann Barker, Athens, Rt. 2; Betty Jean McGhee, Dadeville, Rt. 1, and Martha Overstreet, Alma.

The 4-H talent contest, a relatively new event at the state camp, was filled with excitement and plenty of entertainment for all the youngsters. District winners were Billy Barnes, Centre, Rt. 2; Clyde Douglass, Lapine, Rt. 1; Ray Owens, Patsburg, Rt. 1; Billy Davis, Bradleyton; Charles Bryant, Irvington, and Hollis Cannon, Anniston. Bryant was named state talent winner at the candlelight ceremony near the end of the week. The young Mobile County musician plays the piano, organ, accordion, xylophone and drums.

Perhaps the most exciting meeting of the entire week was the election of the eight boys and girls who will serve as officers of the Alabama 4-H Club Council for the coming year. For president the delegates selected 17-year-old Montgomery County 4-H'er Ed P. Young of Snowdoun. The young son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Young has been a worker in Montgomery County 4-H Clubs for nine years. He has completed many poultry, dairy and beef projects.

Other officers on the state council for 1952-53 are Leigh Rickard, Florence, Rt. 5; Sue Meadows, West Point, Ga., Rt. 5, and Brown Eatman, Gordo, Rt. 2, all vice presidents. Bobby Aderholt, Haleyville, Rt. 3, was elected secretary; Jean Talley, Lincoln, Rt. 1, treasurer; Nell Penton, Hissop, reporter, and Franklin Wilson, Georgiana, Rt. 1, song leader.

Homes Highlight Rural Progress

RESULTS of better farm and home living continue to brighten the landscape of rural Alabama as more and more farm families remodel or build modern, convenient homes. Although great strides have been made in mechanization, fertilization, crop rotation, and many other methods of scientific agriculture, homemaking has also made great progress. In almost every community, new homes stand as a tribute to the improvement that is Alabama's.

A large part of this advancement has come as a result of the work of the state's thousands of home demonstration club members. Through their monthly demonstrations on better homemaking practices these women have learned many of the skills of turning dreary kitchens, utility rooms, and bedrooms into the most cheery and convenient rooms in the home. And landscaping projects add beauty to the rural scene.

Shown here is the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Smith of Abbeville, Rt. 2. Mrs. Smith used many of the ideas she picked up at her club in making her home convenient and modern in every detail. The Smiths, with their young son, Roger, are shown here checking the growth of shrubbery they put out last spring. Mrs. Smith is a member of the Bowen Club.

Dairy Shows In September

THIS month farm youngsters and adult dairymen will be concentrating their attention on the job of selecting and fitting their prize cattle for the fall dairy show season which starts early next month.

Dairy experts predict that competition will be keen among producers and breeders who take part in the annual shows. Each event will have a junior show open to 4-H Club and FFA members followed by an open show —one in which the youngsters will compete with adult dairymen.

Scheduled district shows are as follows: Gadsden, Sept. 3-4 (tentative); Decatur, 4-5; Fayette, 10-11; Dadeville, 11-12; Bessemer, 12-13; Mobile, 18-19; Montgomery, 23-24, and Demopolis, Sept. 22-26 (tentative).

Ergot Poisoning Spells Trouble For The Careless Cattleman

By BOB FARQUHAR
A.P.I. Extension Livestock Specialist

THIS is the time of year when farmers begin noticing their cows acting as though they had been out on a "Saturday night spree." If so, chances are that these animals have ergot poisoning.

Ergot is a form of poisoning that causes livestock to lose their coordination and act as though intoxicated. This poisoning is very common throughout the Black Belt and other regions where Dallis grass is grown.

When the first signs of the loss of coordination begin to show up in the herd, an immediate inspection of the pastures should be made. Ergot can be easily detected by examining the seedheads of Dallis grass. It appears on the seedheads as a dark, smutty, or sticky, black substance. When an excess amount of this substance is taken into the body, it may cause pregnant cows to abort. Death sometimes results from this poisoning.

The simplest way to prevent ergot poisoning is to mow pastures whenever the Dallis grass seedheads begin showing the black material. If it is impossible to mow the pasture, the cattle should be moved to some form of temporary grazing such as Johnson grass, sericea, Sudan grass, or kudzu.

MODIFIED FARROWING HOUSE—Thrifty pigs that miss most of the dangers of being mashed or smothered by the sow are the result of D. C. Riley's modified central type farrowing house. Riley, who lives near Evergreen, took the floor plan from the Auburn farrowing house plan and converted one side of his barn into a central farrowing house (see inset). A lean-to shed on one side of the barn was walled in and cut up into individual sections, each large enough for one sow and her litter of pigs. Guard rails around the sides of the pens give small pigs protection from "overlaying" by the sow. When pigs are old enough they begin eating from the feed bins located in the creep pen at one end of the farrowing house.

And Good Management Helps

Double-Duty Crop Makes Dairying Profitable

DAIRYMAN G. E. Wade, of Henagar, Rt. 2, believes his sericea patch is one of the best "double-duty" crops he's ever had on the farm. And a lot of other farmers will agree with him.

The DeKalb County producer began selling milk in 1946—and like most beginners he was shy on good grazing when he started. Good cows were also scarce on his farm. But he has changed all of this by growing into the business in an economical and practical way.

For grazing Wade has six acres of sericea that's been producing good grazing and plenty of hay for six years. He calls it a double-duty crop because he gets grazing and a good cutting of hay from the field each summer. Four additional acres of sericea will be planted this fall, and Wade plans to eventually have an acre of sericea for each cow on the farm.

Wade has his sericea interplanted with hard seeded crimson clover for winter grazing, and in addition to supplying plenty of summer grazing, the sericea is usually cut once for hay.

Other grazing crops on the farm include fescue and Ladino clover; white Dutch clover and orchard grass, and six acres of permanent pasture. All of the crops receive recommended amounts of the right kinds of fertilizer.

Wade is growing his own heifers for use as herd replacements and for enlarging his herd. Six heifers—all resulting from artificial breeding—will go into the production herd about a year from now. With good breeding behind them, these animals should step-up the average herd production per cow.

Wade sells grade A milk to a wholesale plant in Boaz and has recently joined the Marshall-DeKalb Dairy Herd Improvement Association. By having his cows tested each month, the dairyman can keep a record on each cow's production. This record will come in handy when he gets ready to cull out the low producers.

The old story that cows won't eat sericea is a joke to Wade. His cows eat all they can hold every time he turns them in on it. He attributes this to the fact that the crop on his farm is kept young and tender through the use of fertilizer and management. If the sericea gets ahead of the cattle, he cuts it for hay and the crop comes back quickly with an abundance of tender grazing.

Cheap but good hay and plenty of grazing are two of the main points in a good dairy production system. And Dairyman Wade has the answer with his double-duty crop—sericea.

SUCCESSFUL COMBINATION—Good grade cows, ample grazing, quality hay, and an abundance of good management spell success in the dairy business. And G. E. Wade of Henagar, Rt. 2, shown here with some of the cows in his grade A dairy unit, has all of these ingredients on his farm. He uses artificial breeding and dairy herd-improvement association testing to improve the quality of his cattle and practices a sound feeding system which utilizes the top-quality forage crops grown on the farm.

Winter grazing is needed on practically all farms. It saves feed, labor, and helps to keep the animals in healthier condition. Any farmer producing milk, beef, or pork cannot afford to do without winter grazing.

Along the Way

with P. O. DAVIS

DIRECTOR, API EXTENSION SERVICE

ANOTHER fall planting season is at hand. It has begun in the Tennessee Valley and Sand Mountain areas and will gradually move southward.

The extent to which farmers succeed with winter crops will be determined considerably by the condition of their seedbeds. Experience has revealed the high importance of thorough soil preparation in advance of planting. Farmers who delay soil preparation until planting often get poor stands, or plants die after germination.

Preparation which was not done in July can be done in August—preferably in early August. Each rain offers an opportunity for plowing and pulverizing.

We have never planted enough winter legumes and small grains in Alabama for grazing, for soil improvement, and for feed. Best results are obtained by farmers who prepare well in advance and have seed, inoculant, and fertilizer ready to plant at the right time in the right way.

Take Care of Timber

This little message is directed to those who own land with timber on it. Trees are increasing in importance because wood needs are expanding.

And trees are a crop, the same as cotton or corn. In addition to being of major importance, trees occupy more than half of all land in Alabama, and most of that timber land is owned by farmers.

Thus, farmers have a fine opportunity to protect and manage their trees the same as they do cotton, corn, peanuts, or other crops. Number one in protection is to keep fires out. Fire is the arch enemy of trees.

Fire prevention, selective cutting, and thinning as needed will go far in improving a tree crop and expanding the dollar income from it every year.

Bustling Broiler Business

Alabama farmers are moving forward in the production of broilers. Last year they produced 25 per cent more than they produced in 1949. The South as a whole increased 21 per cent. Production in Alabama last year was 13,114,000 broilers which sold for $9,560,000—a big wad of money.

Compared to a few years ago, it's new money because the broiler industry in Alabama is young. Farmers in parts of Georgia got started years ago. They produced 62,892,000 birds last year.

In 1951 the American people ate around 800 million broilers or five for each man, woman, and child. The industry was growing rapidly in 1952 until it ran into trouble with low prices. Early in May, broilers retailed in New York for 29 cents a pound, or one cent under the 30-cent average of 1939, when Ford cars were selling for $600, good shirts for $2, and other things proportionately.

Despite this crash, the broiler industry deserves further growth in Alabama, and in the nation, even though national production this year is about four times that of 10 years ago. He who sticks to broilers and is an efficient producer should make money.

Community Spirit At Work

Farm families in 32 Marshall County communities are mighty busy people these days. With the job of getting crops in shape and caring for their livestock, they have their hands pretty full. But in addition to carrying on their own work schedules, these farmers, their wives, and children are taking an active part in community development. Each club is intent on winning some of the $1,000 in prize money which community spirited business men have put up for the top four clubs at the end of the contest year.

Scoring will be made on such points as attendance at club meetings, progress in community development, progress in agriculture and homemaking, and planning and carrying out a system of better farm living with more income from the farm.

At center, Mrs. J. W. Cherry, of the Hustleville Community Club, gets the morning mail from her newly improved mailbox. In this community the farm people have cooperated 100 per cent in improving every mailbox in their area. There are around 75 families represented in the Hustleville Community Club.

Quality Sets The Price

Cotton Care From Boll To Bale

By O. N. ANDREWS
A.P.I. Extension Cotton Improvement Specialist

THE way cotton is handled from boll to bale may make the difference between profit and loss on your 1952 cotton crop. If the grade is lowered from middling to low middling by careless handling, picking, and ginning, the value may be lowered $25 to $40 a bale.

Here are a few suggestions that may help you produce more middling bales in 1952:

1. Control cotton insects late in the season to protect bolls. Boll weevil and aphid damage often causes spots and stains that lower grade.

2. If cotton is very rank, defoliate leaves with chemicals to reduce boll rot and make cotton open up fast. This also reduces insect infestation which may cause lower grades. If cotton is to be harvested with mechanical pickers, defoliation is a "must."

3. Start picking when bolls are open wide. Picking green cotton and cracked bolls often lowers the grade. Leaving cotton in the field too long also lowers the grade.

4. Pick clean. It is better to keep trash out of the cotton than to depend on the gin removing it, even though many gins are now equipped to do a good job.

5. Take dry cotton to the gin. If cotton must be picked when it is damp, spread it in the sun for at least four hours before taking it to the gin. If damp cotton is carried to the gin, be sure the gin is equipped with good driers. And be sure to tell the ginner about the condition so he can do a better job.

6. Do not mix clean, white cotton with trashy or stained cotton.

7. Try not to gin behind a bale of trashy, dirty, or wet cotton.

8. Keep a check on your harvesting and ginning practices by getting your cotton classed. Members of one-variety cotton improvement associations should ask their ginner or warehouseman to send a sample from every bale to the classing office for free government classification. The classing office will mail the grower a green classing card showing grade, staple length and gin preparation on every sample classed. These cards are helpful in marketing cotton because the information listed on the card will enable the grower to know exactly what he has to sell. Lending agencies will accept these cards in making government loans.

Farmers who are not in a cotton improvement association may get cotton classed by paying a small fee.

Alabama's 1951 cotton crop had the highest grade index of any state in the Southeast. Middling white grade should be the goal of every cotton grower in 1952.

More Good Pigs

Crenshaw Local Leader Starts 4-H Pig Chain

THE Vidette 4-H Club in Crenshaw County now has a pig chain. And credit for this progressive step goes to the club's local leader, Mrs. Lydia Byrd.

Mrs. Byrd, who has been working with the Vidette Club boys for 16 years, has long believed that "her boys" deserved a chance to get into the hog business on a sound basis with some purebred hog projects. But the right opportunity never seemed to come along —until this spring—when Mrs. Byrd decided the time for action had arrived.

To start the Vidette Club boys off on the right track with a purebred pig chain, Mrs. Byrd bought two registered Duroc gilts which were placed with Guthrie Jeffcoat, of Luverne, Rt. 2, and Herbert Lee Rhodes, of Goshen, Rt. 1. The boys each agreed to return two gilt pigs from their first litters to the chain. These gilts will then be placed with other members of the club.

"After all of our boys get a chance to get a good pig project started, we'll then branch out and supply purebred pigs to boys in other Crenshaw clubs," says the active club leader.

As for the cost of starting the chain—Mrs. Byrd says she will be more than repaid by just having the opportunity of seeing the Vidette boys make a success of their new enterprise.

RIDING THE RANGE—W. A. (Bill) Womack, of Ashford, Alabama, Rt. 1, doesn't have to depend on a passing cowboy to deliver messages back to the house or farm headquarters. Pressing a button on his truck radio "mike" puts him in instant contact with any place in the country where telephones are available. Bill is shown at left with a group of Angus heifers, which he plans to use in crossbreeding commercial calves.

COMMUNICATION HEADQUARTERS—The den in the W. A. Womack home serves as the main broadcasting room for the communication system. Here, Mrs. Womack can communicate with Bill whether he is in the truck or at the seed plant. The radio set is located near the telephone so that Mrs. Womack can put the receiver of the telephone close to the radio speaker. This way Bill can talk over the telephone—via radio.

Modern Machinery Cuts Farm Labor Costs

"MODERN 'gadgets' save labor," is the opinion of W. A. (Bill) Womack, of Ashford, Rt. 1. And Bill is using enough of them to be sure his belief is correct.

Running five farms, managing a thriving seed business, keeping up with a large herd of beef cattle and serving as president of the Alabama Flying Farmers' Association would keep most any man pretty busy. And Bill is no exception. But he never stops looking for modern methods of stretching the amount of work he can do in one day.

One of Womack's problems in the operation of five farming units, scattered over a 12-mile area, is the task of "keeping in touch." As Mrs. Womack puts it, "If I had to go out and hunt Bill every time he had an important phone call, or was needed at the seed plant, I'd spend all of my time riding around looking for him—and then I probably couldn't find him." But Bill solved this bottleneck with a "modern gadget."

A couple of years ago he read about a radio system that could be installed in simple units in his home, office, and truck. The system seemed to be just what he needed, so he ordered the necessary equipment on a trial basis and has been using it ever since.

Bill's radio system consists of three sending and receiving sets. One is located in his home, another in the office of his seed plant, located about a mile from the house on one of the farms, and another is in his truck.

Womack says having a radio in his truck is just like having a telephone staked out on each one of the 2,400 acres of the farms. No matter where he might be, on any one of the five units, he is within instant contact, with his home, or office phone—via radio. The truck radio is connected to the horn in such a way that whenever Bill leaves the truck to check on some of his cattle, all he needs to do is flip a switch. Then, when Mrs. Womack, or someone at the seed plant tries to contact him, the horn on the truck begins to blow. Workers on the farms say it's a common sight to see Bill "run for his truck" whenever he hears a horn blowing.

Having the radio system also simplifies the homemaking job for Mrs. Womack. She doesn't have to worry about keeping meals hot for Bill. She gets the meals prepared and ready to run into the stove, then when Bill calls in over the radio that he is leaving the barn, or heading in from the back pasture, she knows it's time to put the biscuits on.

Airplanes are another pet gadget with Bill Womack. He is a charter member of the Alabama Flying Farmers' Association and is serving his second term as president of the state group. Right now, he is putting all of his "gadgets" to work on the job of planning for the National Flying Farmers' Convention which is to be held in Auburn, in late August.

Although Womack uses every practical piece of farm machinery he can find, he still stays on the jump, working at top speed from daylight until after dark. He hasn't yet found a gadget that will add extra hours to the work day—but chances are that if such a machine is ever developed, you'll find one of the first models working at top speed on Bill Womack's farms.

CARING FOR HATCHING EGGS—In order to have eggs that will hatch well it is necessary to care for them properly. This is very important during hot weather because of the rapid deterioration of eggs. To safeguard your hatching eggs, collect them at least three times daily. Use good nests and good housing so that clean eggs can be produced. Quickly cool the eggs to 50 degrees and hold them at this temperature in a moist place. If refrigeration is not available, store eggs in a cellar or basement. Cool eggs overnight in wire baskets before placing them in cases. Deliver eggs to the hatchery twice each week in the summer and at least weekly in the cooler months.

PACKING EGGS—After eggs have been sorted according to their size and quality, pack them, large ends up, in cases or cartons. The large end contains the air cell. When an egg is packed with the large end down, weight of the egg on the air cell expands it along the shell membrane. Eggs candled after being packed with the large end down are graded lower than those packed with the large end up.

LICE CONTROL—Recent research shows that one per cent Lindane dust, applied at the rate of three pounds per 1,000 square feet, effectively controlled lice in one application. When applied as a vapor from an automatic vaporizer, Lindane also gave effective control. In this test the chemical was used at the rate of one gram per 20,000 cubic feet of air space per day for 14 days.

A Fur Farm - - Something New In Alabama

A chinchilla farm right here in Alabama? That's right. R. W. Caylor, near Union Springs, is raising the expensive little animals in an underground house in his backyard.

His business never ceases to amaze folks from near and far, most of whom had never seen chinchillas until he began raising them seven years ago.

Chinchillas, perhaps you may not know, are highly valued for their pearly-gray fur, so fine and silken that it's hard to know when you're touching it. For untold centuries the royal robes of the Incas of Peru and Bolivia were made from this luxurious fur. When these countries were invaded by the Spaniards in the 16th Century, bales of chinchilla furs were shipped to the royalty of Europe.

R. W. Caylor and one of his chinchillas.

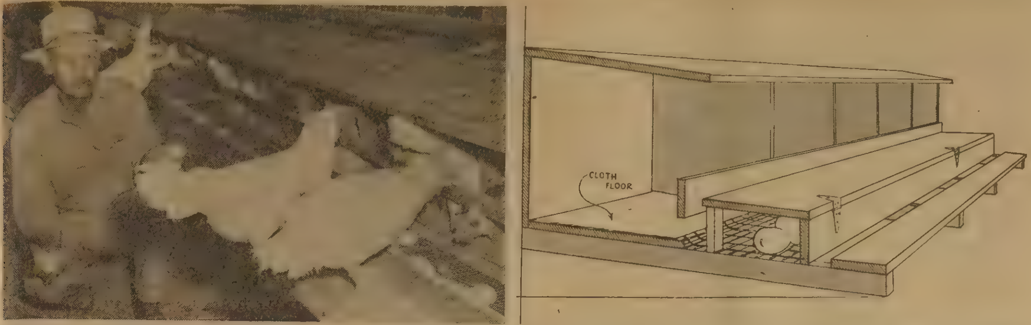
In time, overtrapping almost wiped out the chinchillas in South America. But an American engineer succeeded in bringing 11 of the animals to the U. S. in 1923. No more were ever brought to this country, and all of the 200,000 chinchillas now in the U. S. are descendants of the original 11.

Now to get back to Mr. Caylor. This retired businessman paid $1,000 for a single pair of the animals seven years ago. At first he wondered whether prime pelts could be produced in Alabama, for the climate here is far different from that of the mountainous sections of South America. But after taking two blue ribbons in national competition, his fears were quelled.

From the original pair Mr. Caylor has built up his herd to 46 animals worth over $34,000 and has sold 12 additional pairs for $12,500.

There is little likelihood of a price slump because U. S. growers feel that a million of the animals will be needed as breeders before enough pelts can be produced to take care of the demand. Incidently, pelts (now usually coming only from animals that die) sell for $100—and 140 are needed for a coat!

Mr. Caylor feeds his chinchillas Johnson grass hay, alfalfa pellets, and a tonic worked out by a Union Springs druggist. The room in which the animals live is almost entirely underground and the temperature is kept under 70 degrees.



H. J. Pierce attributes much of the success he's had with his commercial egg business to the practical nest system he uses. He is shown at left with a group of his high-producing leghorn hens. They appear to be making good use of the nests which the Albertville, Rt. 2, poultryman designed and built. At right is a diagram of a section of the nests. The floor of the nests is covered with tightly stretched cloth which helps cut down on the number of broken and cracked eggs. And the floor is slanted so that the eggs roll into a covered egg rack where they cool quickly and can be conveniently gathered.

Pigs And Poultry Go Well Together On Sand Mountain Farm

BACON and eggs, America's favorite breakfast, is also the favorite farming enterprise for Sand Mountain Farmer H. J. Pierce.

He has been growing hogs for the bacon end of the breakfast menu for a number of years and last year added the eggs to his farm income.

One of the first producers in the commercial egg business which was started at Albertville last year, Pierce began selling eggs from a flock of 600 hens. This year he's increased his flock to 3,000 pullets which are now nearing full production.

Like most new producers, he is gradually changing his production system as he learns the "ins and outs" of the business. And one of the first lessons the Albertville, Rt. 2, poultryman learned was that growing out pullets on range adds much to the productive life of the birds. The 600 layers he had last year were raised on range with plenty of green grazing. "And those birds paid a profit of around $4 each," Pierce says. His experience in growing out pullets is that birds grown on range grow off better and make healthier layers.

Continuous production of clean, high quality eggs is a steady problem with all producers, but Pierce has successfully turned his talent with hammer and saw loose on this job. He has designed a home style nest that reduces the number of dirty, cracked, and broken eggs. The Pierce-style nests have a sloping floor, covered with tightly stretched cloth which allows the eggs to roll into an egg rack. The top of the rack, or bin, has a convenient hinged lid which makes egg gathering a simple job. The bottom of the rack is covered with one by two-inch welded wire fabric which allows air to circulate around the eggs, thus cooling them rapidly. The egg rack also reduces the amount of labor required in gathering the eggs.

A trough made of three-inch angle iron serves as a watering system in Pierce's poultry houses. A continuous trickle of water down the trough insures the hens of an ever-fresh water supply. The sloping trough is also easy to clean.

Litter from poultry houses, an important by-product in any poultry operation, is used to good advantage by Pierce. He grows 65 acres of corn, most of which is used as a grain feed for the hens. And the poultry compost, along with ample amounts of commercial fertilizer, boosts his hybrid corn yield.

Pierce keeps six sows and uses his spring litters to hog off early hybrid corn. The second crop of shotes also goes to market direct from the corn field.

Since home grown grain is the backbone of the Marshall County poultryman's farming system, weather conditions during the crop season are of vital importance. Dry weather took a heavy toll of Pierce's corn yield last year and the damage has been severe again this summer. Pierce is considering the possibility of irrigating some of his corn within the next several years.

Pierce is utilizing his electrical talent to build a storage area for his eggs. He is equipping part of the basement of his home with a homemade air conditioning unit composed of a fan which pulls air through a moist filter. Eggs will be stored in this cool, moist room until picked up by the route man.

Although farm prices for eggs and pork hit seasonal variations, Mr. Pierce likes his present farming system. As he puts it, "Prices change, but there is one thing you can be fairly certain of and that is the fact that folks are going to keep on eating their favorite breakfast of bacon and eggs."

Give special attention to pullets still on range. Be sure that plenty of shade, good feed, and fresh, cool water are available for pullets at all times. Crowding pullets into a small shaded area is as bad as crowding them in a house. Cannibalism may be started in this way.

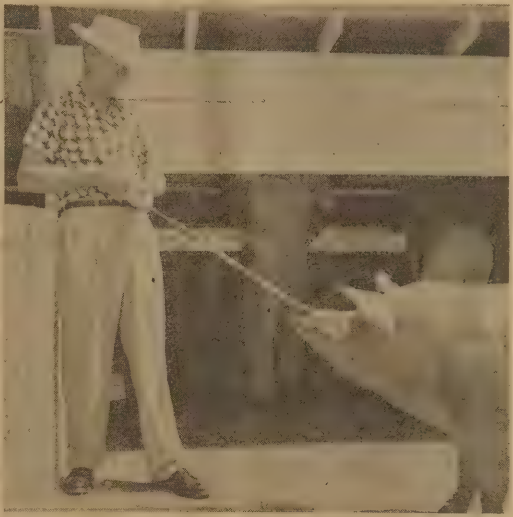
Cleaning up rotten fruit and mummies under peach trees after harvest may help to reduce disease and insect troubles next year. Brown rot and worms will be carried over on these fruits if they are left under the trees. It is best to pick them up as soon as possible after harvest, haul them completely out of the orchard, pour kerosene over them and burn.

Hold That Husky Hog!

HOGS are smarter than most people think. In fact, they have so much sense, or else, are so ornery that they won't cooperate with people.

Ever try to lead a hog? A mule has just enough sense to follow a man so he spends his life at work! But a hog—well that's a different story.

The device, demonstrated at right, capitalizes on the fact that a hog has too much sense to cooperate with people. Slip the noose over his snout, pull it taut, and the hog—no matter what his size or weight—will immediately pull against you. You can quietly tie him to a tree or post and while he's pulling back, refusing to cooperate, one man alone can castrate, vaccinate, or cut the tusks from the biggest and meanest old boar or sow.



The tool is called a "hog holder." You can buy one from any livestock supply house or, if you prefer, your county agent can advise you on how to make a very good homemade one.

Mapping Out Grazing Areas

MALCOLM McMILLAN, trustee and trust officer, McMillan Trust Company; County Agent F. A. Rew; Travis Lambeth, secretary-treasurer, McMillan Trust Grazing Area No. 1, and W. W. Cook, forester in charge of grazing areas, T. R. Miller Mill Company, study aerial maps of woodland grazing areas in Escambia County. Much partially wooded land in this section is producing timber and beef as a result of the cooperative grazing area associations that have been formed in the county.

Lumbermen And Livestockmen Join Forces

Escambia Cattlemen Solve Stock Law Problem

EVER since the days of General Andrew Jackson's fight with the Creek Indians in 1813, the land along the Conecuh River in South Alabama has been known as a lush grazing area.

During the Creek war General Jackson sent an officer into the Conecuh River area to find grazing land for cattle to supply his armies. The officer reported back that the grazing was good—and Jackson's livestock made good use of it.

Later on, farmers began grazing their cattle on the native grasses of the river bottoms. By 1951 hundreds of farmers were letting their cattle range on the vast unfenced woods-grazing lands. Many farmers received their entire income from cattle grown on the areas.

Then a state-wide stock law threatened to put many of these cattlemen out of business. The law provided that all cattle must be confined within fenced areas. This meant that farmers who had been letting their cattle graze on open land would either have to put up fences or get rid of their cattle.

To many of them, fencing costs were prohibitive. And, too, they did not own the land and could not put up fences on someone else's property.

However, the picture wasn't as dark as it seemed. Officials of the T. R. Miller Mill Company and the McMillan Trust, who together own 135,000 acres of woods-grazing lands in Escambia County, were eager to help the farmers find a solution.

Ed Leigh McMillan, president of T. R. Miller Mill Company, with the help of County Agent F. A. Rew, worked out a plan whereby farmers could still use the grazing areas without having to spend hundreds of dollars to put up fences. Under the agreement both the lumber company and the farmers are profiting.

The landowners, T. R. Miller Mill Company and McMillan Trust Company, agreed to furnish posts and wire to fence the grazing areas. The farmers can either put up the fence themselves or the fence will be built by some private contractor. In either case, the farmer doesn't have to make any cash outlay at the beginning.

In each grazing area a cooperative association is formed and a group of officers elected to transact the business of the co-op. The officers deal directly with landowners.

A typical association is the Holmesville Area Cattlemen's Association. This area consists of 10,160 acres of woods-grazing land, with approximately 75 farmers grazing 450 cows. Twenty-seven miles of fence was used in enclosing the area. A private contractor is building the fence at a labor cost of $50 per mile. Material will cost about $250 per mile.

Under the leasing agreement, fencing costs will be paid off at the rate of $2.50 per animal annually until the landowners have been repaid. In the Holmesville Area all fencing costs will be paid off in about six years. No charges will be made for family milk cows.

However, in some of the areas it will take only four years at this rate to pay for fencing. But each farmer will continue to pay $2.50 per animal per year until all fencing costs in the 10 grazing areas have been paid off.

The 10 grazing areas range from 1,280 acres in the Maddox Farm Area to 10,160 acres in the Holmesville Area.

Officers of each area association are responsible for collecting fencing fees from each farmer and paying them to the lumber company. No charge is made for grazing and as soon as all fencing costs are repaid, farmers can continue to graze their cattle at no cost.

Under the leasing agreement, neither the landowner nor the farmer accepts any responsibility for the other's property. The farmer will help to prevent forest fires or other damage to property; the companies are not responsible in any way for the cattle. However, each party is expected to exercise normal care with the other's property.

"This plan should be of mutual benefit to our lands and the farmer," says Malcolm McMillan, trustee and trust officer of the McMillan Trust. "Thousands of acres of forests that have good grass stands can still be turned into beef by farmers. And the cattle certainly will not harm our forests."

"The board of directors of each association is expected to see that land is not overgrazed," explains County Agent Rew. "But in case of overgrazing, the landowners are reserving some areas for emergency use."

When all fencing costs are paid the fences will belong solely to the lumber companies, but farmers will be allowed to continue grazing their cattle on the areas at no cost.

Farm leaders believe this agreement will lead to many similiar operations. Hundreds of large estates have large grazing areas that are not being utilized at present. But with proper management these areas could support thousands of cattle.

WINTER legumes such as vetch, lupine, crimson clover, or burr clover, have given good results in peach, apple, and pecan orchards. They add organic matter and nitrogen to the soil when turned under in the spring, and do not compete with the trees for moisture and plant nutrients through the summer months.

THE early planted sweetpotato crop will probably make more money if dug in August than if left until later, especially if no storage space is available. Prices at this time of the year are usually very good but drop off when the heavy digging begins.

GOOD hardwood trees are commanding high prices as veneer logs. They are selling at a price higher than pines and should be marked carefully. The spread between hardwood stumpage and delivered logs gives farmers good wages for off-season logging.

A good, thrifty, shoaty pig is the best and most efficient four-footed corn harvester yet invented or discovered. One experiment station report showed that when corn is harvested by snapping it from the standing stalk with hired labor, 6.7 man hours of labor were required per acre. Mechanical pickers required three hours per acre. Pigs only required one hour of human labor per acre in harvesting corn.

NOW is the time to take good advantage of such temporary grazing crops as Johnson grass, Sudan grass, sericea, and kudzu. A lot of cattlemen are using these crops to good advantage by allowing their permanent pasture to accumulate some excessive growth for fall and early winter grazing.

CONTINUE to do a good job of spraying the beef herd with some form of DDT and BHC. This will make the cows more comfortable, make them give more milk for their calves, make them go into the winter in better shape, and aid in the control of disease.

ONE good bream bait that is rapidly becoming popular is the yellow mealworm. This bait is probably the simplest of all bluegill baits to produce. The producer simply needs two or three five-gallon lard cans or similar containers in which he places wheat bran to a depth of five or six inches along with 200 to 300 adult mealworms. Two or three Irish or sweetpotatoes will supply moisture. A piece of cardboard on top of the bran will tend to concentrate the larva for fishing. The larva will be present during the fall and winter months when other baits are comparatively scarce.

ALFALFA is the king of legume hay crops It is also an excellent grazing crop—particularly for hogs. It can be grown on many farms in practically every Alabama county if the right production practices are followed. If land has not already been selected and preparation under way, it will be better to plant the land to a winter legume this fall and delay seeding of alfalfa until the fall of 1953. A well prepared seedbed is a must for successful alfalfa.

More Profit From Contented Hogs

Keep Hogs Cool, Happy

By G. B. PHILLIPS
A.P.I. Extension Hog Specialist

HOGS may not have a conscience, but they certainly do have a strong desire for contentment.

They enjoy and appreciate contentment so much that they grow and fatten faster when they are contented.

And it doesn't take much to satisfy a hog during the summer. Not unlike a great many human beings, all he needs is plenty to eat and drink and a place to keep cool.

August heat is hard on hogs. Hot shotes lose their appetites. His money-making appetite is the big attribute that makes a pig change feed into ham, pork chops, and bacon and puts money in the farmer's pocket.

Cool hogs grow and fatten faster. Water and shade are both vitally necessary to keep hogs cool—to help keep them contented.

Hogs drink more water than you'd think. Depending on size and feeds, they need from one-half to one and one-half gallons per hundredweight daily. More hogs probably suffer from lack of water than from lack of feed. If clean, free-running streams are not close to the corn field or feedlot, a barrel, some boards, and a little elbow grease makes an automatic waterer that beats the old-fashioned trough. County agents can give specific information on construction.

Hogs can't sweat. And their temperatures may go up to 105°F on a hot August day. Shade trees provide good protection from the sun. If the corn field has no shade trees, any one of a dozen different kinds of "bush arbor" portable shade is good.

The roof of hog shades should be four or five feet from the ground and the sides should be open to permit ventilation.

Clean wallows are good, but stagnant, nasty, unclean wallows do more harm than good. Hogs cool off faster when they can lie in water, on wet ground, or on a wet floor, but don't let them use undrained, marshy land that is usually parasite ridden.

Calhoun's Community Service Project

Members of the Fish Hatchery Home Demonstration Club in Calhoun County are up-to-date on the techniques of home nursing. And 11 of the women have recently received certificates for completing a Red Cross Home Nursing Course. Above, Miss Valerie Parker, instructor for the course, demonstrates the proper method of applying a hot compress to an injured knee. The patient is Mrs. Norman Gannon. Watching the process are Mrs. Alvin Waldrep, left, and Mrs. Troy O'Kelley, right, all of Eastaboga, Rt. 1.

PROFITABLE SWAP—Mrs. Matt Horne, of Goodwater, Rt. 1, made a deal with her husband recently that she says was one of the best "trades" she ever made. The Hatchet Creek Home Demonstration Club member didn't have enough storage space in her home, so she began dropping gentle hints about "needing a new wardrobe or chest of drawers." Mr. Horne convinced her that she would be much better off to put the money into a power saw so that he could build all of the cabinets she needed. Doubtfully, the homemaker agreed. But she's been all smiles ever since her husband completed his end of the bargain. Mrs. Horne is shown above removing a dress from one of the closets Mr. Horne built for her. Mrs. Horne says, "I've got a whole wall of storage space, including built-in drawers, linen closets, and clothes closets. Besides that" boasts the Clay County housewife, "we've still got a mighty good saw."

Grade A Milk Base Changes Call For Revised Breeding Plans

By PETE B. TURNHAM, Assistant Dairyman
A.P.I. Extension Service

ALABAMA dairymen are making plans for a readjustment in their breeding programs this fall and winter. The big factor behind this change is the new base building period for grade A milk. The base period for milk this year will be from Sept. 1 through Feb. 28, instead of Oct. 1 through Mar. 31 as was the case last year. Therefore, farmers will start sending the bulk of their milk to market in September rather than in October.

To breed cows so they will calve at the proper time next year will require much planning now. Records will have to be checked on each individual animal to see when she last calved. Cows should be bred in October and November so they will calve next August.

Changes in a breeding program make it necessary, in many cases, to let cows skip several heat periods before the proper breeding time. The question often arises as to whether this will cause poor conception. Research has proven that this will not cause poor breeding results.

Artificial breeding technicians all over Alabama are cooperating in making this readjustment in breeding dairy cows. With the cooperation of everyone, including old bossy herself, the job should be accomplished so that markets can be supplied with milk when they need it most.

In breeding cows at any season, best results will be obtained if a few simple rules are followed:

1. Wait at least 60 days after calving to breed the cow again.
2. Watch cows twice a day to see if they are in heat.
3. If cows fail to settle on three services, have them examined by a veterinarian.
4. Turn cows dry at least six weeks before calving.
5. Use artificial breeding, if available, to prevent the spread of diseases and to increase herd production.

RECIPE FOR AUGUST

DURING the hot days of August the homemaker can make meals for her family more tempting and refreshing by planning foods which are light, colorful, and cooling. Desserts are an important part of the meal, but often are unwelcome because they are served at the end of a heavy meal. A good dessert, and one which can be prepared well in advance of meal time, is "Snow Pudding."

SNOW PUDDING

1 T. gelatin
¼ c. cold water
1 c. sugar
1 c. boiling water
¼ c. lemon juice
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Soak gelatin in cold water. Dissolve in boiling water, add sugar and lemon juice. Stir until gelatin is dissolved. Chill. When it begins to thicken, beat with egg beater. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Beat until nearly set. Chill and serve with custard sauce.

CUSTARD SAUCE

3 egg yolks
¼ c. sugar
⅛ t. salt
1½ c. milk
1 t. vanilla extract

Mix beaten egg yolks, sugar, and salt in top of double boiler. Add in milk gradually (stirring constantly). Cook mixture over hot water until it thickens and will coat a spoon. Remove at once from heat and set pan in cold water. Slowly beat in vanilla. Cool slightly.

16,000 Hungry Mouths To Feed

To most observers the task of keeping 16,000 fast growing broilers full of feed would appear to be a continuous job. But that's not the case with C. E. Hiller of Arley. He uses a feeding system that requires only two hours work per day. Each morning, and again in the afternoon, he makes the round in his broiler house filling the 4 by 8-feet feed troughs which span the length of his poultry house. Hiller says it takes about 20 sacks of feed per day for the birds now, but when they get up to six or seven weeks of age they will peck away 30 sacks per day. The birds shown above are five weeks old and weigh slightly under a pound each. Hiller's broiler house, which measures 322 by 32 feet, is the largest broiler house in Winston County and one of the largest in the state.

New Hog Breed At A. P. I.

THE stretchy, deep-sided boar shown at right is the first of a new breed of hogs now in use in the A.P.I. herd at Auburn. He is a purebred Danish Landrace boar, and is probably the first purebred, registered boar of this breed to come to Alabama.

In 1934, the U.S.D.A. imported 23 animals of this breed from Denmark under the strict agreement that they would be used only in crossing with other breeds; that they would not be multiplied as a purebreed. For many, many years, Danish farmers had developed the strain for a high percentage of the four primal cuts, for prolificacy, and for economical feed consumption per 100 pounds of gain.

From this breeding program have emerged many strains of inbred hogs such as Montana No. 1, Minnesota No. 1, Beltsville No. 1, and several others. Quite a number of these crosses or strains have come into Alabama.

Only recently, the Danish government has modified the original agreement by permitting colleges to obtain purebred Landrace foundation stock. The boar shown here and a purebred sow are now being used in a breeding experiment at Auburn by Dr. C. D. Squiers, A.P.I. associate animal breeder.

It is hoped that in the near future farmer-producers may be able to obtain foundation stock of this breed to try out. The college at Auburn has none for sale now.

Grow winter legumes such as vetch, Austrian peas, and crimson clover to turn in the spring for soil improvements. It is still one of our best soils practices. When you grow winter legumes, you have nitrogen in the spring—when you need it.

Honors For Prof. Eaton

Professor W. H. Eaton of the A.P.I. Dairy Department had no idea what was coming when he was reminded to attend the Central Alabama Dairy Herd Improvement Association's annual meeting held at Dairyland Farms near Auburn recently. But each member of the association knew, and was proud, of the special ceremony that was to take place at the event. Long known as an exponent of dairying in general and Jersey cattle in particular, Prof. Eaton has been a member of the dairy department at A.P.I. for 34 years. Recognizing the importance of his contribution to the dairy industry, the Central Alabama dairy group presented him with a framed letter of commendation at their annual meeting. He is shown at left above receiving the letter from retiring Association President W. B. Nickerson of Jackson's Gap.

Many new crops are exciting interest. Rescue grass is one of the most popular. At the present time, it looks good and is certainly worth a trial. For grazing and seed production—seed with crimson clover, vetch, or other legumes. Sub-clover and button clover are being tried by quite a number of people in Alabama.

Plant Recommended Alfalfa Varieties For Best Results

VARIETIES of alfalfa that have proved to be satisfactory for use in Alabama are Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma Common, Buffalo, Atlantic, Williamsburg and Narragansett. According to Agronomist D. G. Sturkie of the A.P.I. Agricultural Experiment Station, these varieties have always been winter hardy and have produced yields at or near the top in all state tests.

Varieties belonging to the non-hardy group are frequently winter-killed in Alabama. Farmers are warned to be very cautious in planting these varieties.

In the non-hardy group are Arizona Common, California Common, Chilean, and Peruvian. They grow rapidly, but are not winter hardy in northern Alabama. Therefore, they are not recommended for use above the middle of the state. Indian and African, two new varieties which belong in this group, are even less hardy. They should not be planted even in South Alabama.

Alabama Average. While the nation's livestock producers were saving nine per cent fewer pigs last spring than the year before, Alabama actually had a one per cent increase. However, the selling of sows due to corn shortage during the last few months shows up in the fact that the pig crop report estimates that Alabama is exactly average with the nation in that nine per cent fewer sows will farrow this fall.

Research Results

FLIES TAKE PART OF CATTLE PROFITS. Results show that these pests can be controlled on beef cattle by spraying with DDT at the rate of 25 pounds of 50 per cent wettable powder per 100 gallons of water. Methoxychlor at the same rate is recommended for spraying dairy cattle. In either case, barns should be cleaned to prevent fly breeding, and sprayed with DDT, or methoxychlor for dairy barns, using 50 pounds of 50 per cent wettable powder per 100 gallons of water.

VETCH VARIETIES that are well adapted throughout the state are woolypod, and hairy or smooth. Common, or Williamette, and Monantha vetches are adapted to southern Alabama. During the last three years, adapted varieties of vetch have produced more green manure than either winter peas or lupines at the Plant Breeding Unit in Tallassee. Lupine stands were very poor during the last two years because of cold weather and diseases.

YIELDS OF FORAGE PRODUCED BY OATS before March 1 in experiments at the Piedmont and Lower Coastal Plain Substations were increased by all rates of nitrogen up to 80 pounds applied at planting. These tests were run in the winter of 1951-52. The average yield of dry forage was increased from 328 pounds without nitrogen to 1,573 pounds per acre with 80 pounds of nitrogen. This is an average increase of about 15 pounds of dry forage per pound of nitrogen, or a cost of about $20 per ton, using 15-cent nitrogen.

ALFALFA REQUIRES BORON in addition to high rates of lime and fertilizer for highest yields and quality, according to the results of tests conducted in all sections of Alabama. Borax must be added each year at the rate of about 20 pounds per acre. This can be done by applying 900 pounds of 0-12-20 fertilizer containing borax. Farmers who are following this practice are usually successful with alfalfa.

BY TURNING UNDER A WINTER LEGUME, the average yield of seven fall vegetable crops that received no nitrogen was increased 163 per cent in studies extending over a nine-year period. The value of this increase was about $104 per acre. Summer vegetables were grown between turning of the legume and planting of fall vegetables. The increased value of the crop of summer vegetables was $229. The winter legume increased the value of both fall and summer vegetables about $333 per acre.

PINE PLANTATIONS can and should be thinned when trees reach fence post or pulpwood size. Thinnings provide early returns in cash or materials to the owner and help to concentrate growth on best trees for future harvest. Thinned plots in the Auburn Plantations now have more saw-timber size trees than unthinned plots.

SMALL AMOUNTS OF SWEETPOTATOES may be harvested for home use during late summer and early fall without seriously reducing the yield. By grabbling weekly five pounds of the largest potatoes from early set plants on land that normally produces 275 bushels per acre, the yield was reduced slightly less than five per cent.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Talking to Sheriff Luther Kendrick Tuesday afternoon and his opinion is that, as usual, the county will vote the Democratic ticket in November. Truth is we just can't tell what Republican is running for what office. By the time we make up a list of Republican candidates to publish for your information—the list has been changed. Right now, we don't believe anyone knows just who is going to make the race. Of course the Democratic candidates were chosen by the voice of the people in the May and June Primaries.

Looks like no one is going to stick his, or her, neck out in the City races. As yet we have heard of no one announcing for the office of Mayor or Aldermen. Too long the general public has picked at public officials and found fault with them, criticized them, and in lots of instances called them thieves and crooks. Now, just for the love of being an office holder, a busy businessman isn't going to sacrifice himself to devote his time and money to a thankless citizenry.

Bob Taber's new Office and Studio's for WKLF are nearing completion on the Maplesville Highway just in back of his present control house. Bob's going to hold open house out there when it is completed and we're trying to talk him into serving refreshments. It will be modern in every way and combine his control rooms, broadcasting studios, business offices and of course the "Boss" office.

Clark Headley was in the first of the week and wrote our stroy about the coming Fox hunt. That's Clark's baby. While we were in conversation he said anyone wanting to see two hundred fox hounds turned loose at the same time to be on hand at the hunt this year. They are planning the biggest hunt yet. Bob Windham, at the City Grill has agreed to open early to serve breakfast to all who are hungry. That's for those following the hounds—not the hounds.

Little Dorothy had been praying for a baby sister. Her mother, while reading the paper, exclaimed: "I see Mrs. Smith has a little daughter."

"How do yu know that, Mamma?" Doroty inquired.

"It says in the paper, dear."

"Read to me."

Her m er read: "Born to Mr. and M Smith, a daughter."

Dor th thought a moment and then a: 'I know what I'm going t I'm going to stop praying an in advertising."

SOCIAL LEADERSHIP COURSE AT CCHS

For the benefit of all civic leaders concerned with community recreation for both youth and adults, a Social Recreation Leadership course will be conducted at Chilton County High School from Sept. 22-25. Sponsored by the Chilton County Board of Education, the course will be directed by Supt. J. H. Boockholdt.

This special course is open without charge to members of the following agencies: 4-H Club and Extension groups, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, churches, PTA's, and veteran organizations. There will be both afternoon and evening classes.

Miss Helen Dauncey, former instructor of Smith College and director of Health Education at the Boston YWCA, is being sent by the National Recreation Association to teach the course. She comes highly recommended by both national and sate groups, particularly by the people who took the course at Monroeville.

Revival To Begin At Mt. Nebo

The revival will begin at the Mt. Nebo Methodist church Sunday afternoon with services at 3:00. There will be no services that night but services will be every other night of the week at 7:30. Only night services will be conducted. Rev. M. K. Vickers will bring the messages. The public is cordially invited.

To All Patrons Of Local Post Office

On account of the large volume of mail that has to be returned to the sender for the reason of insufficient address, it is considered advisable to remind the public of the necessity of properly addressing mail matter to insure delivery to the addressee and to avoid delay in delivery.

All mail matter should be addressed with either postoffice box number, street and number of rural route, to insure that delivery will be made. Letters and other mail matter that does not have complete address as stated above do not receive directory service but are placed in general delivery unless the addressee is known by the distribbutor. The volume of mail received is so large that time cannot be taken to give directory service to all mail. If letters and other mail is addressed to a definite route or street number or box and the carrier on the route to which the adter is addressed states that the addressee is unknown, the mail is returned immediately, therefore it can be readily understood that mailers should ascertain a definite address of patrons to whom statements and other mail matter is to be mailed.

The cooperation of the general public is earnestly solicited in the matter of having all mail addressed completely so as to avoid delay in delivery or return to sender on account of insufficient address.

Howard Boockholdt Hears Of Peach Queen In New York

The group that I am working with here is a group of rural school people working on rural school problems. They come from most of the states and about 6 foreign countries. You can imagine my delightful surprise when I saw on the bulletin board of one of the largest educational institutions in the world the picture of Chilton's own Peach Queen, Peggy Poole.

Incidentally, on the picture with Peggy was Mr. Allen Kline, President of the American Farm Bureau. Mr. Kline appeared on our program yesterday. In an informal discussion following the program and the luncheon in his honor, Mr. Kline asked me to convey his best wishes to Chilton County and his congratulations for producing such wonderful peaches. He says the peaches were about the best he had ever tasted. I agreed with him, of course. He also sends greetings to Peggy, of whom he had some very nice things to say.

Sunbeam Rally Met Sunday

There were three churches represented: West End, 6 Sunbeams; Milton, 4 Sunbeams; Verbena, 3 Sunbeams. We welcomed 4 visitors from West End and Milton.

Associational Sunbeam leader, Mrs. J. W. Lockhart, assisted by Rev. R. E. Wilkins, led the children in an interesting program which was enjoyed by all.

We only regret that more churches were not represented, bringing in more children to be with us, for we feel they missed a blessing by not being in that meeting. Lite time friends can seldom be made through one brief intrdouction, they are made through repeated contacts. So lets hasten the time when we can meet again.

He who gives a child a book, gives that child a sweeping look;
Give that child a vision wide, as the skies where stars abide.
Give that child a dream to dream
sunlit ways that flash and gleam
Yes, give that child your best.

Billingsley Canning Plant Closes

Tuesday, August 19, 1952 will be the last regular opening day the Billingsley Community Canning Plant will operate this Summer. Anyone wishing to can after this date should make special arrangements with Mr. L. C. Stanfield, Vocational Agriculture Teacher.

Requirements For Entering School

The Alabama School law states that a child must be six years of age on or before the first day of October to enter school at the beginning of the fall term. Children who are entering school for the first time this year will be required to have a birth certificate.

Beginners are also required to have certain inoculations prior to entering. Let me urge parents of all beginners to see that their children are ready by the first day of school. The County Health Officer or any private physician will give the necessary shots. Parents will be given a statement by the doctor which can be presented to the teacher.

We are expecting the same fine co-operation from parents this year as we have had in the past regarding this.

Revival Will Be Held At Eastview

A revival at the Eastview Congregational church, 3 miles east of Cooper, will be held starting August 17th, Sunday. Everyone is invited.

Registration Begins Noon Monday

DeRamus-Cumbie Vows Said Wednesday

MRS. JOE EDWIN CUMBIE

VERBENA, Ala., Aug 9—Miss Gladys Carolyn DeRamus became the bride of the Rev. Joe Edwin Cumbie of Dothan in an impressive ceremony Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the Verbena Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Thomas Barnett DeRamus of Verbena. Rev. Cumbie is the son of William Albert Cumbie of Dothan and Mrs. Wilmer Oscar Jenkins of Graceville, Fla.

The Rev. Carlton Preer of Selma officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Standards of white gladioli, lilies and carnations interspersed with branched cathedral candelabra holding white candles were used against the background of huckleberry and jade foliage.

The program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Gordon Robertson, of Clanton, pianist; Miss Louis Cherry of Dothan, violinist, and Mrs. Earl Ellis of Clanton, vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother. The bride's father, Col. DeRamus, is on overseas assignment. She wore a gown of Chantilly lace and satin. The fitted bodice of lace featured a sweetheart neckline and the long sleeves ended in lily points over the wrists. Her full skirt of white slipper satin was made with panels of lace forming the cathedral train. Her veil, fingertip length, was of illusion, attached to a halo of pearlized orange blossoms. She carriet a white satin Testament marked with a white orchid and showered with satin ribbons tied with fleur d'amour and stephanotis.

Honor attendants were Mrs. Thomas Barnett DeRamus, Jr., of Hopkinsville, Ky., and Miss Patsy Watlington of Mongomery, cousin of the bride.

They wore ballerina-length gowns of lilac net over white taffeta made with wide satin cumberbunds and looped bows. Their bouquets were nosegays of pom-pom asters, carnations, roses and daisy chrysanthemums in pastel shades. They wore halos of mathcing flowers in their hair.

Bridesmaids were Miss Roxanne Sheppard, and Miss Mary Ann DeRamus, cousins of the bride, both of Verbena. Their gowns were green net over white affeta. Miss Alice DeRamus, of Clanton, cousin of the bride, and Miss Patsy Seaborn, of Dothan, cousin of the groom. They wore gowns of yellow net over white taffeta. The attendants' boquets and halo were identical to the honor atendants.

William Cumbie, Jr., of Tallassee, served his brother as best man. Ushers were John DeRamus, Clanton, cousin of the bride; Edmund Gardien, Birmingham, cousin of the bride; the Rev. Hollis Messer of Verbena; the Rev. Harold Cumbie, Dothna, cousin of the groom; and the Rev. Ed Henne of Owassa.

Following the ceremony a reception in the bride's home, "Circlewood," was held.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. DeRamus wore a dress of mauve lace over taffeta with navy accessories and a corsage of talisman roses.

Mrs. Jenkins, mother of the groom, wore an aqua lace over taffeta dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

White gladioli, lilies, magnolia foliage and native greenry were used to decorate the garden. Hurricane lamps lined the drive to the house. The bride's table was centered with the tiered cake embossed with spun sugar orchids and topped with a white wedding bell.

Serving were Miss Alyce Jo Langston, Miss Hazel Messer, Miss Rebecca DeRamus, Miss Katherine Barton, Miss Peggy McCary, and Miss Julie Rhett Sheppard.

For their wedding trip, Mrs. Cumbie wore a brown faille suite with a feather trimmed cocoanut beige hat and dark brown accessories. She wore a white orchid corsage.

Rev. and Mrs. Cumbie will make thier home in the Methodist parsonage of Marvyn, Ala.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gardien, Miss Barbara Gardien, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey DeRamus, Miss Rebecca DeRamus, Mrs. Frank Boyd, Jr., and Mrs. James Barton, Mrs. H. E. WHO'S ZOO—ON THE HIGHWAY

DON'T BE A SHEEP. Following too closely will only lead to an accident. Leave plenty of room between your car and the car ahead.

The old and oft' used phrase, "Talk is cheap," surely was coined before the last hike in telephone rates.

Looks like they won't have to put out new contribution cans this Coming Easter for benefit of the crippled children. They never did bother to take the old one up this past Easter.

If the wonderful rains hadn't come when they did we'd be publishing a "Let's get Chilton County "Green" edition instead of a "Let's keep Chilton County Green" edition.

NO WATER—NO MELONS!

The annual watermelon Contest conducted by this newspaper is not going so good. Mr. R. R. Bamberg is the only Bibb County farmer that has entered a Watermelon to date. In fact Mr. Bamberg entered two watermelons. The last one brought in a few days ago only weighed 2 1-2 pounds. He didn't expect to win a prize with this small watermelon, but wanted to show us that he could grow them small as well as large. The watermelon he entered in the contest last week weighed 62 pounds.

The following rules will govern the contest this year

1. All watermelons entered in the contest must be grown in Bibb County.
2. The contest will close September 1.
3. The same person can win only one prize.
4. The first prize will be a three year subscription to The Centreville Press.
5. The second prize will be a two-year subscription to The Centreville Press.
6. The third prize will be a one-year subscription to The Centreville Press.—Centreville Press.

SPEED LIMITS DON'T STOP SPEEDING

The speed limits now in effect on Alabama highways by gubernatorial proclamation have not stopped speeding. That is evident by travel on any of our highways. If you stay within the speed allowed by law you'll be passed as if you were standing still: Speed limits are loudly endorsed by all of us, but too few of us practice what we preach. Most of us are prone to think that speed limits apply to the other fellow and not good drivers like us.

It is also evident that drivers operating their cars at absurdly slow speeds on the open highway are not only an inconvenience, but also a menace. Speed limits should work both ways.

In our opinion safety on our highways will come only when a high percentage of us who operate motor vehicles accept the facts and drive more sanely.—Evergreen Courant.

RIDING GOD'S COATTAILS

At the Republican convention a hired band played "Onward Christian Soldiers" at the mere mention of Gen. Eisenhower's name. The highlight of one convention demonstration was the appearance of men carrying placards: "God and MacArthur." The concluding statement of an impassioned Eisenhower-for-President speech here Wednesday night was: "If God be on our side who can be against us."

Now, we doubt very much that God is a Republican or a Democrat, pro-Eisenhower or pro-Stevenson.

The Christian Century recently had some pertinent remarks to make relative to this business of politicians, "always looking around for a coattail on which to ride into office," who are "leaping into platoons for the trailing garments of Divinity."

The Century reminds that there are many sincere Christians and Jews in political life, and they have a right to public expression of their views. "But," the magazine continues, "the churches have valid cause for complaint over the exploitation of religion for political ends . . . Too long this exploitation has been tolerated as just another peculiarity, like baby-kissing, of the politician on the prowl. But these times are too serious for that. Even more important, it is wrong to treat true faith in God as if it were something that is worn once in four years, like a campaign button. It is either far more than that, or it is an offense to heaven."

Thank goodness for John Sparkman's request that his church "not advertise the fact" that he is an active Methodist layman and an adult Bible class teacher in the Hamline Methodist Church in Washington, D. C.—Lee County Bulletin.

Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

It had been one of those rare mornings when everything was running smoothly around our house, when there had been no minor crisis of any kind. And because the morning had been pleasant, I was, without realizing it, half humming and half singing snatches of melody as I stirred up a bowl of corn bread batter for dinner.

The three-year-old came into the kitchen and stood silent for a moment. Then he said solemnly,

"Mother, I love you all the time, but I love you best when you have music in your mouth."

Music in your mouth! Who but a three-year-old could have thought of such a phrase?

Mothers with school age children in our neighborhood are all busy with their back-to-school sewing, and many of them have been having a good time exchanging patterns and ideas.

One expert seamstress suggests that a strip of colored cellophane tape be pasted on the sewing machine 5-8 inch from the needle as a guide for sewing seams. The tape saves a lot of basting and insures even seams, she says.

This same practical neighbor makes the top and bottom hems of all her plain curtains the same width. Then when the curtains begin to show wear, she simply reverses them.

Pleasant memory (after six months): the day a howling North wind brought below freezing temperatures to the state.

Our neighbor around the corner has a big box under her back stairs which she calls her "give-away" box. Into the carton goes clothes that her children have outgrown discarded toys and too-small shoes. Then when the Red Cross or some other charitable organization asks for clothes for needy families, she always has her contributions ready.

Her children like the box too—on rainy days they have a wonderful time dressing up in the assortment of garments they find in it.

Next time the recipe calls for melted choclate, here's a new trick to try: line the top of the double boiler with waxed paper and then put the choclate squares in. This will eliminate the unpleasant task of washing a chocolaty boiler, and it will also save the precious cholocate.

Now for a rich but mighty good desert, here's a chocolate favorite our neighbor around the corner recommends:

Melt four small chocolate almond bars over hot water. Then melt 30 marshmellows in 1-2 cup milk, using a double boiler. Combine the melted chocolate bars with the marshmellow mixture. Cool to room temperature. When cool, fold in two cups of whipped cream. Pour into pan which has been lined with graham cracker crumbs and chill in refrigerator before serving.

The man down the street, who watched helplessly as the sun dried up his garden, declares he wouldn't swap a dinner of peas, okra and tomatoes from his own garden for all the rich fancy deserts in the world!

Trap Vultures

Livestock producers who have been losing lambs, calves, and pigs to vultures can eliminate the birds by trapping and killing them. Plans for building a buzzard trap can be obtained through the local county agent.

YOUR Health

"Your Health" is presented by your physician as a health service of The Medical Association of the State of Alabama.

STUTTERING

Speech is one of the most powerful instruments in every day living. Yet, many parents because of lack of understanding are responsible for the development of speech defects in their children.

Stuttering is one of the most common speech defects. Children manifesting these symptoms should be carefully examined by a physician to rule out any physical malformation of the jaw, larynx, tongue, palate or nasal passages. If these organs are physically correct, the examinations must include a search for nutritional disorders or psychologic disturbances. These factors may be responsible for the child not using the speech apparatus properly so that he has difficulty with such letters as T or D, L or R.

Emotional confusion results from the impatience and reprimands of parents. When a child stutters the parent frequently hurries him to complete his sentence, supplies the word for his thought, and most often delays the correction of the defect by ignoring it with the hope that he will outgrow it.

These factors are important ones to avoid in the training of a child. Every effort should be made to relax the child to put him at ease, and to treat him as though no defect existed. Observe a child in solitude, singing or talking to a doll or dog, and you will observe that there is no stuttering. It is only when the tot is thrust into a position where he is exposed to ridicule by his playmates or impatience by his parents that the stuttering rises to a struggle.

Today, as never before, people are taught to overcome their handicaps; and meeting the challenge will yield a richer and fuller life. If your child has a speech defect, find out about it. Don't wait for him to outgrow it. Maybe he won't. Consult your physician for advice and treatment. By helping your child overcome the failing you will give to your home and society a normally adjusted individual.

Pond Weeds

Summer is an excellent time to get rid of pond weeds, such as cattails and water lillies. Use a strong ester type of 2,4-D on the exposed leaf surface. Repeat spray application when new growth appears.

Placing your pie tin in another a few sizes larger makes it easier to handle, doesn't break the edges of the crust, and serves to catch any juice that may boil out.

MORE LUNCH ROOM MONEY

Montgomery, Ala.—The Department of Education said last week that $7,232,590 was spent for food in school lunchrooms during the last school term.

That's $914,593 more than schools spent for their food the previous year according to the department.

The department said smaller quantities of food were donated to the schools by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Alabama Educators To Enjoy Second Annual Teachers Day

PLAN FOR TEACHERS DAY—Frank Grove, secretary of the Alabama Educational Association, is shown going over plans for the Second Annual Alabama Teachers Day which opens the Alabama State Fair on Monday, September 29, with Mrs. D. D. Black, Montgomery, president of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers (left), and Miss Mary Ruth Holleman, Birmingham, chairman of the Alabama Teachers Day Committee.

Alabama educators will celebrate the state's Second Annual Alabama Teachers' Day on Monday, September 29, when the Alabama State Fair opens in Birmingham.

Miss Mary Ruth Holleman, chairman of the Alabama Teachers Day Committee, said honored guests this year will be principals from both city and county school systems throughout the state who have served longest in their respective systems. Representatives must be members of the Alabama Educational Association, she said.

Inaugurated last year, Alabama Teachers Day has become a permanent part of the State Fair and will mark opening day celebrations each year.

R. H. McIntosh, general manager of the Alabama State Fair Authority, said the entire opening day will be dedcaited to teachers. They will assemble in Birmingham to spend a day and night, hotel lodgings being paid for by the State Fair. They also will be honored at a luncheon and barbecue. Climax of Teachers Day will come Monday night when the 108 principals will be presented with a Service To Alabama Youth Award. This award, in the form of a medallion, presented each year by the Birmingham News and Post-Herald.

W. J. Terry, State Superintendent of Education, has again accepted the honorary chairmanship of the Alabama Teachers Day Committee and has urged educational leaders to assist in the program.

Alabama Teachers Day is sponsored by the Birmingham Classroom Teachers Association through various local and state-wide educational groups. Assisting in enter- [illegible] P.-T. A. chapters and members of the retired teachers club of Birmingham.

Nominations of principals to the second annual affair are made by county and city school system superintendents. Sixty-se[illegible] county and 41 city eduactional [illegible]tems in Alabama are participatin[illegible] in the program.

As a Matter of Fact...

Out of all the newspaper and magazine columns I read, the ones I enjoy most are those that pack in a whole lot of facts — unrelated facts, but each one an interesting bit of information in itself.

These columns go something like this: "Did you know that humpback whales are addicted to snoring? That bees have been bred with red, brown, and buff-color eyes?

"Did you know that lead can be converted to gold — at a cost of $1,000,000 an ounce? That a 555-pound fat girl went on a diet and lost 401 pounds in 12 months? That a chrysanthemum has been developed that smells like a violet?"

From where I sit, maybe I'm a kind of "Johnny-one-note." My own columns always seem to revolve around one idea—a plea for us to make sure we respect the other fellow's rights—like the right to vote for your own choice or the right to enjoy a glass of beer now and then. I may not be in style, but I believe my one fact is worth repeating—and remembering!

Move To Ease Labor Shortage In South Alabama Fields

Montgomery, Ala.—A move to ease the critical labor shortage in South Alabama cototn fields next month by the use of farm labor from North Alabama has been announced by State Industrial Relations Director Joe L. Coleman.

The move, in which some 200 farm workers will be transferred from Limestone County to Coffee County, is made possible by the fact that the harvest season opens from four to six weeks earlier in Coffee County than it does in Limestone County.

Coleman said the plan 'is an example of how a serious labor problem can be solved by cooperation between the farmers and other groups interested in farm problems."

The workers, who will receive transportation both ways, lodging, and standard rates of pay, are scheduled to return to Limestone County around September 1, when harvest operations begin there.

The program, Coleman said, has three objectives: (1) to make the best use of Alabama's dwindling supply of farm labor by making them available where they are most needed, (2) to provide the workers with more continuous work, and (3) to eliminate the need to bring out-of-state or foreign workers into Alabama.

The workers are recruited by the Alabama State Employment Service, which will arrange transportation for them. They agreed to return when harvesting begins in their own areas.

The farmers in Coffee County have agreed not to try to induce them to stay by offering additional jobs or year-round work.

The program was begun last year on a smaller scale when approximately 60 Limestone County farm workers signed up for work in Coffee County. Both workers and farmers reported they were well pleased by the arrangement, said Coleman.

The program is sponsored by the State Employment Service of the Department of Industrial Relations, the Agricultural Mobilization Committee, and the farmers.

PARDON & PAROLE MEMBER RESIGNS

Montgomery, Ala.—Pardon and Parole Board member James N Bloodworth, young Decatur attorney, will quit the board Sept. 15 to return to his law practice.

Bloodworth sent his resignation to Governor Gordon Persons last week.

Pointing out that he had agreed to serve on the board for a year, Bloodworth told the governor: "The affairs of the board are now running smoothly, and leave knowing the board is in good hands.

Gov. Persons was believed ready to appoint Mrs. Frances R, Robison, his private secretary, as Bloodworth's successor.

Another woman, Mrs. Ethel ayle, is now chairman of the board. Auburn's Neil O. Davis is the third member.

Drop cookies should be placed about one and one-half inches apart in neat spoonsful on the cooking sheet to allow for spreading.

SECONDARY SCHOOL PRINCIPALS END MONTGOMERY MEETING

Montgomery, Ala. — Alabama's secondary school principals, meeting here last week turned thumbs down on high school fraternities and sororities, and heard State Superintendant of Education W. J. Terry stress the need for better relations with the public.

The group chose F. T. Dobbs, Gadsden High principal, as its president for the 1952-53 term. Dobbs succeeds Sheffield's Ray Black. L. S. Vanderford, Brundidge High, was chosen vice-president.

The principals, meeting on the Huntingdon College campus, declared that social organizations in high schools tend to aid and abet "snobbishness, bitter feelings and class distinction."

In his address, Dr. Terry said inadequately informing the public about schools "has retarded the growth of the public education system in the state . . . Educators and boards of education cannot carry the burden of the school system alone."

Terry said educators "need greater public interest and active citizens' school committees" to "inform the public about the duties, responsibilities and needs of educating their children."

The group called teachers' salaries still "grossly inadequate." One principal, T. E. Roberts, said it is "extremely difficult to find good teachers—and keep them—with the low salaries being paid."

The principals were told by Montgomery's Mrs. Harry Nelson, general secretary of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers that PTA membership in Alabama now exceeds 141,000—an increase of some 2,000 over last year.

MORE LASSES AND IRON

You seldom ever find ore and blackstrap molasses in the same boat. but the two have combined to make news at the Port of Mobile.

Dollar value of iron ore imports at the State Docks during the first five months of the year nearly exceeded the value of all imports during 1950, the Commerce Department reported last week.

Ore brought through the port for Birmingham steel mills during the first five months was valued at $2,365,915, the department said.

As for the 'lasses, that's what it took to make Cuba the biggest foreign user of the Port during May. Over $1,663,000 worth of goods imported from Cuba during the month—mostly the blackstrap—pushed it far ahead of other countries shipping through Mobile.

Profitable Milk

Buying large quantities of dairy feed pays only when milk prices are extra good. And a good feed production program is beneficial only when it is based on feeding cows proper amounts according to milk production, weight and physical condition.

ALABAMA HIGHLIGHTS

New hope in Madison County was originally incorporated as Vienna, but the U. S. Post Office Department rejected the name and called it New Hope, and New Hope it has remained.

Alexander McGillivray, who spent most of his life in Alabama, was at one time known as the emperor of two Indian tribes —the Creeks and the Seminoles.

Sam Dale, the famed Indian fighter and hero of the Canoe Fight, was the first tax collector of Monroe County. Another well known figure of Alabama's frontier days who lived in the county at one time was the illustrious Creek chief William Weatherford.

Moulton was named in honor of a Lt. Moulton, a hero of the campaign against the Creeks.

The English name of one of Alabama's most learned Indians, Sequoya, the father of the Cherokee alphabet, was George Guess.

The fathers of Alabama's great iron and steel producing industry were a group of veterans who were mustered out of General Jackson's army at the close of the War of 1812.

When DeSoto and his cavaliers passed through this state four centuries ago, their written records of the journey often referred to Alabama racoons and opposum as "little dogs that do not bark."

Lutheran Church News

Sunday School 10:00. The service 11:00. Everybody invited.

Admittedly one of the greatest evils of the American home is the rising tide of divorce Homes are broken and children often are crushed by the experience.

The Lutheran church, believing its position is supported by Scripture, teaches as follows concerning marirage and divorce:

1. Marriage is a holy estate, and should be entered into only by those who consider it so and have reverently sought spiritual guidance (Heb.) 13:5).

2. Divorce may be granted only for adultry (Mat. 5:32) or desertion (1 Cor. 7:15) and the guilty partner may not remarry (Matt. 19:9).

No Lutheran pastor considers himself obligated to perform any marriage that he is not convinced that the blessing of God may rest upon, even though they may have a marirage license; neither is he compelled to recognize any divorce contracted on unscriptural grounds. This is a moral issue on which the Word of God rather than the decrees of man must be followed.

This aritcle sponsored by Concordia Lutheran Church, Thorsby, Ala.

Lutheran homecoming will be held Aug. 24 at the home of Miss Alma Leftstead.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rogers, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., now living at Clanton, were received into membership of Concordia Lutheran church this past Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Morgan of Birmingham spent the week end with Rev. and Mrs. Morgan.

Rev. Morgan will not teach at Thorsby Institute this year due to the fact that the Synod would prefer that I devote full time to the development of the congregation. I have not received an express directive not to teach, but Dr. Fritz, President of the Georgia-Alabama Synod has indicated to me that the Executive Committee of Synod may not be favorable. For that reason I have decided to withdraw my offer to teach

This attitude is, of course, understandable because the Synod is heavily subsidizing Concordia for the purpose of eventually making it a self-supporting congregation. We do well to remember also, that were it not for the generous aid given to us by synod, a full time resident pastor here would be an impossibility.

As we come closer to Fall, and the return of school and a [illegible] of the [illegible], let us all be busy about the Master's business. We have four new members [illegible], but we need many times that number. The fields are truly ripe unto harvest, so let's not stand idly by and either see others harvest them or see the harvest die [illegible] neglect.

Both were former teachers at T. I. Mrs. Turner was a part-time teacher. Mr. Turner has received his Doctor's degree in French since leaving Thorsby Institute.

Mrs. Emily W. Harding, who is taking a summer course in Library Science at the University of Alabama, received a nice write-up in the Sunday edition of the Birmingham News. The wirte-up stated that "her teachers at the University call Mrs. Harding a front row seat student who has a keen mind and writes an excellent paper." Mrs. Harding was born in China and lived there until she was fourteen when she came to the U. S. to go to school. She married in 1900 and went with her husband as a missionary to India. She remained there with her small son for several years after the death of her husband. Mrs. Harding is an excellent librarian and we are fortunate to have her at Thorsby Institute.

News has been received here of the death of Mrs. F. E. Gronquist. The Gronquist family were among the old settlers in Thorsby and lived here for many years before moving to Birmingham. Mrs. Gronquist died last Sunday at the home of her daughter Mrs. Helen Keesler after a lingering illness. She was 93 years old. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at the Christ Lutheran church in Birmingham, with the Rev. David Conrad officiating. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery.

Miss Theresa Bosworth of Selma, Ala., visited a while here Sunday morning with the James Bosworths.

CANE CREEK HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Cane Creek Home Demonstration Club held their August meeting at Riyerview camp in the form of a picnic supper, on August 1st. The members with their families began to gather about 5 o'colck and spent 2 hours in visiting, playing games and planning for next year to be a better one.

Because of sickness we did not have all of our people present, but we were very happy to have the Friendship Club join us, as they had planned to have their picnic at the same time. There were 36 to enjoy the event.

We were so happy to have Miss Martin, our assistant leader with us. We also had with us Mrs. Annie Thacker from Birmingham, whom we all love and who at one time was a member of Friendship club.

After enjoying the supper together we parted with hopes of more being able to enjoy our picnic next year.—Reporter.

"American Harvest" Coming To New Wadesonian

A new South which drills into the earth, goes to the sea, and even reaches into the sky for its expending industrial needs is pictured in the new motion picture, "American Harvest," in full technicolor and sound, which opens August 17 at the New Wadesonian Theater. Across the South, from Virginia to Texas, the camreaman who made "American Harvest" photographed the newest, largest, and most efficient operations in American agriculture, industry and commerce.

The result is an entertaining picture of American accomplishment which shows the theater audiences how rural, small town and big city dwellers work together for the comfort and convenience of all. This interdependance theme is emphasized by colorful scenes which show how the greater production line, starring in field, forest and mine, not only links town and country but has expanded individual freedom and initiative.

Camera crews of the Jam Handy Organiztation show the contributions of the turpentine producers to a hundred different industries of the South by photographing the collecting of the turpentine gum in the groves of Florida and Georgia. The largest mechanical cotton pickers are shown in action and baled cotton is followed to the mills for processing into a thousand new products of the textile and plastics industries.

"American Harvest" shows in dramatic documentary sequences how the petroleum industry has created a new industrial empire based on the expanding operations of petrochemistry.

In vivid industrial scenes, "American Harvest" shows corn transformed directly into artificial leathers and cotton and petroleum of the South meeting on the production line of supply the nation with automobile tires.

Filming the latest developments in farming and ranching in the Southwest, the cameraman who made "American Harvest" went to Texas to photograph the largest herd of Angora goats ever to appear on the screen. This herd and many others like it are the basis for a new [illegible]-million-dollad-a-year-mohair industry.

Highlights of "American Harvest" include beautiful scenic visits from Key West across the South and West to Puget Sound. Spectacular [illegible] operation include the cutting [illegible] of California's Sequoias [illegible] years old and 70 feet in circumference. The new picture is being [illegible] as a signal contribution to a [illegible] enthuisastfcally at pre[illegible] appreciation of our Ameri[illegible]

Split Season Announced On Doves

Montgomery, Ala.— Conservation Director Earl M. McGowin has announced that the Advisory Board of Conservation at a recent meeting recommended to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service the following seasons on doves in Alabama: October 17-October 31 and December 27-January 10. The Board in considering the dove season was limited to the framework set by the Federal agency on migratory birds Alabama, located in the southern part of the Mississippi Flyway, was permitted to choose September 15 or a later date to start a season of thirty consecutive days, or two periods of fifteen days each, with January 10 in either case being the latest closing date. Federal regulations prohibit the zoning of a state and dates selected for the open season on doves must apply to the entire state. Since hunters in south Alabama have always preferred a late opening date while those in north Alabama desire an early date, a split season appeared to be the answer. Alabama's split season compares favorably with that recommended by two adjoining states Mississippi has indicated a preference for October 15-October 29 and December 27-January 10 while Georgia has requested September 15-September 29 and December 25-January 8. According to these recommendations Alabama had requested a later opening day than either of its sister states.

Word has been received by Director McGowin from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service that Alabama's recommendations on the dove season have been approved. Therefore hunters will be permitted to enjoy an open season on doves from October 17 to October 31 inclusive.

At the same meeting of the Board the seasons were set for the various species of native game girds and animals. North of U. S. Highway 80, squirrels may be hunted from October 15 to December 15 and south of U. S. Highway 80 from November 1 to January 1. The quail season will open on Thanksgiving Day, November 27, and close on February 20. The season for turkeys will be the same as last year with the exception that Russell County will be open and Pickens and St. Clair counties will be closed to such hunting. In North Alabama turkeys can be legally hunted from November 20 to January 1 and March 25 to April 20 and in Solth Alabama from November 20 to January 1 and March 20 to April 15.

With certain exceptions the deer season will be the same as last year, opening November 20 and cloisng Janing Jan. 1. Hale and Tuscaloosa Counties will be opened on a county-wide basis. Those portions of Jefferson and Walker Counties that were open last year will have the season reduced to fifteen days, which will make the closing date December 5. This change has been made because of the increased hunting pressure in the area. Franklin and Colbert Counties, with the exception of the Colbert County sanctuary, will be opened to stalk hunting only for a period of fifteen days. Managed hunts in the National Forest of Alabama will be announced jointly at a later date by the Department of Conservation and the U. S. Forest Service.

When hunted as a game with a gun, the rabbit season will extend from October 1 to February 20. This is the same as the 1951-52 season.

The season for fur bearing animals will be the same as last year with the exception that the trapping of muskrats will be permitted on a state-wide basis from December 1 to February 20. This is a reduction of thirty-nine days in the muskrat season which appears necessary for the protection of this valuable fur bearer. The research program, being conducted by the Department reveals a decline in the muskrat population.

More specific information on the game seasons and on the areas open to trapping furbearers and the hunting of deer and turkey may be obtained by contacting the Department of Conservation.

The season for hunting water fowl will be announced at a later date by the U. S. Wildlife Service.

JUNE SALES TAX REPORTS GAIN

Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama sales tax receipts in June totaled $4,451,336, according to Revenue Commissioner Joe Edwards. The total failed to show an expected drop because of the steel strike, he said.

The June total compares with $4,605,799 for May.

Receipts from tobacco tax income. Gasoline taxes netted $3,298,921, compared with $3,534,250 during the month of May.

Pecans that are boiled for 15 minutes will crack whole.

Pond Owners Advised To Eliminate Catfish

Pond owners might be heard using the expression, "Curiosity killed the catfish."

These fish are undesirable and should be eliminated when found in farm ponds. In fact, if enough of them aren't removed by late winter, the pond owner may have to drain his pond, poison the remaining water, and restock the pond in order to insure good fishing the following year.

However, catfish curiosity about a tempting bait, such as fist-sized pieces of soybean cake, and a good trap may cook their goose. Make a trap five to six feet long and about 15 to 18 inches in diameter. A funnel is formed at each end, something like a minnow trap. The mouth of the funnel should be around three to four inches in diameter. Provide a small hinged window in the middle of the trap so fish can be removed.

AND STILL THEY DIE ON ALABAMA HIGHWAYS

Montgomery, Ala.—Despite Gov. Gordon Persons' all-out highway campaign, 21 more persons died on the highways during the first half of this year than during the corresponding period last year.

But the governor, pointing to two exceptionally bad months during the period, predicted the last half of the year will show a "substantial decrease."

"The situation is better in hand now," Gov. Persons said.

According to Highway Department figures, 287 persons were killed during the period Jan. 1 through June 30 of this year. In the same period last year, 266 persons were killed.

Trap The Water That Does Fall On Farms

For several weeks many farmers over the state have again realized the importance of water in the production of crops and livestock.

But droughts occur nearly every year in Alabama despite the fact our annual rainfall exceeds 50 inches. We get plenty of water to produce crops every year. But too often it is permitted to run off sloping land or go to waste in other ways. This water is sorely needed if dry weather follows.

Farmers can help insure crops against drought damage by putting each acre of land in the crop best suited to it. In other words, don't try to grow row crops on land that is suited only for sod crops.

Also, increasing the supply of organic matter in the soil so that it will absorb and hold more water is important.

Use crop rotations that include more sod crops to trap rainfall and store it in the soil for future use. And control run-off water that soil does not absorb by spreading it onto meadows and pastures or storing it in farm ponds.

Arrangement Of Kitchen Can Mean Less Work For You

Convenient grouping of work and storage centers to save the homemaker's time and health and to avoid needless fatigue in the kitchen is very important.

Therefore, in arranging to cut kitchen travel, the number of trips from one center to another needs to be counted as well as the distance. Two or three feet between centers that are used often can make a notable difference at the end of the day as a busy homemaker.

To loosen layer cake from the tin set the cake pan on a cold, damp cloth for a few moments and it will come out easily.

Sericea For Dry Weather

In every drought-stricken county, cattle can be seen grazing and doing well on farms that are growing sericea. The same holds true for cattle on kudzu.

Three-Meal-A-Day Plan May Not Be The Best

The usual American custom of three meals a day is not necessarily the best eating schedule.

Some people, often the elderly, feel better if they eat more frequently, but less at a time. They may prefer to divide their daily fare into four or five meals instead of three. Or some food may be saved out for snacks between meals or at bedtime. Many people find that warm milk at bedtime is an aid to restful sleep.

However, older people who eat frequently need to guard against two hazards. First, don't lose the appetite for milk, fruit, vegetables and other needed food by filling up on toast and tea or cake and coffee. Second, don't overeat and become overweight.

Growing children, active workers and underweights also may benefit by between-meal snacks. Non appetite spoilers that give children nourishment for active play are a glass of milk, a sandwich, fruit, or a hard-cooked egg.

Proper Storage For All Farm Machinery

All farm machinery that has finished its year's work should be stored properly until next season.

Thoroughly clean combines and remove canvases and belts and hang them up away from rats and mice. Land-polished surfaces should be covered with heavy oil or rust preventative.

Fall Garden Will Help Food Budget

Turnips, rutabagas, and greens will furnish good eating at low cost in late fall, when most fresh vegetables are gone.

Growers can get best results by planting on a low spot where soil moisture is plentiful. Purple top globe is the most popular variety of turnips, while the American top rutabagas are best.

These crops need 1,000 pounds of 5-10-5 fertilizer per acre before planting and a top dressing of 200 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent when they are two or three inches high.

Grasshopper Control

On field crops and flower gardens, one of the best materials that can be used to control grasshoppers is the 20 per cent toxaphene dust. Rate of application is 15 to 20 lbs. per acre.

FOLKS AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN

—By Ben

Hear the Young Democrats will rganize in Chilton County within the near future. That's good news. We need a Young Democrat organization here and we are sure there are hundreds of young men and women who would be glad to join such n organization. A district meeting vill be held next week at Centerville we understand, after which the cal organization will be formed.

Next week Chilton County News ill print a "Keep Chilton County Green" edition and also the week ollowing. Several Chilton County usinesses are making this edition ssible. M. C. Barth Lumber Company, Clanton Fertilizer Company, Cliff Jones Milling Company, Peoples Savings Bank, First National Bank, Harris Hardy Feed Company, Central Alabama Stock Yards, Dennis Farm Supply, Jones Seed & Feed, V. C. Lenoir, Chilton County Seed & Feed Co., and several others. The names we missed this week will be published next week. It is urely a community public service y these businessmen and deserves he thanks of all the people.

Our friend J. B. Atkinson came ut against C. Fenn Jones for the ffice of Mayor of Clanton. We're orry because we'll have to stick o our original opinion that the resent team is doing a good job nd should be retained. John Deamus did not qualify for reelection n the City Council but Louie Smith qualified as a candidate for is place. You can't beat Louie Smith. We know he has a lot of onorary services to perform for ne organiaztion and another, but e is very popular and always does is job well. We are glad he deided to offer his services to the City for the next four years.

Leroy Martin will move his Funral Home to the residence formery occupied by the R. W. Lowes ctober 1st. Of course a lot of reodelling will need to be done. In act Leroy says he will have a Chap- among all the other modern coneniences at the new Home. He ill service Emergency Aid and Mual Benefit policy holders. Look r his advertising in future issues the News.

Speaking of the Martin reminds that James Carl is also getting ady to make a change. However, e're afraid his is bad news—for lanton that is. James Carl goes Prattville on September 1st with e Griffin Funeral Home. He has en a faithful worker in all civic ovements in Clanton and the unty and he will be missed. We te to lose the James Carl Mars but we wish them good luck their new undertaking.

Chief of Police Charles Tucker nts us to advise these "thrill nters" to stop chasing the fire gine. He points out that it is a olation of the law to stop a car thin 300 feet of a fire engine when is on a call and because of this ovision in our city laws one arrest s made this week. There was o one arrest made for public unkeness and two for highway unkness."

First bale of cotton to be ginned is year in Chilton County was ised by a Negro woman. Earl Neal Gin at Maplesville ginned bale for Fannie Belle Moton. e bale weighed 468 lbs. The bale s ginned Aug. 13th.

T-J Lions Advise Methods To Offset Recent Crop Failure

Dear Farmer:

The long drouth and hot weather has been broken. We have nearly all had rain recently. Great damage was caused by the drouth which the rains, although now beneficial could not overcome. Corn and feeds stuff generally are failures, gardens were almost lost, cotton stands are generally poor and growth have been scanty. These are some of the hardships you have suffered.

In order to offset some of these losses certain things can be done that should prove helpful.

Since feed stuff will be at a premium, save all the forage possible even wild grass hay. Cut corn that is past making grain. Put in as much fall grazing as possible and do a good job. Prepare the land well, fertilize well, seed properly and it is already time to begin. Fertilize permanent pasture sods now where you have white clover, fescue, rescue, orchard or blue grass.

Harvest your cotton as soon and as fast as you can. Pick it clean, dry it and keep it dry. Get the best grade possible, then trade your cotton seed for meal if you can get a good swap.

Put in a fall garden, summer crops with 60 to 70 day maturity should still make; Early bunch beans, early squash, early field peas, plant extra greens even the less popular kinds, plant irish potatoes, onions, carrots, spinach and lettuce. Do a thorough job of land preparation on a site likely to retain maisture, use high applications of a good grade of fertilizer.

Get rid of unprofitable dairy cows, use a milk substitute for calves and market more milk. Try to set up a grazing pasture this winter to carry beef cattle with little feed, they will be more valuable next spring. Dumping them on the market will just lower the price.

A top dressing with nitrogen for permanent pasture now could produce surplus growth for a late cutting of hay.

For other aids and ideas see any of your agricultural workers in the county, see them for details on the suggestions above.

Very truly,
Agriculture Committee T-J Lions Club, Thorsbyh-Jemison.

W. A. Williams has an excellent stand of sericea on thirty-five acres that wa sseeded in Juiy, but is just now up to a stand.

J. W. Wills has a definite plan in mind as to how his land will be utilized. All hill land except two acres of Blackberries, and five acres for grain will be sodded to perennial grasses and legumes.

Now is a good time to take stock of the prospects for sericea seed. C. R. Childress believes if the sericea has a good growth now and is good and grown, there is a chance of making a seed crop. If you make a seed crop try to get it harvested. The seed will be needed next spring.

LAND IS LIFE

Without the productive soil life would cease to exist. Each year our soil becomes more valuable. As the population increases, there is an increasing demand for the fruits of the soil. Since the productive acres are limited, it means that every acre will in time be called on to produce more.

Land is an inheritance that is given to us to use wisely. It can ustain life in the direct proportion to the way it is treated. Conserve the soil and it can and will meet the ever increasing demands that is being made of it.

Chilton County's land is good land. There is a variety of crops grown. In fact, Chilton County is considered one of the very best diversified counties in the State of Alabama. If we are going to continue to enjoy the yields of plenty from the land Soil Erosion must stop. Soil Conservation is not a drudgery or dead expense. Soil Conservation should be a pleasure—and is always profitable. Contour cultivation conserves moisture and increases yields. Perennials such as Kudzu, Sericea and grasses will improve yields.

Judge Parr[illegible] is growing Kudzu and corn together—ask him about yields. G. M. Baker, Carson Boockholdt, Leon Mims, R. M. Foshee have good examples of the value of Sericea as a soil builder. Walter Lenoir can tell of the value of Crotaleria as a soil builder

Remember Soil and Water Conservaiton doesn't cost—it pays.

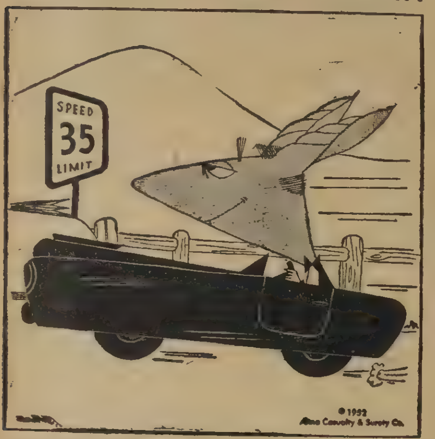
WHO'S ZOO—ON THE HIGHWAY



DON'T BE AN ANTELOPE. Speed protects him but endangers you. Slow down.

THE TAIL IS WAGGING THE DOG

Clanton's telephone book recently released contains 13 pages of names of Clanton subscribers and 31 pages in the yellow section. Originally the yellow pages, we believe, were added to enable one to find a needed number without having to turn thru so many pages. In other words, the numbers are listed by business catagories instead of alphabetically according to the subscriber's name.

Now, when there are more than two times the number of yellow pages than there are the white pages containing the subscribers names it becomes harder to find the number in the back of the book than it is in the front of the book. Thus, it would seem, commercializing on the yellow pages has defeated their purpose.

September 11, 12, and 13th, are the days selected to hold the 1952 Chilton County Fair.

Glasscock for a big display of the county's progress in the above mentioned lines and the cooperation of the merchants and businessmen will make the 1952 Fair a success.

MORAL OBLIGATION

The article printed below was taken from "Leader Letter Box," appearing in the Roanoke Leader, published by John B. Stevenson, at Roanoke.

If you voted in a Democratic or Republican primary in the State of Alabama during the year 1952, you made a pledge that is printed on the ballot. It reads as follows:

"By casting this ballot I do pledge myself to abide by the results of this primary election and to aid and support all the nominees thereof in the ensuing general election."

This pledge has been a part of the primary law of the State of Alabama since the year 1931. The Legislature of Alabama in the year 1951 rewrote the same pledge.

If a person is either a plaintiff, defendant, or witness in a case in court, whether it be an individual, a partnership or a corporation, it is the opinion of many judges that it would be admissible in evidence if it is shown that the party involved deliberately, knowingly, and willingly violated a pledge that is in the statute books of the State of Alabama.

If twins vote in a Republican or Democratic primary, and one supports the nominee of the primary and the other does not, is one's reputation thereafter better than the reputation of the other?

If a bunch of people join together and participate in a primary, and one or more go in there with the intention of going contrary to the pledge, who knew the pledge prior to entering the primary, and no not go along with the ones selected, is their reputation for honesty as good as the reputation of those who stayed with the ones they started off with?

If a member of a church votes to select the pastor, the superintendent, or a teacher, and one is selected by 90 per cent majority, do the 10 per cent quit that church in an attempt to destroy the church?

If 10 players leave the community to go over to another community to play baseball, and nine select one boy to pitch and the 10th does not like it, does that boy go home and leave the others and want his home boys to lose the game, or does he get on the other team in an attempt to defeat his home team?

The Republicans can have primaries and do have them in some of the counties in Alabama. They have conventions in some counties and primaries in others. The question is—can a person who has knowledge of the pledge in the primary to support the nominees thereof, etc., participate in the Democratic primary and the Republican convention? Is there a moral obligation somewhere? Can a person vote a ticket in Alabama in November and go into the other primary two years from that date? Should the one who votes any part of the Republican ticket this fall go into the Democratic primary in the year 1954?

Do you believe that 12 people who are competent to on a jury would knowingly, intentionally, and wilfully violate any pledge or statute enacted by the Legislature of Alabama that did not suit him?

Aid Promised To Alabama Farmers

Senator Lister Hill has received assurance from Secretary of Agriculture Brannan that every available resource of the agency will be put to the relief of Alabama's drought-stricken farmers.

Hill listed the following positive steps to aid the State's distressed farmers:

1. The entire State has been made eligible for disaster loans through the Farmers Home Administration. The loans are made to help farmers who have suffered crop losses continue their farming operations. Disastre loan application blanks have been rushed to all county FHA supervisors and FHA will hold five district meetings in Alabama this week to speed the handling of loans. FHA is working in close cooperation with other Federal and State agricultural agencies.

2. The Farm Credit Administration has authorized a year's extension on existing Production Credit Association loans to farmers and made replacement funds available to the Association.

3. State PMA committees are reexamining their production programs in drought areas to provide special help to farmers for fall forage and feed crops.

4. The chairman of Alabama's Agricultural Mobilization Committee is working with PMA chairmen in non-drought States to channel hay and other feed supplies to Alabama farmers.

5. The Department of Agriculture is seeking lower freight charges on hay and other feeds that must be shipped into Alabama from long distances. Hill said he is keeping in constant touch with the Agricultural authorities and expioring other ways of getting help for Alabama farmers.

Timely Tip

Getting winter grazing crops planted on time on land prepared right is one of the most important things on Alabama farms for August and early September.

Around OUR HOUSE
by Kathryn Tucker Windham

The three-year-old and the five-year-old now have treasure chests, cigar boxes from the drug store which they painted themselves (they got almost as much paint on themselves as on the boxes) and decorated with pictures they cut from old magazines.

The five-year-old, as soon as her treasure chest was dry, put her prized possessions in it: an old tube of lipstick, a picture of Roy Rogers, an empty perfume bottle, a small jar of cold cream, five assorted earrings, a powder puff, some bobby pins, a flowered handkerchief and a napkin from a birthday party.

So far the three-year-old's treasure chest contains only one item: a thoroughly mashed and dried snake, about a foot long, which hundreds of motorists had run over before he found it in the street on his way to Sunday School!

After the youngsters had finished painting their boxes, getting the excess paint off their hands, arms, feet and legs (the three-year-old even managed to get some in his ear!) presented a real problem. Plain soap and water did no good, and turpentine was too strong to use on their tender skins.

I was almost resigned to having two spotted children around our house for quite some time until the next door neighbor suggested that I try olive oil. It worked like magic!

Speaking of cigar boxes, our neighbor down the street has used them to help solve her problem of misplaced socks. Her three little girls never could find their socks until she made each of them a Sox Box out of cigar boxes. She painted each box a different color and then decorated them with bright decals. Now the girls' socks, neatly rolled up, go into the boxes in their dresser drawers and are always easy to find.

Washing a chenille bedspread is never an easy task, but the next door neighbor has found a way to simplify the job.

She takes the spread from her washing machine without rinsing or wringing it and hangs it on her clothes line with the tufted side in. Then she turns the garden hose on it until all the soap has been rinsed out. As the spread dries, the sides rub together causing the tufts to fluff out. After this treatment, the spread is as soft and fluffy as when it was brand new.

We are fortunate in having a neighbor who is an ardent and successful fisherman, the kind of neighbor who enjoys sharing his fish almost as much as he enjoys catching them.

He had a bit of trouble once with the game warden for having in his possession a fish an inch or so undersize, but this won't happen to him again: he painted a ruler on his rod so he can measure his catch accurately.

This catcher-of-fish declares that an old pair of scissors is better to use in cleaning fish than any kind of a knife. However, the scissors aren't the most surprising item in his tackle box: he has an old-fashioned currycomb in there too! This currycomb has never been used on a horse, but it has been used to remove the scales from hundreds of fish.

If fish is on your menu, try baking it. Season with salt and pepper, put a thin slice of onion on each piece and top with a solid piece of canned tomato. Add about 1-2 cup tomato juice and cover with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Bake until tender.

Oat Varieties For Grain Production

The best oat varieties for grain production in Alabama are Anderson, Arlington, De Soto, and Victorgrain 48-93.

All of these varieties have some susceptibility to helminthosporium blight. However, their average yields over several years of testing have been higher than the yields of other varieties in the same experiments. An additional advantage of these varieties is that they have a higher degree of resistance to lodging or falling over than do other varieties tested.

Yield differences in favor of the varieties named were not as large in southern Alabama as in northern and central Alabama.

Delicious Honey Is On Plentiful List

Honey is on the plentiful list this year, and because of the large supply, handlers, wholesalers, retailers, and others are promoting a campaign to increase its sale.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and other agricultural agencies are cooperating in the program to acquaint people with the good buy in honey. They are encouraging the increased use of honey in homes, restaurants, school lunch programs, public food serving institutions, and other food outlets.

The food trade and all agencies who will assist in the program to increase honey consumption are alerted for emphasis on a special merchandising campaign during the month of October. However, no one need wait until then to use more of this delicious and nutritious food since an abundant supply is available now.

In the two weeks since Senator Sparkman was given the nod at Chicago, local groups cooperating in preparing this homecoming have collected something over $7,000.00 by public subscripiton to finance the affair. Some $2,800 of this amount was used to decorate the city. All surplus funds from the celebration will be turned over to the Democratic campaign fund.

Mayor McAllister, in explaining the purpose behind the celebration, said. "It was not only for residents of Huntsville and Madison county but for all residents of the state for whom John Sparkman, in his efforts for the farmer and for the small business man and for all his constituents, has labored so vigorously during his period in Congress."

New Weapon Against Ceqal Coccidiosis

Alabama broiler growers have another weapon to use in their fight against cecal coccidiosis, a costly disease of growing chicks.

A vaccine has recently been put on the market that will immunize chicks against the disease at an early age at small cost.

The vaccine is fed to the chicks in a wet mash when they are three days old. And the chicks develop a mild case of coccidiosis 14 days later, At this time they are treated with a sulfa drug. By the time chicks are 28 days old, they have a solid immunity to cecal coccidiosis.

Poultry By-Product For Truck Farmers

Truck farmers who produce broilers have a valuable asset in the manure from their poultry business.

Tests over a four-year period show that henhouse fertilizer greatly increases the yield of tomatoes, lima beans, and other truck crops.

Five tons of poultry manure, with litter are about equal in plant food to one ton of fertilizer analyzing 7½-5-4½. This comes close to Alabama's 6-8-4 grade of commercial fertilizer.

In addition to plant food, henhouse fertilizer adds organic matter to the soil.

Jemison Has It

Just a few short years ago Jemison was just another flag stop on the L. & N. and bus lines. Today its differnt.

A new spark plub was put in the old engine. It began to sputter and sputter in all directions and is still going strong.

Through the organization of the athletic group, a stadium has been built with arc lights. Today this is still serving the town and outlying communities. There came the city water works, a God send. Then the fire department, then the police department. Then downtown paving. All this through the leadership and untiring efforts of Mayor Fred Smith and the council. Old Fred and the members have enough responsibilities of their own to keep the average men busy, but they are continuously working and probing far better things for Jemison. There's not another mayor of any town in all Alabama that has brought so much for so little to his town, with the aid of the council and others. All this has been accomplished without any tax raise to the average citizen and the added tax to business has been offset many times over by the advantages they have recevied. Old Fred himself was one of the hardest hit.

Today the town of Jemison has a nice cash surplus. Every dollar of which is honest dollars. Our city government is of the highest order. How Old Fred has done this is indeed a mystery, but its done.

Now he is striving to bring Natural Gas to Jemison, to build a city hall that will be the pride of every citizen. We can look forward to this being accomplished, for when Fred puts his shoulder to the wheel something must move. Ways by which the city hall would pay for itself in a few years have been figured out.

Our hats are off to Old Fred and the efficient city council and all officers.

Save Vitamin, Cover Milk While Heating

Keeping milk covered while heating helps save riboflavin, an important B-vitamin.

Riboflavin is destroyed easily by light and this destruction is hastened by heat. Tests show that milk boiled in the light lost considerable riboflavin, but milk boiled in the dark lost very little.

It is important for the housewife to take every precaution against loss of this vitamin in milk, because milk is the food on which children and adults depend for most of the riboflavin they need for best health

Giving Furniture An Oiled Finish

It just takes a little work to give a piece of furniture an oiled finish that won't show spots or scratches.

First, remove all dust and dirt. Then brush on a coat of finish made by mixing two parts boiled linseed oil and one part turpentine. Wipe off all excess oil with a clean cloth. Remember to clean all crevices, otherwise the oil will harden and will have to be removed with varnish remover.

After this job is done, rub finish for five to 15 minutes, or until a hard, lustrous surface results. Do this at intervals of not less than 2 days until all dull spots disappear.

The Gleaners Sunday School Class of the West End Baptist Church in Clanton met on Monday night, August 18th, with Mrs. Chester Miller at her home in Billingsley when Mrs. R. E. Wilkins gave a most inspiring devotional and prayer.

After a short business session presided over by Mrs. Honrie Little, games were enjoyed with Mrs. Little in charge.

Eleven class members enjoyed ice cream and Cokes served by the hostess.

Has Sixteenth Birthday—

One of the lovliest teen-age parties of the summer was on Monday night, August 11th, when Mr. and Mrs. Otis Royal entertained, honoring their daughter, Joann, on her sixteenth birthday.

The home was artistically decorated with seasonal floral arrangements and ferns. The white birthday cake embossed in pink and green and holding sixteen pink candles and a large bowl of vari-colored zenias decorated the party table in the dining room.

The honoree displayed the many lovely gifts in the living room.

Games were enjoyed on the lawn. Cokes, party sandwiches and cookies were served to the following guests: Misses Sadie Higgins, Beth Jean Lockhart, Faye Bates, Frances Baker, Paula Nivens, Joann Smith, Betty Kemp, Jackie Minor, Paula Gore, Margaret Foshee, Patsy Buckner, Peggy Rasberry, Betty Moliston and Margaret Martin, Charles Lockhart, Phil Sims, Eddie Baker, Gorden Robertson, Jr., Harold Parr, Bill Stroud, Bobby Farley, Jimmie Gillespie, Jimmy Fulford, Carl Argo, Joe Ellison and Don Plyler.

Sixteenth Birthday—

Jimmy Gillespie celebrated his sixteenth birthday on Friday night, August 15th, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Gillespie.

The group of teen-agers enjoyed games on the lawn where Mrs. Gillespie served Cokes and cookies later in the evening to the following: Misses Louise Golden, Betty Jones, Jackie Minor, Joanne Royal, Joan Smith, Paula Nivens, Betty Cox, Bonnie Gray, Myrna Crew and Geraldine Melton; Jimmy Jones, Alford Little, Earnest Owens, Jr., Edward Yeager, Byron Gillespie, Leon McMinn, Joel Thornton, Curtis Harris, Jimmy Lowery, Charles Lockhart and Bobby Ellison.

Cecil Is Six—

It was a happy time on Monday afternoon, August 18th, for little Cecil Wade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wade, when thirty little friends gathered on the lawn of the home to help him celebrate his sixth birthday.

There was a large white birthday cake holding six pink candles. One can imagine the thrill Cecil experienced as he opened each pretty gift wrapped package.

After a period of games, Mrs. Wade, assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Hugh Bates and Mrs. James Popwell, served refreshments to the group.

As parting favors each little guest was presented a novelty horn and a small prize box of candy.

Morgan Reynolds Promoted To Lt. Commander

The Department of the Navy announces the promotion of Lieutenant Morgan Reynolds, USNR, Clanton, Alabama, to the grade of Lieutenant Commander in the General Line of the Naval Reserve to rank from 5 July 1951.

Commander Reynolds has been a member of the Naval Reserve for twelve years, having served four years on active duty during World War II.

He was commissioned an Ensign in June 1942 upon graduating from the Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School at Northwestern University, and shortly thereafter was assigned to the heavy cruiser U. S. S. Astoria.

In the Navy's first offensive action against the Japanese in the Solomon Island group, the Astoria, and several other cruisers and destroyers, was assigned to bombardstallations on these islands. At 1:45 a.m. on 9 August 1942, the Allied Task Force was attacked by a force of the Japanese Navy consisting of three cruisers and seven destroyers, aided by scout aircraft dropping flares. Having achieved surprise, the enemy was able to sink the American cruisers, USS Astoria, USS Quincy, USS Vincennes, and the Australian cruiser, HMAS Canberra, before breaking off action and retiring at 2:15 a.m.

A junior officer in the Gunnery Department, Mr. Reynolds was serving in a gun turret of the Astoria when that ship was sunk by enemy action. He was adrift in shark infested waters for several hours before being rescued.

He subsequently served as Executive Officer of a Boat Repair Unit of the Naval Amphibious Forces, before being ordered back to the United States for further training in Radar and Combat Information Center operations. At the time of his release from active duty in the Navy, he was serving in the Operations Department of the cruiser USS Atlanta.

Commander Reynolds is a graduate of the Law School of the University of Alabama, and is a member of the law firm of Reynolds & Reynolds, Clanton, Alabama.

His promotion to Lieutenant Commander is made in recognition of his services to the Navy in World War II, and his continuing interest and training in the Naval Reserve.

Southern Bell Asks Increase

On July 21, 1952, the Southern Bell Telephone Company filed a petition with the Alabama Public Service Commission asking for an annual rate increase of $917,000. The amount asked for is needed to take care of wage increases aproved by the Wage Stabilization Board for Bell System workers on June 8th, 1952.

Alabama telephone rates set for Southern Bell back in January were short of the amount requested and badly needed. The new wage level just approved will force Southern Bell's earnings down to an even lower level unless relief is obtained and thereby greatly hamper their policy of providing the best telephone service possible.

The proposed rate increase will not affect the basic business and residence telephone rates but will affect certain equipment used on large switchboards, night and Sunday rates on long distance calls, and the nickel pay station will be increased to ten cents.

Southern Bell feels that in asking the Public Service Commission to grant this increase would be nothing more than asking them to restore their earnings to the minimum level set last January.

We hereby adopted the following statement of policy on matters covering veterans affairs as follows

1. We reaffirm our piror consistent policy that the first obligation of our government is to those who gave their lives or sustained injuries as a result of wartime service, and we hold that this obligation is a continuing cost of the wars, and we repudiate any denial of the great common responsibility to rehabilitate those who served, sacrificed and continue to suffer in order that our nation can survive against our enemies.

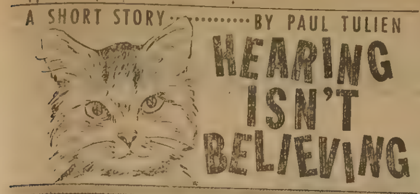
A SHORT STORY ....BY PAUL TULIEN

HEARING ISN'T BELIEVING



IF ANYONE had told Alice Kendall that John Pennington was cruel to animals she would not have believed it, but the incriminating words had come from John himself. "I suppose I've kicked her like that a hundred times but she never learns anything." It was a half-grown kitten he was talking about and the words had left Alice sick at heart.

It seemed incredible, yet she could not disbelieve her own ears. This was another side of John — undoubtedly the real side, and the tenderness he always showed her was just a sham.

He hadn't spoken the words to her; in fact, he hadn't known she was near. Of course he wouldn't have spoken them if he had known, she thought bitterly.

He had been talking to a neighbor when she had come one evening to see his mother about the wedding. Neither of them had noticed her, hidden by a lilac bush in the half dusk, and she was glad of that as she slipped away. She wouldn't see his mother; there was nothing to see her about now. There would be no wedding.

For several years she had worked for an attorney, and every evening John would be waiting for her on the sidewalk outside her office. Sometimes he had his car but mostly they walked; there wasn't any hurry. And somehow now the weather was always ideal for walking.

But that was over now. She wished it had happened months earlier when she had first met him; it would have been easier then. It was like weeding her flower garden; if the weeds were allowed to become too big they could not be pulled without uprooting the plants that stood too close.

She mailed back his ring the next morning, and that evening she asked to be excused half an hour early to avoid John although she did not tell the attorney that.

"Is John getting out early tonight too?" he called after her. She pretended not to hear.

She had been home less than an hour when a car came to a grinding stop and John sprang out and up the walk to the house. "Whatever have I done, Alice, to make you do this?" he demanded. "Whatever it is, I'm sorry."

For a moment she wavered. Surely what happened last night was just a horrible dream. Others might be brutal, but not John.

Yet she knew it was no dream. "I'm sorry, John, but it's best if we try to forget."

"But why? Why?"

"Don't ask, please, John. Just try to forget."

Reluctanctly he had agreed not to wait for her in the evenings. She took another way home now for she didn't want to pass the church steps they had sat on so often. Did John find forgetting just as hard? She wondered.

One Saturday afternoon she came across a book she had borrowed from John's mother, which should have been returned long ago. Now would be a good time to return it, she decided, for she was sure John wouldn't be home at this time.

Too late she saw John was sitting on a porch step with the kitten at his feet. She could not be so rude as to turn back now. He got up and confronted her.

"You've got to tell me, Alice. I've got to know."

"Please, John," she said and tried to walk around him.

As he stepped over to block her path his foot struck the kitten. Instantly he stooped to pick it up.

"O kitty, can't you ever learn to stay away from my feet! I suppose I've kicked her like that a hundred times. I try to be careful but she's here, there and everywhere in one instant. Maybe it doesn't hurt her or she'd learn."

"Oh!" Alice gasped in sudden understanding.

She should have known better. Her employer had often told her that you could never wholly rely on a witness no matter how honest he might be. "Despite the old saying, seeing isn't believing — nor hearing either; for you may not see all nor hear all."

"The way she's purring she must have forgiven me," John said. "Can't you forgive me too?"

"There's nothing to forgive you for, but you might forgive me for being the biggest little idiot ever born!"

"I don't know what you're talking about but I'll forgive you for anything if you'll take my ring back. You'll never know how lonely these weeks have been."

"Don't be so sure about that!" she retorted. "Do you think I haven't been lonely too?"

A SHORT STORY BY JANE W. CLAUSEN

THE RIB BONE

IT WAS a complete blow to Agnes' husband and mother-in-law when she told them the news.

Up to that point the evening had been uneventful and commonplace. Agnes had arrived home just before dinner and dinner had been on time. Mum had everything ready as always and the three of them had eaten with the usual amount of talk.

Mum had complained of her feet and declared she must go to the chiropodist. Peter said she should make an appointment the next day.

"Well," said Mum, "what with food so high, I thought I'd wait until you were working again."

"Now, don't you worry about that. I've a first class job all lined up."

Mum had beamed and Agnes had smiled, just a regular genuine wifely smile with no twist of the thought of Peter's months of unemployment.

Surely that had been the time for her to speak up, but she waited until after the last dish was dried and she and Mum joined Peter in the living room.

"I might as well tell you now," she said, sitting in the shadows, and Mum's face clouded instantly and Peter grew serious. "I'm out of work."

"Oh . . . " came the mournful monosyllable from Mum.

Peter said nothing for a moment. "That old hen has had it in for me for a long time and all it took was one more complaint from Mrs. Dobson. She comes in the beauty parlor looking for trouble!"

"Don't worry about it, lover," said Peter. "Like I said, I've got this new job all lined up. It's a good one, too."

They listened a while to Peter extolling the virtue of the wonderful job and then settled down to a three handed game of canasta.

The next morning Peter set out early and Agnes remained at home with Mum.

They sat in silence over their second cup of coffee and then the unusualness of the moment spurred Mum's tongue.

"I don't know, Agnes, but it's just as well. This is the way it should be, the wife at home, the husband out for work."

"Peter's not gone to work."

"No, but it's the first time he's left this early even to look for work for months. I don't know where he gets his lazy streak. His father was a hustler and I'm not afraid of work even yet."

Agnes laughed.

"I know, Mum, but don't be too hard on him. Peter's Peter!"

"He is that!" vowed Mum. "A fine handsome man he is, but you'll admit he's been comfortable living on what you could make, along with my small pension."

"That's why I got fired!"

Mum looked at her daughter-in-law with a new respect in her eye.

"I figured just what you've been figuring and I decided I really owed it to Peter to lose my job. So I did!"

Mum's gray head went back and she laughed until the tears rolled down her face.

They spent a long, easy day. Agnes had a leisurely bath and then used some of her training on herself and she was both beautiful and rested when Peter came home.

He breezed in happily.

Mum reached him first and he planted a kiss on her cheek. Then he grasped Agnes in his arms and swung her up in the air.

"I didn't want you gals to know," he said, "but I was a bit worried last night. The way bills pour in and us with nothing in the bank."

He set Agnes down on the floor. She looked up at him eagerly.

"So . . . " she said.

"So I went right out and found a job. One that'll bring in the sheckels pronto."

"Oh, Peter!" She hugged him soundly.

"Oh, Peter!" echoed his mother.

"What is it? When do you start?" asked Agnes.

"Hold on," said Peter merrily. "Don't jump to conclusions. It's at that new beauty salon. And you start Monday. I've got to keep myself free for that wonderful job."

A NICKEL'S WORTH

By Selah Bond

MR. SUTTON piled the groceries on the counter while the pretty young thing with bright red lipstick punched the keys and made the register whir. Presently she tore off the tape and said, "That's nine dollars and ninety-five cents."

Mr. Sutton handed her a ten dollar bill and she gave him a nickel in change. That was the beginning.

When he took the coin and pressed it between his fingers, he realized for the first time how low its value had sunk. It irked him, pricked his good nature. What good was it? What could he actually buy with it?

Curiously his mind traveled through the market again, up the aisles and down, searching for a nickel item. And strange but true there was noting that he could remember. The crux of the quandary came suddenly. He flipped the coin disgustedly to the floor. The cashier began to get shifty-eyed.

"What's the matter?" she asked.

"It's no good," he told her.

"You didn't have to throw it away. I'd give you a different one."

"It wouldn't make any difference," Mr. Sutton replied. "None of them are any good."

Out of the side of his eye he detected the firm gaunt shadow of the manager.

"Mr. Jones," the girl whimpered to the shadow, "this gentleman doesn't like our nickels."

Mr. Jones squashed his chin over his collar and curled his mouth up and chuckled like a saleaman caught in an outrageous claim.

"But, my dear, we aren't selling nickels," he said and guffawed at his humor.

"But, Mr. Jones," she insisted, "he threw it on the floor."

"It was no good," Mr. Sutton explained.

"No good?"

"It won't buy one solitary article in the store," Mr. Sutton pointed out.

"Ah," the manager cackled with delight, "but put another one with it and you can."

"But I only had one nickel," Mr. Sutton said.

"Then put it with a dollar, my friend."

"I don't want to spend another dollar; I've already spent nine. It's the nickel that's no good."

A profound expression came over the manager's face.

The cashier looked at the little compartment full of nickels in the register drawer.

"If they're no good," she lamented innocently, ". . . we've got an awful lot of them. We always seem to have an awful lot of things when they're no good."

Mr. Jones overlooked this particular truth and presently raised his finger in the air with the authority of a railway signal arm and indicated that Mr. Sutton should follow him. Mr. Jones led the way back through aisles and looked sullenly at price marks.

"Certainly is odd," he muttered, scratching the hop of his bald head. "There must be something."

Twice they passed the cereals and pickles. Once, when Mr. Jones thought he had cornered the problem with the price of red birthday candles, he jumped with jubilation. Mr. Sutton sympathized when he punctured the man's exuberance by pointing out that the celluloid "one" had fallen to the floor.

"That's fifteen; not five," Mr. Sutton said.

"Oh, yes. So it is," the manager admitted calmly. "But there must be something."

At the end of scouring powders between mop fillers and shoe polish, he found it: a half-empty box of balls of twine rolled around cardboard cores.

"These," he said triumphantly, "are a nickel. I knew we had them some place."

He led Mr. Sutton brotherly by the arm over to the cashier.

"We had it," he advertised loudly. "Twine for one nickel."

Her face expressed her naive difficulty for comprehension; yet she had a point to make when she said, "But, Mr. Jones, that twine went up yesterday. It's six cents or two for eleven."

Mr. Jones shrunk with humiliation.

"Impossible," he cried.

"Maybe it's impossible, Mr. Jones," she said, "but yesterday you told me the price was six cents or two for eleven."

"Inflation!" he cursed.

"Precisely," Mr. Sutton said.

"I remember," the girl continued, "because you told me right after you put up the sign."

She indicated a sign which stated the dramatic aphorism of all twentieth century businesses: "We are fighting inflation."

"I remember, Mr. Jones, because a customer laughed at the time. He thought it was a joke, I guess. We are fighting it, aren't we, Mr. Jones?" Her inquiry rang with definite doubt.

Mr. Jones stood less than five and a half feet tall but weighed more than a hundred and eighty pounds and his axial position in the rim of curious customers drew the sweat from his forehead.

"Well," he said with an exhaustive breath, "we certainly are. We . . . we are even licking it. As of now, I am lowering the price of this twine to its original five cents."

A smile stretched blissfully across his chubby face. He turned to Mr. Sutton and said, "And you, sir, shall be the first to have the opportunity for saving at this rollback. Here is a ball of twine for only five cents."

Mr. Sutton was not certain of the exact details that followed. Since very little string had ever run through his fingers—except at Christmas when his Aunt Tourney sent him all her used holiday ribbon, twine and bits of scotch tape—he felt no need for hoarding it now. He would have spoken up, too, but it seemed such a trifling matter.

But when he looked for the nickel he had so carelessly tossed away, it had disappeared. It was embarrassing for the manager, too. They searched together in a wide arc while the trade watched. It somewhat resembled a worn-out Indian dance.

"Oh, the nickel!" the cashier said when she realized that Mr. Jones and Mr. Sutton were almost to their knees. "Some kid picked it up. I gave him five pennies for it and he put them all in the gum machine."

Lutheran Church—

Fall is always a good time to launch a vigorous church program, especially a drive for new members. People will have returned from vacation, school will open, and the torrid summer heat will cool somewhat. That is truly a time to be busy "about the Master's business."

Our church here in Thorsby is the only Lutheran church between Birmingham and Montgomery so you can see and appreciate the magnitude of the field that we will have to cover. We hope possibbly to recruit new members not only from Thorsby, but also from Jemison, Clanton, and the surrounding countryside.

The Lutheran church has a dynamic faith and message centerede in the teaching of justification by faith alone as taught in the Gospel of our Lord. Experience has shown time and time again that wherever and whenever the Lutheran messages have been proclaimed and understood, many have embraced it wholeheartedly. There are many in this area who are unchurched, or indifferent to the church; these we must find and convert because the Lord loves them also. Evangelism is the key to growth of any church because when a church ceases to evangelize, it begins to die.

Let us therefore work while it is yet day before the night cometh when no man can work.

Sunday School 10:00. The service 11:00. Everybody cordially invited.

Last week we noted some of our Lord's teaching concerning marriage and divorce. Now let us consider another very important responsibility relative to the home, viz. The Christian training of our children.

So many parents feel that they have fulfilled their obligation to their children if they send or compel them to go to church or Sunday School regardless of whether they themselves attend or not. Actually nothing could be farther from the truth than this.

Christian training is, first of all, the responsibility of the home (Eph. 6:4), while children are young (Proverbs 22:6). The Sunday School cannot accomplish in one hour a week what parents, by their words and deeds repudiate the other six days of the week. Remember parents, you have not fulfilled your Chrisian duty to your children if you do not go with them because later they will reason logically, "if mother or daddy didn't think it worth while to go to church or Sunday School, why should I?"

This Sunday get up and ready to go to Sunday School and church, put your Bible under your arm, take your children's hands, and all go to worship the Lord together.

Lutheran homecoming will be held this Sunday. The congregation will assemble at the church for regular services, after which we will go to the home of Miss Alma Lefstead where there will be dinner on the ground and Christian fellowship. All members, former members, and friends of the congregation are invited. Come and bring, if possible, a picnic lunch. You are cordially invited.

Dr. Nix drives up to the pasture and blows his car horn the cows immediately start lowing and begin going to the car, then Dr. Nix begins moving slowly, still blowing his car horn, toward the new pasture, with the cattle following and lowing. Of course, there are one or two cows that will not follow without a little switch help from Mr. Clapp, but what is two or three out of several hundred. KEEP AMERICA GREEN
..and you'll keep America strong

AMERICA is growing trees for its citizens to use and to enjoy. Her forests, and the industries they supply, produce 44 percent of the world's lumber, 43 percent of the world's pulp and paper and 58 percent of its plywood. If protected from fire, these forests will continue to produce the wood 150 million Americans need. Forest fire prevention is everybody's job. Always be careful with fire — avoid setting the woods on fire!

The American Forest Products Industries, Inc., reports that after more than a century of use Alabama's commercial forests are producing new crops of trees at a rate almost one-third faster than the national average.

SOURCE OF POTENT NEW WONDER DRUG IS SOUGHT IN SAMPLE OF ALABAMA'S SOIL

AUBURN, Aug. — Man's never-ending fight against disease was brought this week to Alabama as some of the nation's foremost scientists sought to determine whether samples of soil from this community might prove to be the source of a powerful new antibiotic, or "wonder drug."

Co-operating in the new project was the API Extension Service, which made the soil available at the request of the discoverers of the wonder drug aureomycin, one of the most effective antibiotics known to man.

The soil was scooped up from a honeysuckle mound growing around a Confederate monument here by P. O. Davis, Extension director, and J. C. Lowery, Extension agronomist. It has been sent to Pearl River, N. Y., where scientists of the Lederle Laboratories are processing it to determine whether it will yield a strain of micro-organisms which may result in the development of a new antibiotic.

The scientists selected Alabama as one of the first locations for sampling soil in their new worldwide search for a drug with a potential for saving hundreds of thousands of lives.

Lederle requested the aid of the API Extension Service in the project, it was reported, because of that agency's outstanding achievements in Alabama in helping thousands improve their living conditions through soil and crop improvements and its other allied programs. Lederle spokesmen pointed out that through the work of the Extension Service this state's cotton growers, for example, have attained in recent years one of the most remarkable records in the nation in improvement of their staple. Other work of the Extension Service, they added, has paid rich dividends throughout the state.

It was only a few years ago, incidentally, that Lederle Laboratories received from Missouri a sample of soil that was processed by its scientists. From this soil an interesting golden mold appeared. Test tube experiments produced amazing results.

It was found that the new mold effectively prevented the growth of staphylococci and streptococci (disease-causing organisms), and a variety of germs. This latter property was highly important in acting against a wide variety of diseases in both humans and animals. It was this golden mold that today is known over the world as aureomycin.

These scientists are convinced that somewhere in the world is a soil with a strain of micro-organisms that will prove as effective or more effective than aureomycin in the battle against disease. And it is their hope that the soil just taken from beneath the Confederate monument at Auburn may prove the goal of their search.

WAR ON DISEASE—P. O. Davis (left), director of the API Extension Service, and J. C. Lowery, Extension agronomist, scoop up a sample of soil from the base of a Confederate monument at Auburn. This soil will be processed and studied by scientists to determine whether it will yield a new antibiotic drug for use in man's never-ending fight against disease.

To The Voters Of Clanton From C. Fenn Jones

If permitted to do so by you and, there being no friction with my Council, I have concluded to devote four more years of my life as Mayor and continue our successful efforts in developing improvemtnts needed to make our lives and homes more comfortable and pleasant.

Councilmen C. Otto Jones, James Q. Wade, R. C. Williams, M. J. Bates, and John B. Deramus have served with me four years. Mr. DeRamus is retiring due to lack of time from his private business and W. Louie Smith of the Peoples Savings Bank is taking his place.

These gentlemen are unopposed for election to the City Council, September 15, and we are in full agreement on matters of vital interest to the City and are prepared to put into effect our plans giving Clanton four more years of good, honest, and progressive government.

The Natural Gas System, affecting all the people and the business interests of the City, is the greatest achievement of this administration and we are duly proud of it. I am glad to tell you the Alabama Mills is now preparing to convert from coal to natural gas for heat and power.

Frequently in the past, I have informed you through The Union-Banner and Chilton County News what we had done, were doing, and expected to do in the future and there is no use repeating in this statement.

However, it is timely to say the recent dry weather emphasized the necessity for a sewer treatment plant and the erection of one is in our program.

Enlargement of our water filter-[illegible] appeals very much needed, but this can possibly be avoided for the present if the waste of water can be prevented. Some of our paved streets need resurfacing and a city-wide street paving would be of great benefit to people living on unpaved streets.

A larger auditorium is also needed and will be enjoyed and appreciated by the people. If you have read the local papers ,you know already that our finance is in good conditin, but I repeat most earnestly that the affairs are in fine condition to be easily wrecked and ruined by mismanagement and wrong use of the money, and it would require many years to recover—meanwhile the taxpayers suffer. All improvements made and all equipment purchased are paid for. We do not borrow money and have reduced the debt $34,000.00.

I am pleased with the progress we have made during this term and hope you will authorize me by your vote to assist the present Council in carrying out our plans together for the next four years. To do this, you must vote. You cannot elect me by staying at home, but you can defeat me by doing so.

Respectfully,
C. FENN JONES.

To The Voters Of Clanton From J. B. Atkinson

When qualifying as a candidate for the office of Mayor of the City of Clanton, to be voted on in the General Municipal election, to be held on September 15, 1952, I was under the impression from the present Mayor that he would not be a candidate for re-election, which information was given me some few days before qualifying and acting upon that information I made commitments to a number of citizens that I would be a candidate at the proper time, and my entry in the race, as was stated in the Chilton County News last week, is not against the present Mayor.

Having served as a member of the Town Council and Mayor of the Town of Clanton from the early part of 1920 to October, 1928, during which time much progress was made in developing our town, which was due to the splendid cooperation existing among the Town officials and the citizenship. I feel that I can again, if honored with this office, cooperate with members of the Council and citizenship and all of its civic organizations for the progressiveness of our [illegible]

GROW MORE AND BETTER WINTER GRAZING CROPS

Auburn, Ala.—There are several things many Alabama farmers can do to grow more and better supplementary winter grazing crops.

"Of course," says D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist, "success will depend to a large extent upon the weather during the months of September, October, and November. But with usual weather conditions that prevail during these months, it will be best to plant a mixture rather than one kind of seed. The reason for planting a mixture is that if one of the crops fail the other will most likely succeed. And it is desirable to have a grass with a legume to help control bloat in cattle."

Harbor adds that another thing farmers can do is to plant several different mixtures for winter grazing. Also, it might be helpful to stagger seeding dates by planting some seed early, others a week or two later, and still others a little later.

HONEY ADDS ZEST TO SUMMER TREATS

For example, she says that a delicious fruit cup for the first or last course of a meal is made by ra[illegible]ng whole or diced canned or fresh fruits attractively, mixing honey with lemon juice and pouring it over the servings before chilling.

Miss Hulsey adds that honey ambrosia salad can be a cooling hot-weather treat. Slice peeled oranges and dip the slices in honey. Then dip in shredded coconut. Arrange the slices on salad plates — about five slices for each serving. Heap halves of berries in the center where the orange slices meet if desired. Pour a little honey over fruit in the center to make a light coating. Serve cold

VALUE OF A SOUND LAND-USE PROGRAM

Farmers know that a sound land-use program provides for cropping land in such a way that the soil will be held in place and its fertility maintained and improved.

And S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist, points out that the cropping system or rotation used on any given field will depend upon the slope, type, and conditions of the soil. However, regardless of the system in use, maximum use should be made of good, thick-growing ground cover. It will control erosion, provide forage for livestock, and build up the productivity of the soil.

NEW TELEPHONE DIRECTORIES DELIVERED

[illegible] were [illegible] rectories delivered

The new telephone directory contains many new and changed listings and other helpful telephone information and is easily distinguishable from the old grey-covered telephone book by its light green cover. A sufficient quantity of the new directories has been printed to supply every telephone subscriber and to allow for future telephone expansion

The classified section —yellow pages—contains listings for business telephone subscribers under headings alphabetized according to their businesses or professions. "The variety of classifications describing products, services, professions and businesses provides a convenient ready reference guide when you want to locate a firm or individual," Mr. Price pointed out

He requests that the old directory be discarded and that the new directory be referred to when telephone numbers are desired. Looking up the desired numbers helps to avoid the possibility of getting wrong numbers and saves time for both the calling and called parties. "Information" should be called only when the number you are seeking is not listed in the directory.

A Report From The Board On Chilton County's Proposed Hospital

Back in the Spring, your Hospital Board reported in detail to you through the County Newspapers and local radio station, WKLF, the status of your hospital project. At that time it was revealed that we had completed everything here that we could do as far as Chilton County was concerned. Your Hospital Board had held a meeting at which Mr. Clay H. Dean, Director of Hospital Planning, State Board of Health, was present. Mr. Dean had given us some encouragement that there was a possibility of obtaining Federal and State funds to aid us in the construction of our hospital. The decision was made by your [illegible]

In April, the County Board appeared before the State Board of Health in session in Montgomery and entered our plea for favorable consideration for funds for the present fiscal year, which began July 1st. Following this meeting, Mr. Dean reported the action of the State Board of Health to us in a letter dated April 28th, which stated they "postponed action on your project until a later date. During the meeting a number of projects were presented and after giving due consideration to the priority system prescribed by law and the expected amount of funds to be made available, several projects, all of which have a higher priority and for which applications were received prior to yours, were approved."

On Monday of this week, your Hospital Board met jointly with the Chilton County Board of Revenue and Control to consider our Hospital Project in its present status. Mr. Clay H. Dean was present at this meeting. In discussing the matter with Mr. Dean, it was learned that the Federal Appropriation for the current year from Congress was $75 million, or $10 million less than last year. Alabama's share of this appropriation was $2,674,198.00. This was about $400,000.00 less than we received last year. Eight projects were allocated funds in the state which took up this amount in full. Cities receiving funds were Gadsden, Brewton, Florence, Ensley, Russellville, Fayette, Enterprise and Eufaula. According to Mr. Dean, all of these projects had filed applications previous to Chilton County's application and were all "A" priority projects

When questioned as to pending applications which rated "A" priority and that were to be considered for allocations for the next fiscal year, which begins July 1st, 1953, Mr. Dean stated the following projects would be considered: Geneva, Arab, Jackson, Chilton. Assuming that Congress appropriates a like amount this coming year that was appropriated this year, and in view of the fact that the above four projects are all relatively small, we have an excellent chance for obtaining funds at that time.

Based on current estimates of cost of $600,000.00, the Federal share would be two-thirds of this, or $400,000.00. The State's share would be $60,000.00. This would leave $140,000.00 as Chilton County's share. By the time this is made, we will have approximately half this amount accumulated and would only have to borrow about $75,000 which could be repaid in three years

Mr Dean was questioned with regard to the operations of hospitals in small cities. He revealed that where the facilities had been in operation as much as a year or more, they were either breaking even or showing some profit. Those which had been in operation only a few months, were in some cases showing a slight deficit.

This report is submitted to inform the citizens of Chilton County of the status of your Hospital project and the Board welcomes any questions any individual may have regarding same. It is the opinion of the Board that it is wise to wait until the next appropriation is made and continue our efforts to obtain aid from Federal and State sources for our hospital.

EXERCISE

What is exercise? Does it mean to the sendentary worger thirty-six holes of golf the first time out? Or does it mean bowling ten lines the first time to get trim for the season? Unfortunately it does to many people, but these are only two sports of the many which give pleasure to children and adults alike.

Exercise can be considered in terms of a hobby,-that is any ga[illegible] that gives pl[illegible] to muscles that are not used ordinarily in every-day living, and provides a cheerful mental stimulus. But not all persons can engage [illegible] strenuous sports or activities requiring a great degree of energy and stamina. That is why the first step in using exercise wisely and moderately is a physical examination.

A good physical examination will reveal any condition that might either prevent or limit exercise. This might be a heart defect or nutritional inadequacies that would retard the body from meeting the strain called for in certain types of play.

While certain games are seasonal, exercise for the individual person should not be seasonal nor done in spurts. Exercise on a moderate scale can be maintained all year round, whether it be walking, bending or performing mild calisthenics.

What does intelligently planned and controlled exercise do? It [illegible]peeds up all the body processes [illegible] old cells [illegible] broken down; new cells [illegible] the blood flow is [illegible] ing is extended, and [illegible] ody functions are stimulated. Around OUR HOUSE

by Kathryn Tucker Windham

O, it was quiet and lonesome around our house the week the five year old went off to visit her aunt. It was her first venture away from home alone, and I was afraid she might be a bit homesick. Then as the days passed and she continued to be completely happy, I was afraid she didn't miss us at all.

While she was away, I went down one morning and had my long hair cut short, the first time it had been cut in years. And I kept wondering what the five-year-old would think of it.

The afternoon she got home, she came running to hug me, caught sight of my short locks, stopped suddenly and exclaimed,

"Mother! You look so new!"

Our neighbor down the street was very unhappy when her cucumber pickles turned out to look drab and faded. They tasted fine, but they certainly did not look at all appetizing.

Now she has learned that her pickles would have looked as good as they tasted if she had added a teaspoon of green vegetable coloring to each gallon of vinegar used in making the pickles.

Remember those heavy old sad-irons that used to press the wrinkles out of the family's clothes before the advent of the electric iron: Our next door neighbor has been [illegible]cting these old irons and transforming them into attractive book ends and door stops. All the transformation requires, she says, is some imagination and some paint.

Here's a sewing suggestion that should prove helpful: when turning up the hem of a dress, place a rubber band tightly around the yardstick at the proper place instead of marking the place with a pencil. The rubber band is much easier on the eyes than trying to see a pencil mark.

One of our neighbors has contended for years that dish washing is a man's chore, but she never has succeeded in convincing any men that she is right. Now, however, she claims to have found a strong argument to uphold her contention in the Old Testament.

She quotes from 11 Kings 21:13, "I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish." Her husband (he is going to surprise her with an electric dishwasher on her birthday) is not at all impressed by this quoting of Scripture.

Speaking of washing dishes, some statisticians have taken the time and trouble to figure out that the average homemaker handles six tons of dirty dishes per year. The figure sounds almost unbelievable until you look at the mountain of dishes in the sink after just one average Sunday dinner.

These same statisticians say that washing this accumulation of dishes will be simpler and faster if right handed women will stack their dishes on the right of the sink and drain them on the left. Left-handed persons, of course, should reverse the process.

For a tasty main salad that may or may not cut down on dishwashing, soften a tablespoon of gelatin in 1-4 cup of cold water. Add a can of hot chicken noodle soup and stir until gelatin dissolves. When mixture begins to thicken, add a can of flaked tuna and some choped onion. Chill until firm and serve on letuce leaves.

JOHNNY IS A HERO

By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

A MOMENT after Johnny decided to speak to the girl in the cocky gray hat who sat across the aisle from him in the sleeper, the train stopped at a watering tank and bandits entered the car. Johnny saw a chance to make a hero of himself.

Since they had left Chicago he had been watching the girl in the cocky gray hat and trying to think up some means of striking up an acquaintance without appearing bold. Once or twice he had caught her eye: her expression was neither inviting nor cold. Yet Johnny hesitated. He didn't want to make any mistakes. This girl was rare among the girls he knew. He wanted to make an impression.

Presently an idea occurred to him. Why not mistake her for somebody else? Silvia Farhi, for example. Silvia Farhi was Hollywood's most recent sensation. The girl across the aisle resembled her. He could say to her: "Excuse me. I've been watching you. I knew I'd seen you before. You're Silvia Farhi." That would flatter her and it would explain his constant observance of her.

A bandit with a gun in his hand was coming down the aisle. Johnny thrust out his foot and the bandit tripped. As he went down, Johnny hit him a terrific blow on the side of the jaw. Instantly pandemonium broke loose inside the car. There was a lot of feminine screaming and hoarse male shouting. A gun went off. The aisle was suddenly packed with people.

Johnny took the girl's arm. "This way, Miss Farhi," he said quietly. "There must be more of these chaps around. We'd better get out."

He fought his way through the crowd to the door, holding on to her arm. Another shot sounded. Johnny glimpsed two more bandits. The platform beyond the door he was opening was empty.

Outside there was a huge water tank, a tiny dwelling house and the desert. There were two cars parked beside the dwelling.

Dragging the girl, Johnny sprinted for one of the cars, thrust her inside and trod on the starter. A man in a blue serge suit, holding an automatic, came running toward them. The car leaped ahead. The man with the gun stopped and fired. A bullet splintered the rear window. Johnny glanced at the girl. Her face was white, but she was grim-lipped.

"Hurt?" he asked.

She shook her head. "Where are we going?"

"To the next town, notify the authorities, pick up the train there. If we stayed we'd lose everything we had and probably get hurt. There were a dozen of those lads."

He hadn't seen more than three, but he wanted to make the situation as dramatic as possible. He wanted the girl to think of him as a hero.

They tore along at a terrific pace. Johnny glanced into the rear-view mirror. Far, far behind a black speck was following them. He shoved the accelerator to the floor.

"No danger of them catching us," he said comfortingly. "The[illegible] up after a minute." He grinned. "[illegible] this happened when it did."

"I was just about to speak to you. You're Silvia Farhi. I used to know you when we were kids."

"Oh!" She seemed on the point of saying something. Johnny thought oh, well, she's probably too scared to talk. Anyway, as long as she doesn't explain, we'll have something in common.

He glanced behind again. The black speck had grown larger. This puzzled him. They must think that the girl or himself was carrying a lot of worthwhile jewelry and money.

"They're getting nearer," the girl said.

"Forget it. The next town's less than 10 miles. Can't possibly catch us before then."

The speedometer held at a steady 72. The car was small, but the road stretched ahead smooth and straight. Johnny tried to think of something to say. He didn't want the acquaintance to end once they reached the town.

"Personally," he said, "I'm getting a bang out of this. Real wild-west stuff. The train ride was becoming boring."

She didn't answer. Her head was turned and her cheeks were whiter still. Johnny saw that the black speck had cut the distance between them in half.

A moment later they heard the spat of automatics.

"They're nearer," the girl cried. "They're almost on top of us and they're shooting! Oughtn't we to stop?"

Johnny bent over the wheel. This, he thought, was his chance to make himself a hero, if ever.

"Not a chance! We'll make it. There's the town ahead!"

But distances in that country were deceiving. The car behind them was only 50 yards in the rear when they passed the first outlying building. A bullet crashed through the windshield. Flying glass struck Johnny in the face. Hot blood coursed down his cheeks. He swore, gripping the wheel. But it wasn't any use. He knew he was going to faint. He yelled to the girl, and then slumped forward . . .

Johnny returned to consciousness in a hospital. Outside, the desert lay hot and still. A nurse came in and stared at him proudly. She had a newspaper which she handed to him. Johnny read the headlines:

"Plot to kidnap Silvia Farhi, screen star, twarted by youth from Chicago. Miss Farhi, returning incognito to Hollywood, recognized by John Hallam and saved from becoming a victim of one of the most dastardly crimes of the year . . . Miss Farhi continues her journey by air. Hallam in hospital. Youth invited to visit screen star at her Los Angeles home."

Johnny grinned. He wondered what she thought when he had made that crack about playing together when they were kids.

Homecoming At Lutheran Church

The homecoming at the Lutheran Church on last Sunday was well attended and everybody had a most enjoyable day. The weather was perfect and the change from the extreme heat made folks come out all the more. The church was decorated for the service with red gladiolis and tall white candles arranged very effectively. Miss Sue Bratton of Jemison sang a solo and the offertory was sung by Mrs. Thos. Rogers and Miss Ruth Peterson who sang a duet.

Throughout the service the organ and piano were used, with Miss Shirley Petersen at the piano and Miss Naemi Turnquist at the organ. After the service a picnic dinner was enjoyed at the home of Miss [illegible]a Leistead. Tables were placed [illegible] the lawn, and the bountiful din[illegible] was served 'buffet style.'

At 2:30 a singing was held at the church and was well attended. GENUINE

By

Wilkinson

SHE CAME into my office one day in June. It was hot, and I was out of sorts, anyway. Old Man Finestein of Magnificent Pictures had told me to dig up a lass to play a sweet-tempered, innocent country girl in his latest film. Something genuine, he said. That made me mad. There wasn't a sweet-tempered, innocent country girl in the whole of Hollywood. Did the man think I was a magician?

She stood in front of my desk and dug a toe into the floor and looked at me shyly. She was wearing a gingham dress and her hair was done in braids down her back. I smirked. This kid had learned from somewhere that I needed a part for Finestein's pictures and she'd dolled herself out in what she thought was a sweet-tempered-country-girl costume and was applying for the job. It kind of disgusted me, pulling an old gag like that. She must be pretty desperate, I thought.

"You're cuckoo," I said, "if you think anything innocent ever looked like that."

Her eyes grew round. She didn't seem to get it. "My name's Mary Smith," she recited. "I'm from New England, where I played the leading role in—"

"Sure, sure," I interrupted. "You were the heroine in the high school senior play in West Bicycle, New Hampshire. They told you you were good, so you came out here to give Hollywood a break. Decent of you."

"It wasn't the senior play," she corrected. "It was the Village Dramatic society. And it wasn't in West Bicycle, New Hampshire. It was North Valley, Vermont. And Mr. Emery did say I was good."

"But even so," I helped out," you wouldn't have come to wicked Hollywood unless the mortgage was due on the old homestead and your poor mother was about to be tossed out on her ear."

She dropped her eyes. "Mr. Emery must have written you about it. He said he would. I—I felt so ashamed I asked him not to." She looked up eagerly. "You have got a job for me, haven't you? I—I can play most anything."

I felt like swearing, and did. She blushed. It was the blush that got me. If the kid could pull an act like that—even down to blushing—I figured she was the one for the part.

"You win," I said. "I'll give you a try, anyway. But you're cockeyed if you think that rig had anything to do with it. I'll tell my secretary to give you a note to the wardrobe department. They'll fit you out in what a real New England girl should wear. Report to stage 5 in an hour."

It was a week later that I met Finestein. "Terry," he said, "you're a genius. How do you do it?"

"It's a gift," I said. "Do what?"

"Pick them out. That girl! She's wonderful! She's genuine!"

"What girl?" I said.

"Mary Smith. The girl from Vermont. She's going to make that picture box-office. Terry, old boy, where do you find 'em?"

"Oh, her!" I said, and remembered the doubts and fears I'd entertained after taking her on. Once or twice I'd been afraid Finestein might fire me. Well, it looked as though the thing had turned out pretty well. "Listen," I said. "She's still not calling herself Mary Smith, is she?"

Finestein nodded. I laughed. "That kid believes in following through. I wonder what her real name is and how she had the nerve to pull that gag."

Once or twice after that I went down to the lot to watch Mary Smith work. She was doing all right. To see her act you'd think she couldn't help being shy and unsophisticated. She was pretty, too. I considered asking he to go out to dinner, and changed my mind. It's against the rules to take out a player when she's doing a part.

A month later the picture was finished and I thought of calling up Mary. But I didn't have to. That morning she came into my office wearing the same gingham dress.

She had come, she said, to thank me for being so kind to her.

"Forget it, kid," I said. "Stick around. Maybe I can do something else for you."

"Oh, thank you," she said. "I really couldn't. I've made enough money to pay off the mortgage and I'm going home and help mama raise chickens."

I began to get mad. "Cut out the acting," I said. "It's all over. Be yourself for awhile. Say, I'll bet you're all right when you're yourself."

But it didn't do any good. Mary Smith managed a shy and pretty blush and turned and went out. I grunted. Well, let her cool off for awhile. She'd be coming back soon enough for another job.

But she didn't. The summer passed and the winter. I thought about her once in awhile. Some other studio must have picked her up.

That spring I tried looking her up, but without any luck. Finestein was sending me east to look up some country for his new picture, "Haunted Woman." It was a good story, and we planned to do big things with it.

It was hot in New York, and one week-end I drove up country on a scouting expedition. The following Monday I found myself in Vermont—staring at a crossroad sign marked "North Valley."

I had a kind of queer feeling when I turned down that road. I came to a village with a general store. A man answered my question. "You go down that way a piece and turn left. It's the first house on the right. You can't miss it."

"I didn't Mary herself, wearing a gingham dress and a sunbonnet, came out to see what I wanted. She had a basket full of eggs. Her eyes grew round as saucers at sight of me.

"Well, of all things!" she said. "You—came all the way back here just to find me." The old blush came into her cheeks. "Oh, I ! hoped you would. Please come up to the house and have some buttermilk."

I did.

Dawdle Dell Corresponder

ONE OF THEM cultist fellows wearing nothing but a fig leaf came to town the other day. He told Judge Crooker that the leaf was all the clothing that God, according to the Bible, had provided for man. Judge asked him how he had traveled as far as Dawdle Dell without being arrested, unattired like that; and the man replied that he had just pretended that he was running for President. He was carrying a suitcase in which there was a kimona. Judge asked him why he didn't put it on to cover his nakedness. "I was afraid it would attract too much attention," replied the man. After the court had corrected God's oversight and provided the man some clothing. Judge put the man to raking leaves on the court house lawn, saying I hope he gets good and tired of leaves. But the last we heard of the fellow, he blew town dressed in a maple-leaf kiltie, and those who saw him say he looked just like President Truman on a fishing trip.

DO YOU SOMETIMES wonder what combinations in table settings are most effective? Here are some settings which may serve as a guide for the table accessories you already have or may want:

With a pink cloth and napkins, you'll like white china with a pattern of violets or other small purple flower. Use amethyst or violet goblets and, as a centerpiece, a low silver bowl of violets or asters.

Copper accessories are effective with chartreuse earthenware dishes against a plaid linen cloth. Use emerald green hand-blown stemware.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Ice Cream Pie
(Serves 6)

2 tablespoons milk
1¾ cups fine macaroon cooky crumbs
1 pint chocolate ice cream
1 pint strawberry ice cream
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Mix milk with macaroon crumbs. Form shell by pressing mixture over bottom and sides of 8-inch pie pan. Bake 10 minutes in a moderate (350°F.) oven. Cool. Chill about 15 minutes. Line shell with chocolate ice cream, then fill with strawberry ice cream. Decorate edge and center of pie with whipped cream.

Lots of yellow or orange flowers available for a centerpiece? Use them with a rust colored cloth and gray and brown pottery dishes. Goblets can be amber.

Here's a very smart modern setting: black and white printed cloth and undecorated white china in a simple modern design. Tumblers should be of cinnamon brown glass, or clear glass with emerald ball-foot.

Natural linen cloths look pretty with chocolate brown napkins. The dishes should match napkins, and glasses may be amethyst. A centerpiece of pink geraniums, asters or other rose-pink blooms are good.

Black and green linen cloths call for white earthenware dishes, with perhaps, some green or ivy borders. Milk-glass tumblers look effective, and so does a matching epergne holding red flowers on top layer and white on the lower.

BEST WAY TO CAN TEMPTING PEACHES

The best way to can peaches is to make a thin or medium syrup before preparing fruit.

"To make the right amount," says Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservation specialist, "allow one cup of syrup for each quart jar. Of course, the syrup should remain hot until used."

Miss Curtis says to scald ripe peaches, place in cold water to cool, and then place them in a dry container and begin peeling. As the peach is peeled and stone removed, place it in the jar. When one layer is placed in the jar cover with syrup. This will prevent peaches from darkening. Rmove air bubbles and process pint and quart jars in a waterbath canner for 15 minutes.

Grazing Crops Make Ala. Green In Winter Months

Alabama farmers are making more and more fields green in winter by increasing their acreage of grazing crops. More acres of grazing crops mean more livestock, which bring more income and better standard of living.

Farmers are planting more of the various grazing crops each year. Even though all of these crops may not be green in winter, those that produce sods or thick cover provide a blanket that protects the land in winter and improves it.

Alabama farmers may find it helpful to think of their year-around grazing system as consisting of three or four parts. These parts are (1) the clover-grass permanent pasture, if there is suitable land on the farm; (2) substitute crops for the clover-green permanent pasture; (3) supplemenatry winter grazing crops, and (4) supplementary summer grazing crops.

The colver-grass permanent pasture is the basis around which the year-around grazing system is built. Land suited to this kind of pasture is low, moist, fertile bottom land or fertile clay upland soil. The clover-grass permanent pasture usually fails on poor, eroded, droughty, sandy upland soils.

Substitute crops can be used on farms where there is not enough land suited to the clover-grass permanent pasture mixture. These are called substitute crops because in most areas they can be grazed during about the same time as the clover-grass permanent pasture. Some of the best of these crops are sericea, alfalfa, kudzu, and Johnson grass.

Supplementary winter grazing crops are used during periods in the winter when the clover-grass permanent pasture, or the substitute crops for it, are not providing enough grazing. Some of the best supplementary winter grazing crops are crimson clover-ryegrass mixture, vetch-oat mixture, oats alone, Caley peas alone or in a mixture with oats, bur clover and subterranean clover. Tall fescue-white clover mixture is good on wet areas in some parts of the state.

Supplementary summer grazing crops are used in periods of drought, during the summer when the clover-grass permanent pasture, or the substitute for it is not furnishing enough grazing. Some of the best of these crops are sericea, kudzu, alfalfa, Sudan grass, Johnson grass, annual lespedeza, Pearl millet, otootan soybeans.

It is possible for almost any farmer in Alabama to take the types of pasture plants mentioned above and fit them together to provide year around grazing during most [illegible]. If the farmer has enough of these various types of grazing crops on the farm for the number of livestock kept, he will be able to harvest enough hay as surplus growth from these pasture crops to store and feed during periods when it might not be possible to have grazing.

Get More Winter Grazing From A Vetch-Oat Mixture

Almost every farmer in Chilton County can plant a vetch-oat mixture to get more winter grazing.

"For this grazing combination," explains County Agent M. R. Glasscock, "can be planted in the middles of cotton, corn, or peanuts."

The vetch-oat mixture will grow well on any soil that grows good crops of cotton or corn. The grazing combination needs to be planted between September 1st and October 15th.

Farmers were advised to fertilize each acre in one of the following ways:

1. Apply 700 pounds of 4-10-7 before planting and dress with 100 pounds of nitrate of soda or its [illegible] or
2. Appply 500 pounds of 0-14-14 before planting and top dress with 250 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent as soon as plants are up, or
3. Apply 400 pounds of superphosphate and 80 pounds of nuriate of potash before planting and top dress with 250 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent as soon as plants are up, or
4. Apply 800 pounds of basic slag and 80 pounds of muriate of potash before planting and top dress with 250 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent as soon as plants are up.

Be sure to inoculate the vetch seed, cautions M. R. Glasscock. Use double the amount of inoculant recommended by the manufacturer. Do not mix inoculated vetch seed with superphosphate or mixed fertilizer.

Plant 20 pounds of inoculated hairy vetch or smooth vetch seed and three to four bushels of oat seed per acre.

In each cotton or corn middle, drill three rows with a three-row grain drill or knocker distributor. Seed may be painted by broadcasting them and covering lightly with [illegible] or plows and sweeps run shallow.

FIN-FAN ITEMS

Central Alabama fishing prospects are improving each day. All Coosa and Tallapoosa Lakes are reported in great shape and nice catches of Bream, Black Bass and Stripes are being taken. Early mornings and late afternoons are still the most productive time, and flies, plugs and live minnows are the best baits.

Last week three new names were added to the Whooper Catchers' growing membership list. Joe Smith, Owner, Log Cabin Beach Fishing Camp, below Mitchell Dam, reported: B. N. Minshew, 1538 East Lake Boulevard, Tarrant City, used a Chugger Spook in the upper reaches of Lake Jordan to haul in a 5 lb. 3 1-2 ounce Largemouth Bass.

A. J. Powell, Owner, River Road Store, Higgins Ferry Road, reports: A. M. Garrison, 709 Braddock Avenue, Birmingham, fished the mouth of Cargile Creek, Lake Mitchell, with a Red and White Bomber and creeled a fine string of Smallmouth Bass—the largest weighed 3 pounds 7 ounces.

Edgar Hardiman, Manager, Riverview Fishing Lodge, Lake Lay, reports: Henry Yeackle, Route 5, Clanton, did some Bream fishing with red worms and had extra good luck. Henry caught several Shellcrackers that weighed 10 ounces and the largest weighed in at 11 ounces.

Mrs. George Pope, Clanton, and Hamp Harris, Birmingham, caught nice strings of Stripe right in front of their summer cottage. They fished from the bank and used Brown May Flies as bait.

Yes Sir! Fishing prospects are improving and we hope to hear from [illegible] new Whopper Catchers right [illegible] Just one more week left to [illegible]e your bid for the August cash [illegible]e, so enter your catch—a small fish could win.

CHIEF ALAPOCO S[illegible]

[illegible] sportsman—live by this pledge [illegible] an American to save and faithfully to defend from waste the natural resources of my country . . . its soil and minerals, its forests, waters and wild life."

Confederate coinage was a silver half-dollar which was produced at the New Orleans mint in 1861. Only four pieces were minted. On the obverse was the Confederate shield with a Liberty Cap with a wreath of sugar cane and cotton branches. On the reverse side was the regular United States die.

More Acres In Caley Peas Than Ever Before

There are more acres of Caley peas on Chilton County farms than ever before. But there is a need for an even greater acreage.

The Caley pea is the outstanding reseeding winter legume used for winter grazing and soil improvement on the lime soils and certain other soils of this County, County Agent M. R. Glasscock told farmers today. He said that more farmers will be successful with Caley peas if they do a better job of planting the crop and make annual applications of fertilizer.

Caley peas do best on the lime and moderately acid soils of the Black Belt. They make good growth on bottomlands that are too wet for clovers and small grain in the Chilton County area.

September 1st to October 15th was given as the right planting periods.

If land is infested with weeds, break and disk it several weeks ahead of planting so that the seedbed will be firmed by rains. Never plant peas on a fresh, loosely prepared seedbed.

On acid soils apply one to two tons of lime per acre. Then use either (1) 400 pounds of 0-14-14 per acre, or (2) 40 to 50 pounds of muriate of potash plus either 200 to 300 pounds of superphosphate or 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag per acre.

Inoculate seed with twice the amount of vetch inoculant recommended by the manufacturer. Ke[illegible] inoculated seed in the [illegible]de and cover them immediately after sowing.

Plant at least 40 pounds of unscarified seed per acre. It is better to use 80 to 100 pounds. If weather conditions are favorable, better stands are obtained with scarified seed. Seed must not be over-s[illegible]fied. Plant with gr[illegible] broadcast seed and disk light[illegible] may be drilled between [illegible]

The flag of the Confederate States legally established was the "stars and bars" which was adopted by the Convention of Confederate States at Montgomery, Ala. on March 4, 1861 the same day Lincoln became Presiden[illegible] Sattes. It was designed by M[illegible] Orren Randolph Smith of Lousburg, N. C. and was reported to the convention by William Porcher Miles, president of North Carolina College. Later this design was changed since it resembled the national flag.

TAXES CERTAIN ON LABOR DAY—BUT DEATH CAN BE AVOIDED

The Labor Day week-end will be no holiday from taxes, but death can be avoided, W. B. Timmons, Secretary-Manager of the Alabama Motoirsts Association commented in urging motorists to take extra care in the three-day motoring spree.

He predicted 516,000 Alabama motorists will drive 64,500,000 miles over the three-day week-end, burn up 4,300,000 gallons of gasoline, and pay $344,000 in state and federal gasoline taxes.

"The world knows us as making automobiles our way of life," he said, "but if we don't watch out automobiles will become just as well known as our way of death."

"Death may be inevitable—but it doesn't have to come on the highways this week-end unless we make it so," he said. "Taxes, of course, are a different matter."

"Even the careful driver won't beat the tax collector, but drive with extra care and you can beat the Grim Reaper."

Reduce Danger Of Cattle Bloat

More grazing not [illegible] finer cattle, but also more danger from bloat.

There are several ways to reduce bloat:

1. Never turn cattle on a green grazing crop until they are full [illegible] dry feed
2. Always plant some kind of grass with legumes that are to be grazed.

Mill payrolls, taxes paid by forest industries, wood harvests, useful forest products—all can be counted up in hard cash. It's harder to put a price tag on recreation—fishing, hunting, picnicking—and harder still to compute in dollars and cents the vital part forests play in soil and water conservation. Clover-Ryegrass Mixture Proves Best In Chilton

A mixture of crimson clover and Italian ryegrass rates tops in this county as a winter grazing crop.

Although the crops requires more care in planting than some others, it pays off in the long run because it furnishes excellent grazing over a long period of time. County Agt. M. R. Glasscock pointed out these facts in urging farmers to plant a greater acreage this year. At the same time he cautioned that a good planting job must be done.

Plant this mixture only on good well-drained upland. It usually does not succeed on poor, eroded soils or deep sands.

This recommended planting date in Chilton County is late August to September 15th. Planting must be done on time to obtain early grazing.

Land preparation is extremely important for success with this clover-grass winter grazing mixture. Turn land in late June or early July and leave in rough until after a good rain. Then disk or harrow the land often enough to control grass and weeds completely until time to plant.

If the land is acid and has not been limed in recent years, apply lime about the middle of July at the rate of one ton per acre on sandy soils and two towns per acre on clay soils.

Farmers were urged to use one of the fellowing methods of fertilizing each acre of the mixture:

1: Use 700 pounds of 4-10-7 per acre before planting and top dress with 100 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent as soon as plants are up. or

2. Use 500 pounds of 0-14-14 before planting and top dress with 250 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent as soon as plants are up. or

3. Use 400 pounds of superphosphate and 80 pounds of muriate of potash before planting and top dress with 250 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent as soon as [illegible] are up.

[illegible] xed fertilizer should be applied at the last disking before planting. Where this mixture is grown on the same land over a period of three years or more the top dressing may not be necessary since the clover should furnish plenty of nitrogen.

Do a good job of inoculating the crimson clover seed. Use twice the amount of commercial inoculant recommended by the manufacturer. It will be safe to add to this some inoculated soil from a field where good crimson clover grew last yea[illegible]

On each acre plant 20 to 30 pounds of high-germinating crimson [illegible] ver seed and the same amount of Italian ryegrass.

It is extremely important to do a good job of planting. Freshen the seed-bed lightly with section harrow or weeder. Divide the inoculated crimson clover seed into two equal parts and cross-sew with whirlwind-type seeder. Plant the Italian ryegrass seed in the same manner. Cover the seed immediately.

The seed may be planted with a sultipacker equipped with a seeding atachment. If there is not plenty moisture in the soil it may be advisable to run a cultipacker or roller, then sow the seed, and cover by again running the cultipacker or roller.

VETERANS MAKE POULTRY TOUR

On August 19 all the Chilton County Veterans Farm Trainees met and as a group they visited two poultry farms.

First they met at Mr. McRae's [illegible] 000 broilers being grown off. Mr. McRae explained in detail his entire broiler operation. He explained the buying, brooding and marketing of broilers.

After leaving Mr. McRae's farm, the trainees went to Maplesville to Mr. Noah Latham's farm. There they saw his "Egg Factory."

Mr. Latham has 1,000 laying cages with [illegible] Strain White [illegible] in them. Mr. Latham explained his entire operation. He gave exact figures on the cost of the house, laying cages, and the birds.

Mr. Latham explained his feeding routine and the method he will use to obtain replacements. He stress[ed] the importance of plenty of fresh water. Several questions were asked and Mr. Latham answered and explained every one of them in detail.

Several trainees in Chilton County are very interested in poultry, and they feel that these two poultry farms visited on the field trip were very interesting as well as being educational.

Proper Seed Inoculation Pays Off In Long Run

Proper inoculation of seed pays. So County Agent M. R. Glasscock this week outlined three ways to do the job. He said:

"1. Mix seed will soil from a field which has grown a good crop of a legume of the same kind as that being inoculated within the past year or two.

"2. Use commercial inoculants.

Use both inoculated soil and commercial inoculant. This is the surest way of getting good inoculation."

Then the agent offered these suggestions for successfully inoculating legume seed:

"1. Be sure to get the kind of inoculant, but use twice the amount of inoculant recommended.

"2. Plant inoculated seed at the [illegible] time, regardless of [illegible] soil may be very dry. [illegible] not injured in dry [illegible] seed are well covered. Green Fields In Winter Increase Total Production

Green fields in winter make farmers more money by increasing total production of the farm.

A good crop of winter-legumes turned ahead of corn increases the yield by about 40 bushels per acre if good production practices are used. Winter crops grazed by cattle are worth as much as $100 per acre. Perennial legumes, such as white clovers or alfalfa, may reduce by 50 per cent the amount of grain feed required by hogs.

Our rainfall and mild climate are most favorable for having green grazing during every month of most winters. Perhaps Alabama leads all other states in the percentage of its land that can be green in winter. When farmers in states north of us have their live-stock housed and are feeding harvested feed, Alabama farmers can have their livestock grazing green fields.

Every Alabama farmer can have green fields in winter, no matter what kind of farming he does. A farmer who has most of his land in cotton and corn can grow winter legumes such as vetches, Austrian winter peas, and lupines in rotation with these crops. A farmer who grows some cotton and peanuts can [illegible] crop otations and use the remainder of the land to produce grazing and [illegible] crops for livestock.

[illegible] farmers need to grow more green cover in the winter to enable them to use more land. With our great number of good green winter crops, there should be no idle acres.

Labor shortages are striking more and more farms. Many farmers are getting out of this difficulty by planting more land in grazing crops. They are letting live-stock do as much of the crop harvesting as possible, thus cutting labor needs. Of [illegible] farmers must harvest [illegible] ditions.

Pastures, Corn Make Profit From Hogs

Green pastures and corn are a profitable combination for hogs in this county. Many farmers grow white or Ladino clover, alone or in mixtures, or crimson clover, vetch, and oats for hogs to graze while eating corn in the field. In the summer the hogs may be on kudzu, alfalfa, or otootan soybeans.

About 100 pounds of pork are produced for each seven bushels of [illegible] if hogs get the right [illegible] ig and proper supple- [illegible]

[illegible] report that they are getting from 500 to 1,000 pounds or more of pork per acre from corn when hogs have good green legume [illegible] to eat along with the corn.

Farm Pond Offers Many Advantages

The farm pond is used primarily to store and provide water for livestock in areas where other sources of water may be insufficient or may fail during periods of drought.

While this original purpose of the farm pond still accounts for a large percent of the ponds now being constructed, it is by no means the only benefit that can be derived from a properly located and well-constructed farm pond. In addition to furnishing stock water there are other considerations involving wildlife, recreation, fire protection, and orchard spraying, directly associated with farm ponds.

The stocking of ponds with game fish for both food and the sport of fishing has been an accepted practice and long encouraged by conservation agencies. Next to furnishing stock water, the raising of fish is probably the next important phase of the farm pond. After a day's work, an evening of twilight fishing on the farm pond has often afforded moments of relaxation to members of the farmer's family and friends.

The farm pond not only affords good fishing but also provides an environment for wild duck, many of which have been taken from blinds located along the shore. Occasionally wild geese will make use of such facilities. Muskrats, cottontail rabbits and other four-footed game will inhabit the shoreline and adjacent area if adequate attention has been given to providing the necessary food and cover plantings.

Fire among the farm buildings is always a threat and feared from one source or another by the farmer. Fire fighting equipment is very often available or can be provided but an adequate source of water supsupply is too often lacking. If an adequate site is available within reasonable distance from the farm buildings the construction of a good farm pond may be the means of saving the buildings from a fire started by lightning, defective electrical wiring, children playing with matches or some other source.

In the fruit raising areas, farm ponds have been used to provide a source of water for orchard spraying purposes. Conveniently located and equipped with the necessary appurtenances, such ponds can be a cheap and efficient means of furnishing spray water.

Another use to which the farm pond may be put is that of furnishing irrigation water to the farm garden. The average farm pond is too small to be of any consequence in irragating large tracts, but water supplied from a pond can be used to good advantage in getting most out of the small farm garden.

Farm ponds are not difficult to build and maintain provided a few fundamental rules are observed and followed. By and large, the tendency in building farm ponds is to locate them below watersheds which will require large and expensive spillways without which they would soon be washed out by excessive storm water. Ordinarily the earth dam behind which the pond is formed should not have more than thirty acres of grass or timber covered land in the watershed from which it receives run off water.

Grass or timber cover is very necessary, or adequate erosion control practices used if silting of the pond is to be preyented. The average size of the successful farm pond watershed will probably run somewhere between five to twenty acres

The pond should be located in an area having impervious soils. Too often ponds have been built by farmers only to find they would not hold water. Areas having soils of heavy clay, clay loam, or clay mixtures provide the best pond site and materials for constructing the dam. If there are sand and gravel, or limestone rock layers in the vicinity of a proposed pond, there is more than an even chance that the pond will be a failure due to the loss of water through the pervious soil conditions.

All farm ponds should have adequate spillways to take care of overflow when the pond is full. The more desirable spillways are those composed of a combination of six to ten inch pipe and a grassed waterway when the capacity of the pipe is exceeded. One has only to note many washed out ponds throughout the countryside not having adequate spillway facilities to realize the importance of the spillway featuer.

The earth dam should have flat slopes of two feet of horizontal distance for each foot of rise on the downstream side. On the water side of the dam the slopes should be three feet of horizontal distance for each foot of use. The flatter slope is necessary on the water side because of the tendency of the earth dam material to slough down under water if steeper slopes are used. The top width of the dam should not be less than eight feet. The farm pond should never be less than seven feet deep over at least one-third of the ponded area. The site upon which the dam is placed should be cleared of all soil, brush, rubbish, etc., before construction of the earth dam is started in order to provide a good tight control between the earth dam and original ground.

When the pond has been completed, livestock should be fenced out since the earth dam and shore line developments would obviously be damaged from cattle trampling. A stock tank below the dam will furnish them with clear water.

Plant Winter Grazing On Bermuda Sods

Those Bermuda grass pastures on Chilton County farms should be used the year around by planting winter grazing on them.

In pointing out that Bermuda grass sod is an excellent place to grow winter grazing, County Agent M. R. Glasscock this week said hundreds of farmers in this county have acres on which such a program can be successful.

Many of our Bermuda grass sods are not productive because they are not properly fertilized. By producing winter grazing on these Bermuda grass sods, farmers will not only get good grazing but will also have better Bermuda during spring, summer and fall.

If the soil is acid, apply in the summer or early fall one ton of lime per acre on sandy soils and two tons per acre on clay soils.

In the fall seed the Bermuda grass sod on upland to reseeding crimson clover or manganese bur clover. Plant white clover on Bermuda grass in late September or early October.

Fertilize by broadcasting ahead of land preparation with 50 to 75 pounds of muriate of potash and 800 to 1000 of basic slag.

After applying fertilizer, disk the land during early October with a disk harrow.

It was recommended that growers plant on each acre 20 to 25 pounds of inoculated reseeding manganese bur clover seed, or 100 to 125 lbs. or manganese seed in the bur. The seeding rate for white clover is two to three pounds per acre.

Cover the seed very lightly with Otherwise, a weeder or section harrow mad be used for this job.

Don't Overlook Alfalfa As A Green Crop

On suitabel soil alfalfa is one of the best crops to make a field green in winter in Chilton County, according to M. R. Glasscock, county agent. Alfalfa is "king" of hays and an excellent grazing crop for all types of livestock, particularly hogs and poultry.

The main production practices that should be followed to grow alfalfa successfully are:

1. Plant on adapted soil; that is, soil of high fertility and well-drained.

2. Do a good job of land preparation. This means turning the land in late June or early July and harrowing and disking it often enough to control grass and weeds until time to plant.

3. Apply the necessary amount of liming material on all soil, except the lime soils of the Black Belt.

4. Use plenty of the right kind of fertilizer.

5. Use the recommended variety of alfalfa. Oklahoma or Kansas Common varieties are recommended for all sections of the state.

6. Plant on time.

7. Plant plenty of seed. Twenty-five pounds per acre are recommended

8. Do a good job of planting. Double inoculate the seed and go over the land ahead of planting with a section harrow. Then broadcast the seed and cover with a roller. A roller equipped with a seeding attachment is good for planting.

Alfalfa should not be grazed until after January 1 following seeding in the fall.

PILOT FLIES THUNDERJETS IN KOREA

Fifth Air Force, Korea.—1st Lt. Ellis E. Stanley, Verbena, Ala., is one of the U. S. Air Force F-84 Thunderjet pilot to be assigned recently to the veteran 136th Fighter Bomber Wing in Korea.

Cpl. John B. Carter, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Carter of Stanton, Ala., is serving with the 25th Infantry Division in Korea. Carter is an assistant platoon sergeant with the 25th Division's 65th Combat Engineer Battalion. A graduate of Maplesvilel High School, he has been in Korea since last May.

Airman Charles Donald Cagle, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Parker Cagle, Cooper, Ala., is completing his AF basic airmen indoctrination course at Lackland Air Force Base, the "Gateway to the Air Force."

His basic training is preparing him for entrance into Air Force technical training and for asisgnment in specialized work. The course includes a scientific evaluation of his aptitude and inclination for following a particular vocation and career.

Camp Rucker, Ala.—A Clanton, Ala., officer can claim to be a rare on of two "sister" infantry divisions r a series of assignments that have placed him with both the 31st and the 47th Divisions.

. . James M. Smith began his rmy career in 1951 with the 31st "Dixie" Division, a Mississippi-Alabama National Guard unit. After uty in Korea, he was reassigned o the 47th "Viking" Division, a Minnesota-North Dakota Guard utfit stationed at Rucker. The wo organizations were alerted on ame presidenial proclamation in ec., 1950, and have been known as ter" divisions since.

After being called into federal vice with the 31st on the 16th of Jan. 1951, he journeyed to Ft. n, S. C., where he was put command of the Opelika congent, Company A of the 200th Inf Regt. The job was to train filler personnel for overseas shipment. He remained in this capacity until the middle of May when he recevied notice ordering him to the Far Eastern Command.

Arriving in Korea July 3rd, he was finally assigned to the 17th "Buffalo" Regt., of the 7th Division "I received the shock of my life," he said, "when I was called upon to lead a probing attack into enemy territory on my first night in the company."

"The reason my turn came so fast," he contiued, "was because of the shortage of officers in the unit."

His luck ran out after spending a month on the frontline. While fighting for hill 820 in the area around Hw'achon, he was wounded by grenate and small arms fire.

Lt. Smith was evacuated to a hospital near Puson on the southern tip of the peninsula. He remained here for approximately two months.

He rejoined his unit just before they were pulled off the line and sent to Kaesong to act a honor guard for the peace talks. This duty was short-lived, for soon after the division was transferred to the "Heartbreak Ridge," "Punch Bowl" area.

He escaped further injury during the rest of his tour in Korea, which came to an end on the 4th of April.

Arriving in San Francisco on the 29th of April, he was given a 30 day leave, which he spent with his wife, Lucinda, and their three children.

After the visit at home, he faced the dismal prospect of being reassigned with the 47th northern guard unit. Things weren't as bad as he had anticipated.

The southerners are slowly turning the tables. A large part of the men who make up the original guard unit from the two northern states have been discharged or sent overseas. Their replacements have been returnees from the Korean theater, most of whom live in Alabama or the surrounding states.

Engagement in the Civil War took place June 1, 1861, at Fairfax Court House Virginia. Fifty men of Company B. 2nd U. S. Calvary, under Lt. Charles H. Tompkins, were sent out to reconnoitre. They discovered a force much larger than their own and retreated. By going further than his orders specified, he frustrated a much larger movement which had been planned. One Union soldier was killed and four injured, while the Confederates suffered one killed and fourteen wounded.

More Vetch Needed To Improve Soil

There is a need for more vetch to improve the soil in Chilton County. Certain varieties of vetches are the most dependable of all winter legumes. More farmers can succeed with vetch than with any other winter legume.

Growers are urged to use hairy, smooth, or Williamette varieties and to plant from September 15th to October 15th.

Fertilize each acre of vetch with either (1) 400 pounds of 0-14-14 or (2) 40 to 50 pounds of muriate of potash plus either 200 to 300 pounds of superphosphate or 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag per acre.

If soil is high in potash, use only superphosphate or basic slag. If it is acid and has not been limed recently, use lime at the rate of one ton per acre on sandy soil and two tons per acre on clay soils.

Do a good job of inoculating seed. Double inoculate the seed with a commercial inoculant and protect inoculated seed from the sun.

Driss or broadcast 20 to 25 pounds of hairy or smooth vetch per care and 30 pounds or more per acre of other varieties.

Vetch can be planted in cotton or corn middles with a one, two, or three-row drill or broadcast and covered with a plow or disk.

Farmers were cautioned not to mix inoculated seed with superphosphate or mixed fertilizers. Inoculated seed can be mixed with basic slag without damage to the inoculation.

Remember a good growth of vetch turned ahead of corn grown according to recommendations will increase the yield of the corn about 40 bushels per acre.

The first act that marked the inauguration of the Civil War of 1861-1865 was the firing upon the "Star of the West," a staunch merchant steam vessel chartered by the government to convey supplies and men to Sumter, on January 5, 1861 The vessel withdrew without returning the fire, and there were no casualties.

Profits Shown In Cover Crops

A blanket of cover crops on every farm. That should be the goal of every Chilton County farmer this winter.

Records of a group of farms in Alabama show that increasing the per cent of open land planted to winter cover raises crop yields, livestock production, and cash income.

Farmers may not be able to reach this goal in one year. But over a period of five years they can have a complete cover program.

A complete cover program should include winter legumes for soil provement; crimson clover and ryegrass or oats or vetch and oat combination for winter grazing; permanent pastures, and perennials such as sericea, kudzu and alfalfa, and small grain.

OIL SPOKESMAN PRAISES "CLIMBING LANE" PLAN

James J. Britton, executive secretary of the Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee, today commended the State Highway Department's planned "climbing lanes" to keep slower moving vehicles from retarding the flow of traffic on steep hills.

Highway Director W. Guerry Pruett recently announced the department's plan to add an extra lane for traffic going up each side of a steep hill. The extra lane would be used by slofer moving vehicles in order that they may avoid getting in the way of faster moving traffic.

"This plan shows how officials can use ingenuity to give the public better facilities at low cost," Britton said, "Our Highway Department deserves congratulations for coming up with this plan and public support in developing it."

He added: "Ideas like this will speed our highway progress, promote safety and, at the same time, make our highway tax dollars go much further. We are fortunate to have a Highway Department with the imagination and enterprise to devise this plan for smoot[illegible] the flow of traffic on our [illegible] ways."

Singing Sweetheart Of Kiwanians

The singing sweetheart of Alabama Kiwanians is how most people tag 18-year-old Patricia Huddleston who has her sights on opera.

Miss Huddleston who enters the University of Alabama this fall has been singing ever since she was in pigtails. She began taking formal lessons at the age of 15.

Her teacher is Mrs. Raymond P. Mims who sees to it that Patricia puts in at least two hours a day on her voice.

When an API music professor heard her for the first time, he said of her voice, "either you have God given talent or exceptional training."

PATRICIA HUDDLESTON

Many critics who have heard her sing at civic clubs all over the state and at various recitals say she has more than an even chance to hit the top.

Patricia's biggest thrill to date came when she sang at the International Kiwanis convention in St. Louis in 1951. This year she was unable to accept a bid to the Seattle convention.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Huddleston, Patricia's severest critic is her twin sister, Annette who will enter the University this fall.

All through high school, this singing lady was Glee Club soloist. Recently she sang the lead "Josephine" in a local Clanton production of H. M. S. Pinafore.

Clover-Grass Makes Permanent Pastures In Chilton County

Although tremendous progress has been made in Chilton [illegible] during the past 5 years [illegible] lishing clover-grass perma[illegible] tures, County Agent M[illegible] cock this week said there [illegible] about 30,000 acres in the co[illegible] need to be put to this use.

He said that fall is the best time to seed clover-grass permanent pas[illegible] [illegible] es seeded in [illegible] much more grazing the following spring and sum[illegible] than do spring-seeded pastures.

Mr. Glasscock gave these pointers on establishing a successful clover permanent pasture:

1. Locate the pasture on fertile, moist bott[illegible] or on fertile [illegible] that hold moisture. Never plant on depleted and eroded [illegible] sandy soils, or on land that does not make fair to good yields of row crops.

2. Seed all plants in the clover-grass permanent pasture mixture in September or early October, except Dallis grass and annual lespedeza. These two should be sown in February or early March. Dallis grass may be seeded in the Gulf Coast area in the fall.

3. Before seeding prepare a good seedbed by breaking land six to eight weeks before time to plant [illegible] of see[illegible] soils a[illegible] vy s[illegible] ty agent [illegible] of the [illegible] ed [illegible] as a [illegible] [illegible] eeding

Cover Crops Urged By Chilton County PMA Committee

The full use of adapted cover-crops will provide farmers with much needed winter grazing for livestock and at the same time will conserve and improve the soils so that higher yields may be obtained from succeeding crops in the rotation where a satisfactory growth of the cover crop is turned under.

With a short crop of hay and grain in the county, farmers will have to rely upon winter grazing to provide a large portion of the feed needed to winter the livestock on the farm.

The Production and Marketing Administration Committee [illegible] the provision of the Agricultural Conservation Program, will provide assistance to farmers to help them carry out conservation practices on their farms—these practices include establishing winter cover crops which are needed on the farm.

The amount of assistance which will be granted is approximately 60 per cent of the cost of the seed.

Assistance for practices must be requested of the county committee by the farmer before he begins the practice.

Crops which the County Committee urges farmers to plant for winter cover and grazing: Crimson Clover, Fescue, Vetches, Ryegrass, Caley Peas, Austrian Winter Peas and oats for grazing.

Cotton Fields Can Be Made To Pay In Winter Too

Chilton County cotton growers can make their cotton fields work for them the year around by using winter legumes in the rotation. Many farmers now follow this program—and find it pays well.

These farmers have discovered that cotton does not ruin land. If legumes are used in rotation with cotton, winter legumes and corn is one of the most practical rotations for most farmers. In this rotation, cotton gets a complete fertilizer; the winter legume planted in cotton middles is fertilized with phosphate and potash, and corn follows the legume and gets no fertilizer.

The API Experiment Station found that over an 18-year period on five experiment fields and three substations located in different parts of the state, this rotation averaged each year 345 pounds of seed cotton and 21.69 bushels of corn per acre more than a rotation of cotton, no legumes, and corn.

Except in the lupine area, it is not generally recommended that cotton follow winter legumes. However, good yields can be made where cotton is planted after legumes, provided legumes make enough growth for turning early so that cotton can be planted on time.

It takes good land to make high yields. Proper use of winter legumes in the rotation will make land better. The legumes give protection to the soil during the winter and early spring season. They add considerable nitrogen and organic [illegible]r. This results in higher [illegible]ds of cotton and other crops.

HOGS NEED GREEN GRAZING

[illegible] grazing is a necessary part of the feed ration for all hogs. Green [illegible] es healthier and [illegible] t of corn and [illegible] needed for eco[illegible] [illegible] farmers thought [illegible] to fatten hogs was to [illegible] n a floored pen and [illegible] corn to them. WINTER GRAZING

. . That's exactly right. Your cattle, hogs, and chickens will never have anything to complain about as long as your fields are green in winter.

And what's more, those grazing crops will put more dollars in your pockets . . . because more grass and legumes mean more meat, milk, and eggs for you to sell.

New Church Building Started

On Saturday morning, August 23 1952, the members of the Liberty Hill Baptist Church met to break the ground for the new building which will be erected there. The Liberty Hill Baptist Church has had a long and colorful history. It has been the guiding light of the community for nearly a century.

The church was first organized in 1855 and the building was located near the present site of the Mt. Carmel Church. In 1875 the church was moved to a new location which was between the old and the new Maplesville Highways about three miles west of Baker School. The old cemetery is still there.

The church was moved to its present location in 1895. The building which faced south, was completed in 1896. In 1811 the building was enlarged and turned to face the east. Two wings, which provided four classrooms for the Sunday School, were added in 1940.

Recently the members realized that the present building is not adequate for their needs. In October 1950, under the leadership of the pastor, Fred L. Lowery, a building fund was started. On Mother's Day 1951, a plan to add to the fund weekly was adopted. A finance committee and a building committee were appointed. Members of the Finance Committee are: Homer Smith chairman; J. A. Daniel, Marvin Lowery, Cecil Powell and Lige Turner. The building committee is composed of: J. M. Moore, chairman; Jimmie Blackwell, Arthur Watson Luther Scott, J. W. Johnson and Earl Lowery.

The new building will be brick veneer and will cost approximately $40,000. The educational building will have twelve Sunday School rooms and a pastor's study. The auditorium will be seventy-four feet by thirty-seven feet and will seat three hundred people. The work is under the direction of Mr. J. M Moore.

For the coming campaign Francis Speaks was named Chairman of the Committee with J. B. Atkinson to serve as treasurer and Kermit Coburn of Maplesville to serve as co-chairman.

Announcement was made Tuesday that a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee with the candidates would be held at the campaign headquarters Friday night at 7 o'clock. Important business to be transacted and all members urged to attend.
